It is becoming increasingly plain each day that the President is to have a bitter fight with the Senate over his rate bill. The mejority of that body ie not only hostile to any such legislation, but is full of secret enemies of the President. It is well understood that some of those who are most emphatic in their avowal of loyalty to him would find great joy in thwarting him. Senator Foraker has not raised the standard of revolt without a clear understanding that he will find strong allies in his fight.

In these conditions Mr. Roosevelt must rely much on the loyal support of the House leaders. He would be in grave danger of losing that support should he raise the tariff issue.

Many leading Republicans in the House grow irritable at the mere mention of "tariff tinkering," and the men who rule the majority are unalterably hostile to it. ex-Speaker Cannon would surely revolt against any proposition for revision. Last Winter when Mr. Roosevelt scared the "stand patters" by listening to the arguments of the revisionists, Mr. Cannon let it be understood that he would not consent to any tariff legislation. He went to the President, however, and offered the support of the House for the Esch-Townsend bill, and kept his pledge, with the result that all talk of revision was silenced for the session.

Undoubtedly the ex-Speaker would be as willing this season to give loyal support on the rate question on the assurance that he will not be bothered by the tariff bugaboo.

BOSTON ASKS FOR REVISION.

Associated Board of Trade Unanimously Adopts the Resolution.

BOSTON, Oct. 9.—At the annual meeting here to-day of the Boston Associated Board of Trade, composed of twenty-three constituent bodies, a stand was taken in favor of tariff revision.

A resolution was adopted unanimously asking that Congress at its coming session consider the question of reducing rates of duty on certain articles and putting coal, iron, lumber, and hides on the free list.

SHOT GUARD, GOT $15,000.

Highwayman Successfully Held Up Stage Near Redding, Cal.

Special to The New York Times.

REDDING, Cal., Oct. 9.—A masked highwayman robbed the stage that runs from Redding to Delmar to-day, fatally shot Dan Haskell, a Wells-Fargo messenger, and with the help of a confederate got away with $15,000 in gold, which was to pay off the men employed at the Bully Hill copper mine.

The stage hed reached a turn in the road near the Pitt River Bridge when the masked man appeared and with rifle levcled on the shotgun messenger ordered the driver to throw out the treasure box. As he spoke Haskell threw up his shotgun, which he carried between his legs, end opened fire.

Whether his shots took effect is unknown, but the robber fired with deadly aim, one bullet entering Haskell's abdomen and two penetrating his chest. A second robber then appeared, and while the first bandit covered the driver, the confederate lifted out the chest, broke it open, and then the men escaped.

GAYNOR AND GREENE IN JAIL.

Arrangement Made for Their Comfort at Savannah—Gaynor Talks.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 9.—John F. Gaynor and B. D. Greene, the men who fought extradition to the United States from Canada for so many years, arrived here at 6 o'clock this morning. Their wives, who had preceded them to Savannah, met them at the station, and visited them for an hour in prison later. Arrangements have heen made to eupply the men with meals from a hotel.

Messrs. Gayrard and Meldrim have been engaged to represent the defendants. The latter spent some time with his clients to-day.

John F. Gaynor, interviewed aboard the train, said: "I am glad that we are going back to Georgia. I know now what a mistake we made in leaving. But we cannot always tell what is for the best, and if we had known then what we know now, we never would have gone. We feel justified in every act we committed in Savannah while performing our contracts with the Government. They got value received."

CUT OFF HER RELATIVES.

Mary Irene Hoyt Left Nearly $1,000,000 to Her Friend, Marie Garlic.

The will of Mary Irene Hoyt, daughter of the late Jesse Hoyt, was filed for probate in the Surrogate's office yesterday. It was made on Feb. 24, 1902, and names her attorney, Civil Justice Moore, as executor. The value of her estate was not set out in the petition, but it is believed to be more than $1,000,000. Miss Hoyt made an unsuccessful attempt to upset the will of her father, because he gave her only $1,500,000 of his fortune of $10,000,000. He died in 1882, and the contest occupied the attention of the courts for many years.

In her will just filed Miss Hoyt bequeathed $7,500 to Ralph Saier of Demorest, N. J., "in recognition of faithful service and help to me for many years past." The residuary estate is bequeathed to her friend Marie Garlic. The will contains this clause:

"In making the foregoing disposition of my estate I state that I have not overlooked the fact that I have relatives living, but I do not desire that any of them shall participate in my estate."

ROOSEVELT CAMPAIGN FOR FOOTBALL REFORM

He Summons University Advisers and Asks Them to Agitate.

MAKERS OF RULES PRESENT

They Are Told That Brutality Should Be Eliminated and Fair Play Be Assured.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Having ended the war in the Far East, grappled with the railroad rate question and made his position clear, prepared for his tour of the South, and settled the attitude of the administration toward Senator Foraker. President Roosevelt to-day took up another question of vital interest to the American people. He started a campaign for reform in football.

Around his table at luncheon were gathered the men who rule the game, Dr. D. H. Nichols and W. T. Reid of Harvard, Arthur T. Hillebrand and John B. Fine of Princeton, and Walter Camp and John Oweley of Yale. They are athletic advisers of their universities, and John B. Fine and Walter Camp are members of the Rules Committee of the Intercollegiate Football Association.

The President has some personal interest in the game aside from his general interest in athletics, for his son has entered the freshman squad at Harvard and has already had cause to know how rough the eport may be, having received a black eye and other bruises in scrimmages.

Mr. Roosevelt, in beginning his talk to his guests, told them that he liked the game, hut he felt that something should be done to reform the rules, especially in the interest of fair play and the discouregement of rough play, and esked them to undertake to start a movement to that end.

Public sentiment is yearly growing stronger against the brutality of the game, he declarcd, and the death of a man in order to win a game will result sooner or later in universal condemnation of it as a part of college athletics.

The President's sentiments and counsel were responded to with hearty approval, his guests thanking him for his initiative in the matter and promising their support to his ideas.

The President was especially glad to see his old friend Camp, who graduated from Yale in 1880, which was the President's year at Harvard. The two became acquainted in the athletic contests between the universities then, and have kept up the friendship ever since.

This is not the first time that Mr. Roosevelt has taken a hand in intercollegiate athletics. When he was Police Commissioner of New York, in 1896, he patched up a truce between Yale and Harvard, and brought about an agreement that has held good ever since.

Not a little significance is given to the incident to-day at the White House because of the persistent rumors that after leaving the White House Mr. Roosevelt will become President of Harvard.

PENALTY FOR YALE FRESHMEN

Faculty May Stop Class Athletics as Result of Rowdyism.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 9.—As the result of the rowdyism of Yale freshmen last night in and about Pierson Hell, the class probably will be deprived of participation in athletics, the most severe penalty that could be imposed upon the class as a whole. The Yale Faculty has the matter under consideration. There is a chance that the football team may be allowed to play out its schedule.

The Police Department and President Hadley are co-operating, and several names have been found of those alleged to have been leaders. Balls of fire were thrown on the heads of passers by, revolvers were fired, women insulted, and tubs of water were poured from windows. All available police in four precincts were called to stop the rowdyism, but no one was arrested.

DOESN'T WANT ROOSEVELT.

Senator Money Glad Mississippi Is Left Out—Gov. Glenn's Plans.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 9.—"I am glad that the President is not going to stop in Memphis or Mississippi, either," declared United States Senator Hernando De Soto Money of Mississippi when told that the invitations had been refused.

"I don't know whether any town in my State has asked him to visit it, but if it has, I am sorry, and I hope he will have the good sense to decline. Any man who maligns the people of the South as he has done ought not to expect a very cordial reception.

"Speaking as President Roosevelt does in his book of such people as Jackson, Benton, and other statesmen of Tennessee, I don't understand why Tennessee should be eo anxious to have him tarry. I had hoped that some of the President's Southern blood would assert itself, but I am afraid it is too late."

Despite the announcement from Secretary Loeb that the President will not visit Memphis or any other point reached on his last trip South, all the commercial organizations are preparing to entertain him during the few minutes that his train is switched from one railroad system to another. Sentiment regarding his entertainment is much divided.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Gov. Glenn of North Carolina discussed with the President to-day the speech which the President is to deliver at Raleigh on his approaching trip. This will be one of the important utterances of the journey. Gov. Glenn will accompany the President through North Carolina.

Football Player's Hurts Fatal.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 9.—Howard C. Montgomery of Montgomery, West Va., a student at Hampden-Sidney College, who was injured in a football practice game at the college last week, died to-day.

YOU MUST REGISTER TO VOTE.
To-day will be the second day of registration. The polls will be open from 7 A. M. to 10 P. M. You can find the list of registration places in The Times to-day.

FIVE TO ONE ON McCLELLAN.

Betting on the Mayoralty Begins in Wall Street.

Big odds were offered on McClellan in Wall Street yesterday when it became known that Charles E. Hughes had refused the Mayoralty nomination. So far few bets have been made, because few have been found willing to risk their money on the yet unknown Republican candidate. George Briggs Buchenan made a small bet with another member of the Stock Exchange at odds of 3 to 1 on McClellan. The unnamed member of the Exchange took the McClellan end, Mr. Buchanan betting on "the other man, whoever he might be." In the afternoon J. J. Judge offered to bet $5,000 to $1,000 that McClellan would win against any man put up by the Republicans. No money wes offered on the other side.

HANGING NOT DEATH FOR HIM.

Prisoner's Neck Ossified, His Lawyer Warns the Court.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—When Robert Gerdiner, charged with the murder of Agnes Morrison, was arraigned to-day his attorney declared:

"This is a case where it won't do you any good to ask for the death penalty. They can't break this man's neck if they dr try to hang him."

The prisoner is suffering from ossification of the vertebrae and tissues of the neck. According to Prof. Steffenson of Rush Medical College only five similar cases have come to medical notice. Gardiner carries his head tiltcd forward end slightly twisted, unable to move or incline it except with great effort.

2,000 STUDENTS FIGHT FIRE.

Work Suspended at California University by President Wheeler.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 9.—President Wheeler to-day suspended all work at the University of California, organized a fire-fighting brigade of over 2,000 students, and led an attack on a bush end grase fire which for several hours threatened to destroy several university buildings.

The flames came rushing down several cañons at the back of the university grounds, and the President at once marched the studente in company formation to the scene, each being provided with wet sacks. Mr. Wheeler stationed himself near the dairy barn and directed operations.

The fire was eo fierce that many students were overpowered and had to be carried off the field. The Berkeley Fire Brigade came to the rescue and the flames were stopped.

FEAR BIG TRAFFIC BLOCKADE.

Railroads Lack Cars to Move Grain in the West.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—With commerce going at a record rate, care for traffic are so scerce that a shortage in them is feared by the railroads. They are placing heavy orders for equipment, with quick delivery clauses.

It is said that the lines centring here and extending east could use between 2,000 end 3,000 grain cars in excess of the present supply. One road alone admits being short nearly 1,000 cars. Between 8,000,000 end 9,000,000 bushels of grain in this city cennot be moved, and the elevator capecity may he overtaxed.

CROWE CHEERED AT OMAHA.

Kidnapper Threatens to Havo Pinkerton Killed by Companion.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Oct. 9.—"Pat" Crowe received en enthusiastic welcome on his arrival this evening from Butte. A large crowd had assembled at the stetion, and loud cheers for the kidnapper were raised as he stepped from the car shackled to two Omaha detectives.

"If that man Pinkerton raps at me again during the trial in Omaha," said Crowe, "I will have him killed so dead he will not even kick. All I have to do is to say the word to a man who is waiting to do the job. He would have done it some time ago, but I would not let him."

RAID ON A FISHING FLEET.

Tug That Invaded Canadian Waters Captured by American Cutter.

Special to The New York Times.

ERIE, Penn., Oct. 9.—On the revenue cutter Morrill, Collector of Customs Charles Leach of the district to-day raided the fishing fleet of six tugs a few miles beyond the boundary line.

The big Valiant, a speedy boat, was captured. The others got away, but not before their names had been taken. Leach will arrest the officers of these tugs to-morrow and may seize the craft. The Valiant was towed into Conneaut, and will be taken to Cleveland.

Officials at Washington were notified of the seizure and instructions are awaited relative to fishing boats seen fishing in Canadian waters.

FIGHT FIRE IN WHITE GLOVES.

Members of New Rochelle Brigade Have to Delay Dress Parade.

The New Rochelle firemen fought last night the most stubborn fire which has visited the city in years, and then had their annual parade and inspection. At midnight the parade, which should have been over hours before, was still in progress.

The alarm for the fire was turned in at 8 o'clock. At that time some of the fire companies were marching with their machines to the point of assemblage, while those nearer the centre of the city were still in their houses. Every fireman was in full uniform, with white gloves and with buttons polished. The machines were glittering and flower decked.

The fire started in a frame building which was used for the storage of oil and gasoline on Grand Street, near the railroad. Some two hundred gallons went off in the first explosion, and the flames shot high in the air and set fire to surrounding buildings.

Two residences belonging to Charles D. Robinson, the carpenter shop of George J. Stouter, the barn, milk depot, and poultry products storehouse of Eugene Bull were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $20,000. Mayor Clark and the Fire Commissioners were present at the fire and led the parade later.

The West Shore Railroad is the $3.00 line to Buffalo and Niagara Falls. Up the Hudson and through the Mohawk Valley.—Adv.

HUGHES DECLINES TO RUN FOR MAYOR

Says His Duty in the Insurance Inquiry Forbids It.

REFUSAL FROM YOUNG, TOO

Won't Run for Controller, Won't Run for Mayor — Up to Elsberg, Page, or Ford Now.

Charles E. Hughes declined yesterday the Republican nomination for Mayor, and Richard Young refused to run for Controller. These two declinations left the Republican leaders at sea. William Halpin and other members of the Notification Committee declared that they had no idea as to what the next move of the Republicans would be.

It was learned last night thet when the Sub-Committee on Notification waited on Mr. Young to inform him of his nomination for Controller and received his declination, the subject of his accepting a nomination for Mayor was broached to him. Mr. Young told the committee his business interests would not permit him to take part in the campaign in any capacity.

Senators Nathaniel A. Elsberg, Alfred R. Page, and John Ford were spoken of last night as among those most likely to be named to fill the gap at the head of the ticket. Substitutions on the Republican ticket must be filed with the Bureau of Elections before next Wednesday.

The Notification Committee called at the residence of Mr. Hughes, 570 West End Avenue, soon after noon yesterday. Ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, who was the Chairman of the City Convention, acted as the spokesman for the committee, and made the speech notifying the lawyer.

Lawyer Hughes's "No."

In replying to Mr. Woodruff, Mr. Hughes spoke in his usually vigorous manner, his words fairly ringing out at times when he wished to give emphesis to some strong point. Long before he had finished, the countenances of the members of the Notification Committee had become positively doleful. They looked like men who had been bereft of a last hope. Mr. Hughes said:

"You summon me to whet you believe to be a public duty, and I shall not answer that summons by referring to considerations merely personal, however important they might be, if the question were one of personal preference.

"You end the many others who have urged me to accept the nomination have not rested the request upon the basis of partisan obligation, but upon the more secure foundation of duty to the community. It has been impressed upon me that the Republican Party is seeking to raise a standard to which, regardless of party, all men may resort who desire to see our city free from the pervasive influence of an organization whose motive is gain and not service.

"I am not insensible to this appeal, and I fully appreciate the responsibility of the position in which, against my will, I have been placed. The letters which I heve received and the personal appeals which have been made heve shown very clearly that there is a division of sentiment as to the course I should pursue and that either action I might take would be viewed with extreme disfavor by men whose judgment I respect end of whose sincerity there can be no question. In this dilemma I have simply to do my duty as I see it.

"In my judgment, I have no right to accept the nomination. A paramount public duty forbids it.

"It is not necessary to enlarge upon the importance of the insurance investigation. That is undisputed. It is dealing with questions vital to the interests of millions of our fellow-citizens throughout the land. It presents an opportunity for public service second to none and involves a correlative responsibility. I have devoted myself unreservedly to this work. It commands all my energies. It is imperative that I continue in it. You have frankly recognized that it must continue unembarrassed and with unimpaired efficiency. But it is entirely clear to me that this cannot be if I accept the nomination.

"You know how desirous I have been that the investigation should not be colored hy any suggestion of political motive. Whatever confidence it has inspired has been due to absolute independence of political considerations. It is not sufficient to say that an acceptance of this nomination, coming to me unsought and despite an unequivocal statement of my position, would not deflect my course by a hair's breadth, and that I should remain, and that you intend that I should remain, entirely untrammeled. The nonpolitical character of the investigation and its freedom from bias, either of fear or favor, not only must exist; they must be recognized. I cannot permit them, by any action of mine, to become matters of debate.

Inquiry Would Be Discredited.

"There are abundant opportunities for misconstruction. Doubtless many abuses will remain undisclosed, many grievous wrongs to which the evidence may point from time to time will be found unsusceptible of proof, many promising clues will be taken up in vain. Were I, with the best of intentions, to accept the nomination, it is my conviction that the work of the investigation would largely be discredited, its motives would be impugned, and its integrity assailed. To many it would appear that its course would be shaped and its lines of inquiry would be chosen, developed, or abandoned as political ambition might prompt or political exigency demand.

"Such a situation would be intolerable. There is but one course open. The legislative inquiry must proceed with convincing disinterestedness. Its great opportunities must not be imperiled by alienating the support to which it is entitled, or by giving the slightest occasion for questioning the sincerity and single-mindedness with which it is conducted.

"There is, however, another consideration which is to me conclusive. The work of the investigation is laborious and exacting. It taxes the strength of the counsel of the committee to its limit. It is performed under great strain. Whatever success is gained is the result of unremitting toil and undivided attention. There is no wizardry in it.

"It is idle to suppose that if I accepted your nomination I could continue my part of the work of the investigation efficiently. I may be pardoned for saying that I am a better judge of what that work requires than any one apart from my associates. It requires every moment of available time. It requires endeavor secure from interruption and a mind free from distraction. It has been suggested that it would not be necessary for me to make an active canvass, that I should not be obliged to make a speech, to attend a meeting, or even to write a letter.

Invited to Run with Hands Tied.

"In effect you ask me to enter upon a campaign in which important questions should be discussed and brought home to the conscience of the people, with my mouth shut and my hands tied. Apart from a natural disinclination to place myself in such a situation, I believe the plan to be wholly impracticable. But, assuming it to be carried out as fully as is contemplated, it would still leave a large demand upon time and nervous energy which would be inexorable and would introduce an element of distraction most injurious to the investigation. I do not believe that the man lives, and certainly I am not the man, who, while a candidate for the Mayoralty, could perform with efficiency that part of the work which has been devolved upon me in the pending inquiry. If I were to accept the nomination for the high office of Mayor of this city, I should be obliged to curtail this work, and this I have no right to do.

"For your expression of confidence I thank you. The honor you would confer upon me I most highly esteem. Your generous approval, and the unanimity and enthusiasm with which the nomination was made, I warmly appreciate. But I have assumed obligations of the first importance, which make it impossible for me to meet your wishes. I must therefore respectfully decline the nomination."

For a minute after Mr. Hughes had concluded there was a painful silence, finally broken by Mr. Woodruff turning to his colleagues and remarking:

"Well, I guess that settles it."

There was no dissent to that opinion. Mr. Woodruff shook hands with Mr. Hughes, and other members of the committee followed his example. Although they must have had a painful realization of the embarrassing situation in which Mr. Hughes's refusal left the Republican organization, they did not seem to cherish the least resentment toward him. In fact, one or two of them told Mr. Hughes they did not see how he could have acted otherwise than he did.

In notifying Mr. Hughes of his nomination, Mr. Woodruff said:

"Mr. Hughes: On behalf of the Notification Committee, of which I have the honor to be the Chairman, it gives me great pleasure to inform you that the Republican City Convention, which was held last Friday evening, with unanimity and unparalleled enthusiasm, nominated you as the candidate of the Republican Party for the office of Mayor of this city.

"This was the action taken by that convention because you, for reasons which you, and we, and all the people of New York fully understand, are the man of the hour. The delegates to the convention and the constituents whom they represented were so convinced of this that no other name was presented to the convention, and no other man was in their mind.

"It was because no one else, under the peculiar circumstances which exist, could satisfy the desires of the delegates and the demands of the constituencies of the sixty-two Assembly districts of the greater City of New York, that the unusual course was pursued of nominating you for Mayor without first having obtained your consent.

"No one in that convention was unmindful of the great obligation you are under to prosecute to the fullest extent of your ability and your power the insurance investigation which you are now in the very midst of conducting, and Senator Elsberg, in the formal presentation of your name to the convention, evoked the greatest enthusiasm of the evening, when he said that you would not be called upon to make a single speech in the campaign, as every question you were asking was a campaign speech in itself.

"May I call your attention to the fact that Election Day is only four weeks from to-morrow; the campaign will practically end three weeks from this coming Saturday night. I am informed that there will probably be no session of the committee during the week immediately preceding election, a recess during the week preceding elections having always been taken by investigating committees of a similar character.

"May I also call your attention to the fact that two months will elapse between the election and the time, if elected, you will be called upon to assume the duties of Mayor—a time sufficient, in all probability, to complete the work of the investigating committee.

"While I and the other members of this committee and the delegates to the convention, would not ask you to do anything which would impair your usefulness in carrying on, to their full completion, the investigations now in progress, we do ask you to take this nomination and lead the fight against the corruption of Tammany Hall in the interests of both Republicans and independent Democrats who want to see the affairs of this city in which we live, and to whose interests we are all devoted, administered in an honest, clean, and efficient manner. If you will lead the fight, we are reasonably well assured that Mr. Richard Young of Brooklyn will consent to be a candidate for Controller and Mr. James L. Wells of the Borough of the Bronx for President of the Board of Aldermen. With such a city ticket, such a county and borough ticket as we nominated in Brooklyn on Saturday and such a county and borough ticket as I understand the Republicans of New York County intend to present to the voters, there is great promise of success in a campaign which means so much to the people of this community."

When Mr. Woodruff said that no other man but Mr. Hughes was in the minds of the delegates to the convention, one of the members of the committee whispered to the reporters:

"Considering the fact that not ten persons in the hall knew who the nominee was to be ten minutes before the nomination was made, I consider that remark of 'Tim's' a perfectly delicious piece of humor."

When the committee left Mr. Hughes's residence they broke up, the duty of waiting on Richard Young to notify him of his nomination for Controller having been delegated to William Halpin and Senator Alfred R. Page. Mr. Young was found by the sub-committee at his office, 36 Spruce Street. In declining the nomination he said:

"I appreciate very highly the honor conferred upon me by the Republican Party of this great city in nominating me for the office of Controller. I also appreciate the expression of esteem and confidence of my friends and fellow-citizens in me, as indicated by the numerous letters I have received, and I regret very much that I cannot see my way clear to accept the nomination."

Talk of Elsberg, Page, and Ford.

Senator Elsberg, as the representative in the Legislature of the wealthiest district in the city, was much talked about last evening as the man to head the ticket. Having nominated Mr. Hughes when it was known that Mr. Hughes was disinclined to take the nomination, Senator Elsberg, it was urged, could hardly afford to decline if his party associates pressed him to accept.

Senator Page was also discussed as a likely candidate. Senator Page introduced in the Legislature the resolution for the gas investigation, and served as a member of the Stevens Committee. He better represents the gas issue, therefore, than any man who could be named, now that Mr. Hughes, who acted as counsel for the gas committee, as well as the insurance committee, is out of it.

From friends of Senators Elsberg and Page it was learned that neither of them is disposed to accept the nomination. If it should be offered to them the arguments used would have to be weighty to induce them to change the opinion they have already formed.

There was also a renewal of the John Ford boom. It was pointed out that if the Republicans nominated Ford, Mr. Halpin could repeat the statement that he made about the nomination of Mr. Hughes, with a change in names. "We were for Mr. Ford from the beginning," and there would be no one to gainsay him, for Mr. Ford's name was the only name which the Republicans presented to the Fusion Conference.

If Mr. Ford were nominated, it was said, his nomination would clear up the municipal ownership as well as the Republican situation. Mr. Hearst, at the meeting of the Municipal Ownership forces at Grand Central Palace, declared that either Judge Seabury or Mr. Ford would make a good Mayoralty candidate. Therefore, it was argued, the nomination of Ford would insure to the Republicans the indorsement of their ticket by the Municipal Ownership Party. It can be said positively that Mr. Ford would make the race if he could secure both the Republican and the Municipal Ownership nominations. The only trouble with Mr. Ford is that he is considered a radical by the Union League element of the Republican organization. It was that element that succeeded in getting the Republicans to modify their views on municipal ownership. One of the reasons why the Republican leaders dropped Mr. Ford from consideration after the Fusion disruption was the belief that no money could be raised for the Republican campaign with his name heading the ticket.

MAYOR'S HEADQUARTERS OPEN

John H. O'Brien Resigns as Secretary to be His Campaign Manager.

Campaign headquarters for Mayor McClellan were opened at the Hotel Bartholdi yesterday, with John H. O'Brien, the Mayor's former secretary, in charge as manager. Prior to opening the headquarters Mr. O'Brien resigned as secretary. The Mayor and Mr. O'Brien felt that he should not continue on the city pay roll while managing the Mayor's political interests. Thomas Hassett, Assistant secretary to the Mayor, will perform Mr. O'Brien's duties temporarily, and after election Mr. O'Brien will be reappointed secretary.

The quarters are the same the Mayor occupied two years ago, including seven rooms on the second floor of the hotel. Mayor McClellan will not be at his headquarters until Saturday or Monday, and even then he will be there only late in the afternoons and on the evenings when he is not speaking. The Mayor intends to devote his days to the City Hall, especially while the important work of preparing the 1906 budget is under way. His first speech of the campaign will be made in Tammany Hall next week at the general ratification meeting. Afterward he will deliver about six speeches in Manhattan and the Bronx and four in Brooklyn.

"It is hardly worth while going to the trouble and expense of a real campaign," said Mr. O'Brien last night. "Things are coming our way strong enough without it."

For more than an hour yesterday Mayor McClellan was closeted with Patrick F. McGowan, who is running for President of the Board of Aldermen. He also had a long talk with Congressman "Big Tim" Sullivan and Alderman "Little Tim" Sullivan.

On his way home from the City Hall in the afternoon the Mayor registered.

GIVING ODDS ON CASSIDY.

Republican Bets Bermel Won't Be Elected President of Queens.

Democrats of the Borough of Queens opened campaign headquarters in the Democratic clubhouse in Davis Street, Long Island City, yesterday, with Sewer Commissioner Mathew J. Goldner in command. A vigorous campaign against Joseph Bermel for Borough President was started last night. The Republicans recently refused to put him up against Cassidy, whom he deserted. Many Republicans sent notes to the Democratic clubhouse to say that they would not support Bermel because he had deserted the Democratic ranks.

Former Sheriff William C. Baker, who is a Republican, offers to bet $1,000 to $600 that Borough President Cassidy will be re-elected.

Citizens' Union Borough and County Conventions were to have been held in Long Island City Monday evening, Oct. 2. They were not held, however, and both Cassidy and Bermel are anxious to know which candidate the Citizens' Union intends to support.

HAFFEN IS RENOMINATED.

Named for President of the Bronx for Fourth Time.

Louis F. Haffen was nominated for President of the Borough of the Bronx by the Democrats last night for the fourth time. Haffen was first elected in 1897. He was re-elected in 1901 and 1903.

The convention was held at the Jefferson Tammany Club, 155th Street and Courtlandt Avenue. It is the regular organization headquarters of the Thirty-fifth Assembly District.

Ex-Assemblyman Arthur C. Butts presided. Everything went smoothly and not a word of protest was heard, despite the reports that the delegates from the northern half of the Thirty-fourth District would try and make a little trouble.

The nominations for Coroner went to Jerome F. Healy, for years Secretary and Treasurer of Typographical Union No. 6, and Wallace L. Fraser, a lawyer. Healy lives in the Thirty-fourth and Fraser in the Thirty-fifth District.

In accepting the nomination, President Haffen said, among other things:

"If I shall be re-elected I want it to be understood that I will not be the agent or representative of any political faction or party. I shall be the servant of all the people and taxpayers, irrespective of their political affiliations."

WE MAY PATROL DOMINGO.

Use of Marines on Frontier to Stop Smuggling Proposed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The old trouble over the boundary between Santo Domingo and Haiti, where from time immemorial there has been a systematic business of smuggling, will have to be dealt with this Winter if the conduct of the customs collections of Santo Domingo by the United States is to be successful.

In June and July the strictness with which the customs were collected along the border resulted in a revolt which was put down with a few marines. It is now believed that it will be necessary to send a sufficient force to patrol the whole boundary.

The President does not like to send military forces to the island, but the report of H. F. Worley, agent of the Insular Bureau in the War Department, sent to investigate the smuggling, seems to leave no alternative. Mr. Worley says he was warned that if he carried out his instructions to establish custom houses along the frontier, he was liable to be assassinated. He has opened some collection posts and is to establish more.

He estimates that smuggling has cost the Domingan Government from $350,000 to $400,000 a year. The method has been to land goods in Haiti, send them by coasting vessels near to the Domingan line, and carry them over the border by mule trains. The tariff, Mr. Worley estimates, is about 73 per cent. ad valorem, offering a great inducement to smugglers.

Mr. Worley made a trip into the interior of Haiti and says that reports were often brought to him of savage customs. Stories of cannibalistic feasts where the victims were babies were sufficiently authentic to be believed.

COOK DEFIED THE CREW.

Revenue Cutter and Police Respond to Schooner's Signal.

Lieut. K. W. Perry of the revenue cutter Manhattan saw signals of distress flying from the mast of the schooner Fannie Tracy, lying off Ellis Island, in the Jersey flats, yesterday. He went over to see what the trouble was. Capt. Hickman told him that he had discharged his negro cook, J. H. Hartman, and that the cook had fortified the galley and armed himself with a butcher's knife and a cleaver.

"Had to do it. His cooking was so bad that the sailors threatened mutiny," explained the Captain. "He's as big as the mainmast and we want the police to come and get him."

Lieut. Perry agreed to stand by until the police could be called and the Captain of the tug Edna agreed to act as messenger. Roundsman Reardon and three men put out in a launch and in a little while had surrounded the mutinous cook. Hartman at first refused to be dislodged, but the sight of four uplifted night sticks, as many more belaying pins in the hands of angry sailors, and a revolver in the hands of the Captain brought him to terms. The Captain paid him his wages and he was taken ashore and turned loose.

AUTO UPSETS SURREY.

Charles A. Singer's Car Injures Mrs. A. G. Walden.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Oct. 9.—A touring car containing Charles A. Singer of Larchmont and his chauffeur, was in collision here this afternoon with a surrey driven by Mrs. A. G. Walden of Riverside, Conn. The car upset Mrs. Walden's vehicle, throwing out Mrs. Walden, Mrs. Stewart Worden of Florida, Mrs. Everett Howe of Syracuse, and Daniel Walden, a nephew of Mrs. Walden.

Mrs. Walden was hurt about the back, but held to the reins, and after a struggle prevented the horse running away.

Fewer Arrests This Year.

Very few arrests were made at the places of registration. This was in marked contrast to last year, when arrests were made by the wholesale.

The majority of those arrested yesterday were young men whose names were identical with those of their fathers who had died, and who were marked as dead on the lists.

Superintendent of Elections George W. Morgan said last night that he was well pleased with the result of the day's work. He attributed the small number of arrests and the absence of confusion to the amended Metropolitan Elections District law, and to the successful installation of a new card index system.

Morris I. Glusker, a wholesale grocer of 45 Ludlow Street, was arrested by one of Supt. Morgan's Inspectors yesterday while attempting to register in the Sixth Election District of the Eighth Assembly District. The Inspector had Mr. Glusker's name down as having moved from the district.

Mr. Glusker protested in vain. He was locked up in the Eldridge Street Station, but when the report was sent to the Bureau of Elections it was found that the arrest was a mistake. The officials at the bureau said they were very sorry, but late last night Mr. Glusker was still in the station house in default of bail.

BAD STORM ON THE GULF.

Fears That Shipping Has Suffered—Damage on Shore.

Special to The New York Times.

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 9.—A terrific southeast gale that started yesterday afternoon on the Gulf of Mexico is still raging, and it is feared shipping has suffered greatly. Several steamers that went out in the teeth of the gale could not drop their pilots.

Meagre reports of damage along the Mississippi coast are coming in. Many trees and smokestacks were blown down here.

MOB-HUNTED NEGRO CAUGHT.

Texas Militia Guards Monk Gibson, Accused of Murder.

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 9.—Monk Gibson, the negro accused of complicity in the murder of the Conditt family at Edna, has been captured and safely lodged in the Edna jail. The troops sent by the Governor are still quartered at that place and will protect him.

The negro was discovered asleep on a plantation by Walter Warren, colored. Warren notified the Sheriff, who, with the militia, took the man to prison.

Lost $4 and Killed Himself.

CRANFORD, N. J., Oct. 9.—Because he had lost a pocketbook containing $4, Joseph Kinney, 30 years old, committed suicide last night. He walked into the store of his cousin, Herman Lansurdy, and picked up a revolver. Lansurdy tried to get the revolver, and the men struggled all over the store. Finally Kinney broke away, ran to the subway under the New Jersey Central tracks, and, putting the revolver to his head, fired two shots. Death was instantaneous.

The most work, most efficiently done, at the least expense, in the shortest time, is the imperative demand of modern business.
Our suggestions have broadened the prospects of many a New York department head.

*Renominated.

Of those who have been renominated, Mr. Prentice of the Twenty-fifth is Secretary of the Insurance Investigating Committee. He has served two terms. Mr. Young of the Twenty-first has served one term, and was commended by the Citizens' Union as being one of the few New York County members who were devoted to the interests of the city. Mr. Stanley of the Nineteenth has servd one term. He is the author of the anti-graft bill.

Mr. Agnew of the Twenty-seventh is the dean of the New York County Republicans in the Assembly. Mr. Beihilf of the Thirty-first has served one term. He put through the bill making mandatory the erection of the elevated station station at 130th Street and Eighth Avenue on the east side of the street. Mr. Hartman of the Sixteenth defeated Samuel Prince last year. Attention was attracted to him by his bills and resolutions aimed at Tammany Hall graft.

Most of the other nominees will lead forlorn hopes, most of the districts, except the Fifth, generally going Democratic. In the Twenty-third Mr. Francis will have a close fight. In the Twenty-ninth Mr. Wells will run for the seat which Frederick E. Perham occupied at the time of his death on March 20. The nomination by the Citizens' Union of William M. Smith makes the election of Mr. Wells uncertain.

In the Thirteenth District Convention Michael H. Blake was elected Chairman after a row. There was such a fight between his followers and the adherents of Herman Joveshof, whom Mr. Blake opposed for the leadership last month, that adjournment was taken without a nomination. The nomination is equivalent to defeat in that district.

IN SENATE COMMITTEE RACE.

Millard Travels with Shonts, Hoping to Land Canal Chairmanship.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Early in the coming session there will be a rearrangement of Senate committees. There will be a fight for the Chairmanship of the Committee on Inter-Oceanic Canals, which Senator Morgan so long headed, with Senator Hanna as ranking member. Morgan resigned when the Panama route was chosen. On Hanna's death Senator Platt of New York, the ranking member, decided to retain Chairmanship of the Printing Committee.

Mitchell, the next member of the Canal Committee, made a vigorous fight. The Senate was against him, and Kittredge was upheld in the acting Chairmanship. Now Millard, who ranks just above Kittredge, is making a fight for the Chairmanship. He is on the Isthmus with President Shonts making a special study.

Kittredge will strive hard to keep the Chairmanship, and will have strong support because of the ability he has displayed in canal legislation. Proctor will retire from Agriculture to become Chairman of Military Affairs, succeeding the late Senator Hawley. The Agriculture Chairmanship probably will go to Dolliver, who although a lawyer owns a big farm and was brought up on one. Warren ranks Dolliver, but has a chance of getting the Public Buildings Chairmanship, and will leave that of the Claims Committee to Kean. Clapp will go to the head of Indian Affairs in place of Stewart.

The death of Senator Hoar will make Clark of Wyoming Chairman of Judiciary. Probably Burnham of New Hampshire will take the place at the head of Cuban Affairs made vacant by the death of Mr. Platt of Connecticut. The place of Burton of Kansas at the head of Forest Reservations doubtless will go to Ankeny of Oregon. The Committee on Census loses its Chairman in Quarles of Wisconsin. This committee, with several others of lesser importance, will be apportioned to newer members.

Parkway Proposed for Seventh Avenue

The Harlem Board of Commerce, at its meeting at 50 East 125th Street last night, decided to appoint a committee to prepare plans for an eight-foot parkway in Seventh Avenue from 110th Street to Central Bridge. C. B. Morris, who proposed the plan, said that the avenue was 120 feet wide, the widest thoroughfare in the borough, and that the parkway would help to regulate traffic and do away with the necessity of the frequent regrading and repaving of the avenue.

May Lock Out Bolognamakers.

A general lockout of the bolognamakers throughout New York has been decided on by the Bologna Manufacturers' Association in case the bolognamakers carry out their project of individual strikes against employers who refuse their demands. Joseph Guth of 127 Cherry Street, President of the association, said last evening that there was no fear of a scarcity of bolognas.

RAMSEY COUNSEL FLEE, WITHDRAWING HIS CASE

lieve the assertion that these persons whose names are on the list furnished have empowered Mr. Ramsey to act for them."

After further delay and wrangwing the court made the following ruling:

"In order to get at the meat of this case, the court rules that Attorney Smith, who is legal representative of the Wabash Road here, may fairly be assumed to represent some stockholders and the court grants him the right to challenge the plaintiffs for proof that they represent, as claimed in this fight, 10 per cent. of the stockholders of the Wabash Road."

Attorney Lewis made a sharp attack on Mr. Gould, saying:

"The charges are that Mr. Gould himself does not own one share of Wabash, and it is more than safe to assume that he would not own one share of it were it not necessary that a certain amount of stock appear in his name in order that he might qualify as an officer. We have asked for the list of stockholders of the road. The court gave an order that this list be brought into court to-day, but this has not been complied with, nor do we believe that it has been the intention of the Gould people at any time to bring this list into court, as ordered."

"We certainly have not so intended," said Attorney Brown.

"That settles that point," broke in the court. "We'll just cross that off. One side accuses the other of a certain thing, and the other admits it. That is disposed of. The defense admits it did not intend to bring the books into court, as ordered."

This ended the forenoon session, and when court reconvened the abrupt end of the case came.

REFUSES TO ENJOIN GOULD.

St. Louis Judge Says Ramsey Did Not Apply Clean-Handed.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 9.—In the St. Louis Circuit Court to-day, Judge Daniel G. Taylor denied the application of Joseph Ramsey, Jr., deposed President of the Wabash Railroad, for an injunction to restrain the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain Roads, or their trustees, from voting their holdings of Wabash stock in the annual Wabash election, to be held in Toledo to-morrow.

The junior member of the firm of Lehmann & Lehmann, counsel for Ramsey, said to-night:

"If the shares of stock held by the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain Railway Companies are illegally held, as the court intimated in the decision, and the voting of these shares determines the result of the election at Toledo, then there is nothing to prevent the State of Missouri or a stockholder in the Wabash Company who objects to the voting of this stock, and who has not himself acquiesced in the holding of the stock in the past, from attacking the validity of the election."

Judge Taylor's decision says:

"It appears from the plaintiff's verified return, the verified returns of such of the defendants as have been served in this case, and the evidence adduced upon the hearing that George Gould is the chief executive officer of all three defendant railroad companies, and that the Board of Directors of all three are composed largely of the same persons, while the principal active officers of the Iron Mountain and Missouri Pacific Companies are practically the same.

"In consideration of this case it must constantly be borne in mind that this is an action in equity between individuals, involving only private rights, and in which the State and the public have no interests whatever beyond the incidental one which they have in seeing justice done between all parties litigant. In this vital particular it differs from the Northern Securities case, which has been so often referred to, and which was a proceeding instituted by the Government to enforce a public law.

"A court in equity has not jurisdiction to restrain the mere doing of a wrongful or illegal act, or to enforce the performance of a moral duty. Before it grants the extraordinary relief of injunction in a suit by an individual, it must be clear not only that the suitor's property or rights are threatened, but that he is himself in nowise responsible for the existence of the condition which menaces him.

"The record develops the fact that at the last annual election of the Wabash Railroad Company the plaintiff Ramsey, holding the proxies of the then and now owners of these very shares of stock, the voting of which he now seeks to have enjoined, voted all of them for the election of the very persons whom he now charges will be elected and will so conduct the property of the Wabash Road as not only to violate the provisions of the laws of Missouri, but also to injure him.

"If the court is to conclude that the holding of the Wabash by the Missouri Pacific and the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern is illegal, it must conclude that it was illegal and held for an unlawful purpose from the time of its acquisition, and that the plaintiff in this case not only knew and acquiesced in this unlawful holding, but exercised, when it was to his benefit to do so, the powers growing out of this illegal ownership.

"The opinion above announced being conclusive against plaintiff's right to recover, the court refrains from any expression of its views upon the other questions of law and fact involved in the case."

Citizens' Union Nominations.

The Citizens' Union Convention in the Twenty-ninth Assembly District nominated William Mason Smith for the Assembly last night. The convention also nominated Montgomery Hare for Alderman in the Thirty-first Aldermanic District. Mr. Smith is a lawyer at 28 Liberty Street. Mr. Hare is a lawyer at 30 Broad Street, and an Assistant Corporation Counsel.

SIMMONS WARNS PLATT.

Senator Says the South Won't Submit to Congressional Reduction.

"In the last session of Congress Senator Platt of New York introduced a bill providing for a reduction in the Congressional representation from those States which disfranchised all, or a part, of the negro vote. I presume that in the session of Congress about to begin, Mr. Platt will reintroduce that measure. I want to serve notice on him and those here in New York City who were responsible for it, that if its passage is seriously attempted Mr. Platt will discover a buzz-saw revolving at a rate that will appal him."

This was said to a TIMES reporter by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, who is in New York. Mr. Simmons, with Senator Gorman of Maryland, will lead the fight against Southern reduction when it begins in the Senate if Mr. Platt again offers his bill.

"I understand," continued Mr. Simmons, "and it was stated at the time Mr. Platt introduced his bill, that the Republican Club of New York was behind it, and that that organization was largely responsible not only for its introduction, but its actual wording. Now, in this case, the axiom about a word to the wise should apply fittingly. The Republican Club evidently doesn't know what it is running up against when it offers this proposition. We who are familiar with the situation know that to stir up the question of the negro vote in the South is to invite a fight which, in point of rancor, bitterness, and severity, will equal the battles of the days when reconstruction was sought.

"It is a dangerous matter to handle, and my advice to these well-meaning Republican gentlemen of New York is to let this charge of dynamite rest where it will do the least harm—stored away in its bomb-proof vault of silence and idleness. Mr. Platt is aiming principally at North Carolina, Mississippi, and Alabama when he seeks to have his resolution passed, but in fact he is hitting the whole South. The Platt resolution cannot pass, and the Republican Club and its associates, who are agitating the question, ought to know it."

Senator Simmons confirmed the recent statement that the President had told him that he would never consent to another nomination.

"The President is impressed with the entire practicability of railroad rate regulation this Winter," said Senator Simmons, "but therein I disagree with him. It is plain that several of the most influential Republican members of the Inter-State Commerce Committee of the Senate are opposed to action, and so are the leaders on the floor not upon this committee. A powerful influence will be brought to bear to defeat this legislation, and who can tell that it may not succeed? At all events, the President hasn't an entirely reassuring prospect facing him, and he will have trouble in getting a railroad bill through the Senate.

"The situation is the same respecting tariff revision. There will no doubt be talk, and plenty of it, on this question, but as for decisive action, I regard it as highly improbable—in fact, almost impossible."

VIRGINIA DEMOCRATS SCARED.

They Fear Republicans Will Make Too Good a Showing This Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The Democratic managers in Virginia are getting scared—not over any prospect that the Republicans will carry the State, but over the imminent danger that such a good showing will be made as will produce strong financial aid for the next campaign and a real peril for Democratic ascendency.

In view of this it is planned to get every Democratic Virginia vote out of Washington on election day. The leaders are planning a campaign among the many Virginians here to wake them up to the necessity of going home to vote.

John Sharp Williams has been drafted to open the campaign and every effort is to be made to keep down the Republican vote.

$245,000 for Institutions.

BOSTON, Oct. 9. — Public bequests amounting to $245,000 are contained in the will of Charles Tidd Baker, a Boston insurance broker, filed to-day. Among them are $20,000 to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for assistance to students; $15,000 each to the Boston Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital, the Kindergarten for the Blind at Jamaica Plain, and the Boston Children's Friend Society, and $10,000 to the Tuskegee Industrial Institute of Alabama.

A LITTLE STEALTH

Some of the most lovable and best people in the world are cranky, and a "leetle" hard to manage, particularly when you want to do them good. Then it is that justifiable and righteous artfulness may be resorted to. As, for instance, in the following case given by a devoted wife and mother in Iowa:

"This Spring my daughter, who is a teacher, became convinced that coffee was doing her harm, as it caused distress and belching after eating. She felt that she needed a warm drink in the morning, but disliked hot water or milk. Then our daily use of Grape-Nuts suggested Postum.

"For some time my husband, who has been a user of coffee from his youth, had been more than usually troubled with sleeplessness and nervousness, and I felt that Postum might be helpful to him. The question was, how to persuade them to leave off drinking coffee and try Postum, against which they had repeatedly expressed prejudice. I resolved to try an experiment and make the test.

"Without acquainting them with the fact I made Postum according to directions, but added a teaspoonful of good coffee. I poured it out with some misgivings, but was delighted to see that no one could tell from its appearance that it was not rich, strong coffee. Its use was continued for a week with the coffee addition; then that was gradually withdrawn, until only the pure Postum remained, and still the change had not been detected.

"Two things were very noticeable, however—that my daughter had begun to rapidly improve in health, her dyspepsia left, and my husband was enjoying sweet, refreshing sleep.

"When I ventured to tell them what I had done, he asked for a return to the coffee, and I gladly made it for him; but one day satisfied him; the old sleeplessness came back, and he told me he liked the Postum better. So we have used it ever since, to the benefit of the whole family." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SILK CHIFFON VELVETS

1.75 QUALITY at 1.10 A YARD

HIGH-class dressmakers and hundreds of smart dressers who have been unable to find the exact shades desired for their Fall costumes—the new wines, plums, &c.—found them here yesterday at very much less than regular prices. In so far as completeness is concerned, the selection is unbroken, meaning that you may have your pick of the season's choicest colorings—to-day at 1.10 a yard. MAIN FLOOR.

$1.10 — Five hundred pieces were purchased for this sale—more than all other stores combined have in stock, according to manufacturers, and while you might go for miles trying to find the new popular wines, plums, prunes and purples, we have them in abundance. Also Alice and Gobelin Blue, lavenders, and all the popular street and pastel shades for handsome evening wraps and costumes. EIGHTY SMART SHADES.

Not ordinary chiffon velvets, but the highest grade silk face $1.75 quality—the greatest purchase ever made in America, we believe. Dressmakers and small dealers should take advantage, as this quality cannot be bought at wholesale at the low price we ask. A sale at the height of the season.

Fashion's smartest laces are priced so attractively at Simpson Crawford Co.'s that high-class dressmakers are buying them here instead of the wholesale importers.

To-day's specials include:

These are from one of Plauen's finest makers, and have been secured by us at a concession which enables us to offer them to you at about one-half their real value. They can be used in many ways, such as in making the dainty evening hat, making the soft lace waist, making the sleeves and bodice of the evening gown, for trimming the evening wraps, for tea gowns, and for numerous other purposes where soft lace ruffling is desired.

GIANTS TRIUMPH, 3-0, IN INTER-LEAGUE GAME

Mathewson the Hero of the Day in Defeating the Athletics.

NEVER GAVE THEM A CHANCE

McGraw's Champions Beat the Philadelphia Players at All Points—Great Crowd at Grounds.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—John J. McGraw, commander of the New York National League baseball forces, led his warriors of the diamond back to Manhattan to-night after a splendid and overwhelming victory over the Athletics, the vaunted champions of the American League. It was the first in the series of games between the leading clubs of the two big Leagues that will determine the National championship.

McGraw's magnificent baseball machine, its every cog and wheel oiled and smoothed to a nicety, won the first game of the world's series by the score of 3 to 0. And a great victory it was.

To direct the major share of the praise to whom it is due, is to place the bulk upon the back of Christie Mathewson, Manhattan's masterly "Matty," who by his brain and brawn, cleverness and strength, more than did his share to bring the first victory of the series to New York. Time and again to-day New York was in danger of being caught. But Mathewson stepped in with his heroic right arm and his acute baseball mind precisely at the right place and the right time and cut the Athletics off just as they were starting. The Philadelphia crowd thought it was going to enthuse several times, but Mathewson on each occasion threw a wet blanket over the incipient applause. He didn't give the crowd a chance even to warm up to the game.

Gilbert, Donlin, Bresnahan, McGann, Devlin, and Dahlen worked to perfection with Mathewson. Not a fielding chance did they miss, excepting one, an excusable muff in the sun by Sir Michael, and with their bats they executed clean-cut, decisive hitting when it was most needed.

In the box Mathewson did everything that was desired. His speed was terrific, his control perfect. He alternated slow and fast ones. He used the wet ball. He curved them in, out, down, and over. Philadelphia was at his mercy. Not a single base on balls did he grant, and only four hits were made from his delivery.

Plank, on the other hand, was touched up in lively fashion when singles were most needed. He pitched his slant ball and delivered it with lightning speed, but speed was apparently what the Giants were prepared for, and when the occasion required they put the spheroid in the places where it did the most good. New York's "inside" game was excellently demonstrated. They stole bases, doubly and singly; they threw with precision, and they fielded with accuracy and flashlike speed. The Philadelphias, on the other hand, were comparatively slow on their feet. Their batting was bad, and they played more or less mechanically. To analyze the result would be to show that New York is superior by far in head work and in organization. Philadelphia was lacking in those respects. It showed well from a mechanical standpoint, but the local team did not appear to fit, and there were errors of omission, which counted for a great deal.

About 500 of the true and tried among the New York fans were in the stands to-day when call for play was made. The Giants, with McGraw in the lead, arrived over the Pennsylvania at 10 o'clock this morning. They traveled in a special car attached to a regular train. With them were many fans headed by James J. Corbett. Louis Mann, the actor, walked down the station platform arm in arm with McGraw as the Giants alighted from their car and entered McGraw's carriage on the trip to the hotel.

After a little delay they drove for the grounds, headed by a band of music. There was a big turnout to witness the parade of the Giants, and they were received with acclaim all along the route. McGraw and his men were kept busy bowing acknowledgments to the Philadelphia fans.

Exactly 17,945 persons paid to get within the Athletics' grounds. That was all the stands would hold. When time for play arrived the fielders were surrounded by a solid bank of humanity. Grand stands and bleachers were packed to their utmost capacity, the crowd being twenty deep all around the outer field and guarded by a cordon of police, who found their hands full in holding back the rooters. Not less than 10,000 persons were refused admission, and many stood upon a strip on the fence along the centre field, hanging on for two hours by their finger nails.

New York's devoted five hundred, more or less, parceled off in one corner of the stand, was like a peanut in a bushel basket when compared with Philadelphia's representation, but what the visitors lacked in actual numbers they more than supplied by the volume of their volcanic enthusiasm. The New York contingent didn't spare Philadelphia in their comments. One man in the crowd came over with a manila paper pad, 6 feet by 4, and a chunk of charcoal. When he wanted to express his opinions he wrote them out and displayed them for the amusement of his fellow-Manhattanites. For instance, when Bresnahan stole a base he wrote:

Roger, thou artful dodger; they catch thee not.

And to Donlin when the latter struck at a ball and missed:

What! A strike on our Mike? It cannot be.

Donlin rewarded his admirers by sending the leather into the outer garden for a clean single, scoring a run.

The New York team arrived upon the field about 2:15 o'clock. The Giants burst upon the grounds from under the stand with a run and a jump, wearing spick-and-span uniforms of black blouses and trousers, with white caps, belts, and stockings. A mighty cheer greeted McGraw as he led his crowd forward. The New York contingent arose as one man and yelled:

Johnnie get cher gun, my son, we've won.
Johnnie get cher gun, it's 10 to 1.

McGraw doffed his cap and waved his hand in reply.

"The odds are too big, boys," he yelled. "Take even money."

It became known that McGraw had succeeded in placing about $400 at even money with Philadelphia followers. In some cases the Philadelphians cut the price nicely and insisted on a proportion of $75 to $70 or 15 to 14. Clark, Donlin, and Dahlen also succeeded in getting a few bets down.

When the Athletics made their appearance Philadelphia got on its feet and gave them an ovation in which Connie Mack shared liberally. Mack sat upon the bench in street clothes and was greeted from time to time by a yell.

"Connie Mack, the crack-a-jack."

White Elephant for McGraw.

As the game was about to begin McGraw walked to the plate for a conference with Lave Cross, the Athletics' Captain, and Umpires Sheridan and O'Day. As he stepped up a miniature white elephant upon a pedestal of green was presented to McGraw, who grabbed it, and the crowd laughed. The Giants' manager bowed in mock courtesy, and then posed for a photographer with the elephant on his hands. The elephant, however, didn't stay on his hands long.

After a ground rule for a limit of two-base hits for all balls in the crowd had been agreed upon McGraw walked back to the New York bench.

"Danny, do you think you can put the ball into the crowd?" he asked of McGann, pointing to the spectators in left field.

"On this postage stamp!" answered McGann in derision as he surveyed the small, cramped grounds looking like a ping pong table in comparison with the Polo Grounds. "You bet." And McGann made good.

The band was stationed in front of the New York's bench, and the Giants picked up their truncheons, ready for work, to the tunes of "Tammany" and "Give My Regards to Broadway."

The Athletics had splendid opportunities for scoring in the third, sixth, eighth, and ninth innings. In each they had a man or men on bases, but they couldn't push them over the rubber.

New York won the game on hits by Mathewson, Donlin, and Mertes in the fifth and by Gilbert and Bresnahan, and a sacrifice by Mathewson in the ninth. Matty's good judgment was called into service more than once, and in the sixth inning especially he escaped from a tight corner by some clever work. Plank pitched at least twice as many balls as the Giants' slabman, and was weaker at the close. Matty found it necessary to twirl only ten floaters in the first two innings, and throughout the game he held the proportion down.

Mathewson was injured in the fifth inning by being hit in the stomach by a ball from the bat of Seybold. Mathewson stopped the liner and put Scy out at first, but was obliged to go to the bench for a few moments and rest. He was anxious to finish the game and insisted upon playing almost immediately. He apparently suffered no ill-effects from the blow.

Plank started the game by pitching his first curve into the small of Bresnahan's back. Roger dropped his bat in pain and leaned over backward with his hands pressed in. Browne, who was standing near by, ran up to him and rubbed the sore spot, and Bresnahan, after a moment of hesitation, walked to first. This gave the Giants an opportunity to hang up a tally, but they were found wanting. Browne whipped a grass cutter to Monte Cross, who laced the sphere to Murphy, forcing Bresnahan. Murphy tried for a double, but Browne was too quick for him. Donlin looked as though filled with high resolve when he stepped to the plate, but the best he could do was to put a high fly in the hands of Harry Davis. McGann walked to the plate with confidence and the first ball that came to him he hit upon the nose, sending it into the crowd in right centre for two bases. Browne got to third, and the New York contingent began to root for dear life.

"Now, Sandow," was the cry, "give it to him good and hard. We win in the first inning." But Mertes failed. Instead of pounding the ball out of the lot, as the New Yorkers demanded, he confined himself to an artistic club-swinging act.

Mathewson made short work of the Athletics in this inning. As he stepped into the box, six photographers surrounded him, and for a minute he was delayed in posing. After he had been snapped he proceeded. His first ball Hartsel lined to Gilbert, who retired "Topsy" at first. Lord flied to Donlin on the next ball Mathewson put over the plate, and the second one to Davis was cracked to Mathewson, who stepped it with one hand.

In the second inning Devlin and Gilbert executed a beautiful double steal. After Dahlen had struck out, Devlin bunted to Plank, who fumbled. Gilbert followed suit with one in the same place and beat the throw. Plank was slow in his delivery, and while he was winding up, Devlin and Gilbert got a lead and raced for advanced bases. Schreck got the ball quickly, but it was too late, for by the time his low throw reached Lave Cross the two Giants had accomplished the larceny. Philadelphia couldn't help admiring this bit of work and applauded. The New York crowd thought it quite the proper thing and let loose a cheer that lasted a full minute. As Mathewson stepped to the plate he was greeted with howls of delight.

"Now's your chance, Matty," yelled the visiting crowd. "Win your own game."

But Mathewson, anxious and nervous at this crucial moment, couldn't find the ball, and was called out on three strikes.

With two out Bresnahan stepped to the plate, and as he walked forward with the real Rogeresque look of determination upon his face Philadelphia quaked.

"Give him his base," yelled the crowd. "Don't let him hit it; he'll kill it."

Plank evidently thought this good advice. He purposely pitched four wide ones as Bresnahan leaned upon his bat and smiled in contempt. Roger walked to first, filling the bases. Plank's judgment in pinning his faith on retiring Browne with three on bases proved good. The latter tried hard to connect safely, but failed. The best he could do was to line one to Monte Cross, who took his time in retiring Browne at first.

Philadelphia regained a little courage at New York's failure to score under these circumstances, and cheered Lave Cross as he stepped to the bat, but the Athletics' Captain could only go out by the Dahlen-McGann route. Seybold next flied to Dahlen at short, and Murphy tried to bunt, but Gilbert ran in with deerlike speed, scooped up the ball, and fired it to McGann in time to nip Murphy just as the latter was stepping upon the bag.

The Giants were retired quickly in the third. Donlin tried to bunt along the first base line, but Murphy ran in, grabbed the ball, and nailed Mike at first. Dahlen and Bresnahan rushed at O'Day to register a kick on the decision, but they were met with a threat that kept them in subjection during the remainder of the game. McGann hit to Lave Cross, and was out at Davis's corner, and Mertes sent a shot to Murphy, who fumbled but recovered in time to make the put-out to Davis.

Devlin distinguished himself in this inning by dropping on a ground hit from Monte Cross's bat which sped so quickly that it looked like a white ribbon from the plate to third. Devlin had the ball to first before Cross got half way to the sack. The play pleased a few impartial Philadelphians, who applauded. Schreck popped to short centre and Gilbert, Dahlen, and Donlin all ran for the ball. The trio, upon perceiving a collision imminent, hesitated until McGann called for Donlin to take it. Mike started on another run and got the tips of his fingers on the ball. Considering the circumstances, and the fact that the sun was in his eyes, Donlin's error was excusable. With Schreck on first, Plank hit past Mathewson, who allowed the ball to go to short for a double. Dahlen threw to second, forcing the catcher, and then whipped the ball to McGann, nailing the elabman and retiring the side.

The Giants were retired in one, two, three order in the fourth, Dahlen from Murphy to Davis, Devlin out on strikes, and Gilbert from Monte Cross to Davis.

The Athletics started their half of the inning as though they meant business. After he had three balls and two strikes, Hartsel hit for a clean single over second. Philadelphia began to brace up and the cry went out:

"Now we're off. Here's where we get in the game."

But the Athletics were no sooner off than on again. Lord tried to bunt, but Gilbert threw to second, forcing Hartsel. Davis then forced Lord by the Dahlen-Gilbert combination, and Lave Cross whipped one that caught him at first.

New York went to the bat prepared to do something in the fifth, and by some opportune hitting scored the first runs of the game. Mathewson put a clean single over second. With the first man up on a bag, the New York contingent rose en masse and began to cheer.

"Go at 'em, boys," they roared. "Clinch the game right here." And that's exactly what the Giants did. Bresnahan hit to Monte Cross and forced Matty. Plank was slow in his delivery again, and Roger got a good start and landed on second. Browne, under the encouragement of the New York crowd, tried his best, but could only put a skyscraper into Monte Cross's hands. Donlin was equal to the occasion, however, and sent one past the two Crosses which was good for two bases, Bresnahan scoring. As Roger crossed the plate New York's faithful rose and cheered. McGann was urged to drive Mike in. But Plank, fearing another score, purposely gave Dan a base on balls. This time, however, the southpaw reckoned wrongly, for Mertes, the next man up, drove the ball into the crowd in centre field, and Donlin raced home with the second run. Dahlen went out to Hartsel.

The Athletics went out in order in their half of the fifth, as did the Giants in the beginning of the sixth. In their half of the sixth Philadelphia got one man on base, but couldn't score him. Schreck started the ball rolling by hitting to deep left centre for two bases. Plank attempted to slug the ball, but instead bunted it gently to Mathewson, advancing Schreck, however, to third. Murphy struck out and Monte Cross went out, Devlin to McGann.

In the seventh, after Bresnahan had flied to Lord, Donlin bunted safely and stole second. He was left there, however, as Browne and McGann were easy outs. In their half the Philadelphias went out quickly, as did the New Yorks in the eighth. In the latter half of the eighth Murphy placed the ball in the crowd at centre for two bases. The Philadelphia rooters began to crow, and attempted to rattle Mathewson, with their whistles, bells, horns, and what-nots, but the Giants' twirler declined to fade, and exhibited wonderful coolness by striking out Monte Cross and Plank and retiring Schreck with a fly to Browne.

New York scored the final run of the game in the ninth. Gilbert opened the inning with a sharp single past short. Mathewson, who followed, was vociferously applauded by the New York enthusiasts as he stepped to the plate and sacrificed Gilbert to second. Bresnahan hit a slow grounder past Plank and over second base. Murphy was tardy and missed the ball, Gilbert scoring and Bresnahan going to second. Browne was out to Davis, but advanced Bresnahan to third. Donlin retired by way of Murphy and Davis, and the New Yorks had ended their part of the game at the bat.

WOULDN'T DIE EASILY.

The Athletics died hard trying to roll up one score, at least, but they were obliged to retire in the ninth with another goose egg. Hartzell was suppressed from Dahlen to McGann, and Lord struck out. Davis gave a spark of hope to the Athletics' admirers by hitting into the centre field crowd for two bases, and the faithful arose to cheer their favorites on to their dying battle. Lave Cross, who followed, couldn't do better than hit to Dahlen, who threw to first, retiring him. The Athletics were dead.

As the game ended the crowd broke into the field. The New York rooters gathered around McGraw and Mathewson, who stood on the first base line, shaking hands. Each of the giants was surrounded by a particular knot of admirers, but they took no chance on being roughly handled, and rapidly broke for their carriages.

McGraw, in discussing the result to-night, said:

"Mathewson is certainly a phenomenon, and the rest of the boys are not far behind. Philadelphia never had a look in. I think we'll win the series. I'll probably pitch McGinnity to-morrow, and we won't overlook any opportunity offered to get in another victory, you can bet."

Mack was greatly disappointed at the outcome, but gave credit to McGraw and the Giants.

"They played a great game and won on merits. However, perhaps to-morrow we shall hear a different story. I think of putting in Bender at the Polo Grounds, and we may change the tune. Remember, one game is not to be accepted as final."

SAW NEGROES CLUBBED, RAID WITNESS ASSERTS

Says One Vistim's Face Was Plowed Through Broken Glass.

MANY BEATEN AT THE DOOR

Story of a Crippled Newsboy Who Spends Everything He Makes in Poolrooms and Never Wins.

Neither Salo Flam, nor any of his promised eighteen witnesses appeared yesterday before Commissioner McAdoo to testify against Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Dooley for alleged violence in connection with the recent raid on the Bon Ton Club, in West Thirty-first Street. Flam, who has a tailor shop in the building with the club, sent word that he had had enough notoriety in the matter. The only witness against the police at the hearing was a Mr. Thorp, a magazine writer.

Mr. Thorp said he was attracted to the place while the raid was going on by the excitement. He said he saw two men clubbing every one in sight. He saw one colored man, he said, thrown down the stoop, which was covered with broken glass. Then, he says, two men grabbed the victim by the legs and plowed his face through the glass. The negro's face was covered with blood when he got up.

The men in the raided house made their exit, the witness said, in single file, and the policemen at the door showed particular brutality toward every colored man in the line. Mr. Thorp said he was a British subject, and when asked by the Commissioner whether or not he had renounced his allegiance to King Edward he replied:

"No, Sir, and I never will."

The witness said that he tried to get Commissioner McAdoo on the telephone last week, but while he was in the act of telephoning a man told him not to testify against the police, for they would lay for him and club the life out of him.

The next witness called was William Reitmier, a newspaper reporter. He declared that he knew nothing about the raid, and was excused.

Then Inspector Schmittberger took the stand in his own defense. He said he had sent out Roundsman Heimmell and five plain clothes men to search for pool rooms in the Tenderloin, and that same afternoon while walking down Broadway saw a crowd in front of the Bon Ton Club.

"When I got inside the house," he said, "I saw that the inmates were in a panic. The door was closed, and I ordered a policeman to open it and let the people out. I saw no clubbing, and I clubbed no one, nor did Capt. Dooley, who was with me. I saw a crippled newsboy among the struggling men, and I pulled him out of harm's way."

"How about any furniture being broken?" asked the Commissioner.

"I saw no damage done to any property," replied the Inspector. "When I left the building no damage had been done."

Capt. Dooley also testified that there was no clubbing or wrecking of furniture.

James O'Neill, the crippled newsboy referred to by Inspector Schmittberger, said he was thrown down by the rush of men to escape. A big man, whom he afterward found was Inspector Schmittberger, saved him by getting him out of the house. He saw no clubbing. He said he had no parents and did not know where his brothers and sisters were.

"How much do you make a day?" asked the Commissioner.

"From $1.50 to $2," was the reply.

"What do you do with it?"

"Play the races."

"Do you ever win?"

"No."

"How much do you spend a year in poolrooms?"

"About $150."

"And you seldom or never win?"

"No; I always come out loser."

"How often do you go to the poolrooms?"

"Oh, about twice a week or oftener."

"Have you an overcoat for the Winter?"

"A poor sort of one."

O'Neill testified in a straightforward manner, and when the Commissioner had finished his questioning he told the witness that he was the sort of boy that he was trying to save.

The hearing was adjourned until 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

GENERAL FOR CANTEEN.

Says Temperance Society Is in Union with Whisky Dealers.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—In his annual report to the Secretary of War, Brig. Gen. Constant Williams, commanding the Department of the Columbia, urges the restoration of the army canteen, saying:

"This is a most unusual and interesting question, for in it we find the union of the two most antagonistic elements in American society working hand in hand against the best interests of the soldier.

"In the first place, we have the great temperance society, whose general influence for good and notable work cannot be too highly commended, but which, in this particular case, with best possible intentions, is making a serious mistake, and, joined with it in the agitation against the army canteen are the producers of whisky and their creatures, the saloon keepers, who make a livelihood by the sale of alcoholic drinks, often of the most unwholesome and villainous character. The whisky guild argues, quite correctly, that if the soldier is prevented from getting beer and light wines in the canteen he will be virtually forced to patronize the saloons and doggeries, which under this system have sprung up like mushrooms at the very gates of all army garrisons.

"As an example, in Vancouver, with a population of about 4,000, there are twenty-two saloons, all situated as near the garrison as practicable. To these immoral dens of infamy the canteen law is a big dividend-paying charter, securing them in power to degrade, demoralize, and rob the American soldier."

LAWYER ARRESTED IN COURT.

Accused of Tampering with Witnesses at Storey Cotton Man's Trial.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—While the trial of Stanley Francis, indicted head of the Storey Cotton Company, was in progress to-day William C. Byron, a lawyer of Bradley Beach, N. J., was arrested in the United States District Courtroom, charged with attempting to influence witnesses.

Francis was arraigned before Judge Holland, charged with having used the mails to defraud. Frank C. Marrin, Sophia Beck, F. Ewart Storey, Walter B. Riggs, Thomas H. Quinlan, Patrick Kearns, and A. H. Howard were indicted with him. Kearns is under bail in Brooklyn, but the others are fugitives from justice.

William J. Bradley of Camden, receiver, in his report to the court declared that, in the four years of its existence, the Storey Company obtained from the public $3,683,798, and there is yet due its customers $2,926,578, the assets being $49,842.

Gertrude Sundheim and aMrgaret Hoke, formerly bookkeepers for the Storey Cotton Company, testified that Byram attempted to have them make their testimony as mild as possible without telling an untruth. They were to be rewarded, they said, by lucrative places in other cities. He told them he came in the interest of a Mr. Harper, who, Miss Sundheim explained, was no other than Franklin Stone, or Marin, a fugitive from justice. Byram said he meant no wrong. He was held in $1,500 bail.

AGITATION IS RENEWED FOR WORLD PENNY POST

WANAMAKER AND REID TO HELP

Kipling Joins with J. H. Heaton, M. P., in Crusade to Reduce "Tax on Commerce."

LONDON TIMES-NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

LONDON, Oct. 10, (Tuesday.)—More than a page of The Times this morning is devoted to the publication of a plea by J. Henniker Heaton, M. P., and others for a universal penny postage.

Mr. Heaton leads off with a powerful argument in support of the scheme, the agitation for which he has been engaged in for a great many years.

Scores of letters follow indorsing the project from representative men of all classes—Bishops, Peers, members of Parliament, scientists, soldiers, authors, and merchants.

The present rate of postage is excessive, Mr. Heaton says, and an excessive postal surplus, he believes, is bad financially and grossly unjust. It is a tax gatherer's clutch on the windpipe of commerce, an embargo on neighborly amenities, an impediment to free intercourse between the mother country and her sons and daughters over the sea.

In place of it penny postage can be substituted, with the absolute certainty that in three or four years, thanks to the development of correspondence under a lower rate, the several Governments would be receiving quite as satisfactory returns from foreign postage as now.

The people of all the principal foreign countries are in hearty sympathy, Mr. Heaton says, with the project for a world-wide penny post, and at least two countries are willing to adopt the proposal forthwith.

Mr. Heaton suggests that it may suit England to introduce the reform gradually if timid reformers decline to accept the whole burden.

"In June last," says Mr. Heaton, "I spent several days with a great American public man discussing the scheme. I refer to John Wanamaker, ex-Postmaster General of the United States. He visited the American Ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, and I know that the result of their deliberations will give new interest to the movement and show an example of public spirit deserving of the highest praise."

Letters appended to Mr. Heaton's present a great variety of arguments in favor of penny postage. Rudyard Kipling is one of the stoutest advocates. In the course of his letter he says:

"Postage, telegraph, and eventually passenger rates are things to be brought down as low as possible, the wide world over. The ultimate, ideal, civilized world is, of course, one with one cable, as well as one postal rate, and with steamer transport on the zone system, if possible."

A long list of names also is submitted by Mr. Heaton of prominent men of all classes who have enrolled themselves as members of the Universal Penny Post League and who have promised to do all in their power to further its aims.

The Times editorially supports the scheme, and urges its readers to aid it with all the means in their power. The Times expresses the hope that out of this present agitation may come at least penny postage between the United States and England. It trusts that Whitelaw Reid will do a great deal to bring about this arrangement. It believes, too, Mr. Heaton's efforts will appeal to the generous mind of President Roosevelt.

CHINESE SUSPEND BOYCOTT.

Merchants Decide to Await Action by the American Congress.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—News that the merchants of China who have been prosecuting the boycott against American goods have decided to suspend that movement to await possible action of the United States Congress in softening the exclusion laws is contained in official dispatches received to-day from Peking.

The information comes from the Merchants' Guild of that place, and is to the effect that this course has been decided upon by merchants throughout the empire. The action follows the advice of the Chinese Government, given as a consequence of the attitude of President Roosevelt.

Should Congress fail to take the desired action, the boycott will again become effective and will be pressed with renewed vigor.

MURDERED MAN IN TRUNK.

$2,000 Is Missing from a Safe in a Shop in Havana.

HAVANA, Oct. 9.—The body of Ramon Carmona, manager of a trunk store, was found this afternoon inside a locked trunk which had been concealed in a remote corner of the store, underneath a stairway. He had opened his safe, presumably under compulsion, and $2,000 had been taken from it.

Carmona entered the store at the usual hour this morning, but did not open it. The police broke in this afternoon. A youth called Jose, who was employed by Carmona, has disappeared.

GERMAN PEACE CONDITIONS.

Wants Conference at The Hague Limited to Defined Subjects.

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—The Foreign Office says Germany will accept Russia's invitation to attend the second peace conference at The Hague on the condition that the points to be discussed shall be arranged in advance.

Germany, naturally, will wish the question of disarmament avoided, as one which cannot lead to a practical agreement. Great Britain, it is also pointed out, holds a special position on certain neutrality practices, such as the length of time a belligerent may stay and coal in a neutral port.

Tarrasch and Marshall Draw.

NUREMBERG, Germany, Oct. 9.—The fifteenth game of the chess match of eight games up between Marshall and Tarrasch was played at the local club this morning and afternoon and resulted, after forty moves, in a draw. The score [illegible] Tarrasch, 6; Marshall, 1; drawn, 8.

NORWAY ACCEPTS TERMS.

Karlstad Agreement Ratified—Old Treaty a Protection Against Russia.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Oct. 9.—After two days spent in excited discussion, the Storthing at 1:30 o'clock this morning proceeded to a division on the proposal of the Republican minority to submit the Karlstad agreement concerning the dissolution of the union between Norway and Sweden to a referendum. The proposal was rejected by a vote of 109 to 8.

The agreement was then accepted by a vote of 101 to 16. This is a great victory for the Government.

In the course of the debate Premier Michelsen made an interesting speech on the question of the selection of a King. He said that the offer of the throne to a member of the house of Bernadotte was made as an expression of good will. It had apparently, however, been otherwise interpreted in Sweden, as, according to King Oscar's observations to foreign newspaper men, his Majesty would regard his approval of such a selection as a personal sacrifice.

In conclusion the Premier said that the question now appeared to be outside actual politics. Premier Michelsen's statement is regarded as a withdrawal of Norway's offer of the throne to a member of the Bernadotte family.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Count Wachtmeister, the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Sweden, in an interview with the Stockholm correspondent of the Temps calls attention to the continued existence of the treaty of 1855, negotiated after the Crimean war, in which Great Britain and France engage to furnish the King of Sweden and Norway with naval and military forces sufficient to co-operate with his forces in resisting the pretensions or aggressions of Russia.

The treaty further binds the King not to cede any Swedish or Norwegian territory to Russia or to grant Russia any coast privileges.

Count Wachtmeister adds that Sweden considers the treaty to be of great importance. The position of France toward Russia has changed, yet he believes Great Britain has not forgotten the treaty and holds to it.

The Temps says the treaty comes to notice at a significant moment, after the signature of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, thus presenting an international problem in the Scandinavian crisis.

SEND AN EAR, DEMAND RANSOM

Macedonian Brigands Threaten to Kill a Captive Englishman.

SALONICA, European Turkey, Oct. 9.—The British Consulate at Monastir has received a package containing a human ear which, according to a letter accompanying it, was cut from an Englishman named Wills, recently employed by the Turkish Tobacco Revenue Department.

Wills was captured by brigands some months ago, and the letter says he will be killed unless a ransom of $5,000 be paid by Oct. 14.

The scene of the capture of Wills is some distance to the east of the vilayet of Salonica, in which Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, was captured in September, 1902.

All through Macedonia the system of brigandage is approved by the people, who look upon it as one of the methods by which they may gain their freedom. It was said at the time of the kidnapping of Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka that it was a political move and that the ransom of about $75,000 afterward paid went to the Macedonian Committee.

Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka were carried over the Bulgarian border into the mountains and held for five months, when both were released upon payment of ransom subscribed by American friends.

HONORS TO MISS ROOSEVELT.

Japanese Governor Welcomes Her—Garden Party to Harriman.

TOKIO, Oct. 9.—Miss Alice Roosevelt received an enthusiastic reception at Nikko. Nearly all of the prominent families were represented at the station to receive her. During the journey she received greetings of welcome at the principal stations. At Utsunomiya she was met by the Governor and delegates from the Ladies' Patriotic League, who presented flowers.

Count Inouye will give a garden party to-morrow at his artistic residence in honor of E. H. Harriman, President of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. The guests on the occasion will include the leading society people and business men of the city.

MONTELEONE, Calabria, Italy, Oct. 9.—A strong earthquake shock was felt here at 10 o'clock last night. It caused a panic among the inhabitants, who are still suffering from the terror and privation resulting from the last catastrophe.

CAN'T REMEMBER NOUNS.

Victim of Trolley Car Accident Has a Rare Affliction.

Physicians at Plainfield, N. J., are much puzzled over the case of Garret T. Dunham, who was thrown from a trolley car several weeks ago, landing on his head. Mr. Dunham is now apparently as well as ever, except that he is unable to pronounce nouns. He has no difficulty with verbs, but when it comes to naming objects he is all at sea. Mr. Dunham is the head shipping clerk of a large manufacturing concern in Plainfield.

Mr. Dunham's case, according to an expert, is extremely rare—paralysis of the naming centre. This part of the brain, which is directly over the left ear, was definitely located some years ago by Dr. Mills of Philadelphia.

When a man's naming centre is affected, if there be no other trouble, he can talk fluently, but is unable to name objects which he sees, feels, or hears. His trouble is a form of sensory aphasia.

About a year ago Dr. Charles L. Dana and Dr. Joseph Fraenkel of Manhattan reported a case almost exactly similar to that of Mr. Dunham. The patient was able to talk voluntarily and to answer certain questions. He could repeat spoken words and copy written words. He had no recollection, however, of the names of objects. Looking at a bottle, he said it was something to drink from. A knife was something to cut with, and a piece of soap something to wash with.

In this case the condition of the patient, a Russian peddler, remained the same up to the time of his death.

OBJECT TO "SOUTH NEWPORT."

Col. Kane and Others Deny Signing Petition for Separation.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Oct. 9.—The Summer residents are denying that they have signed the petition for a division of Newport and the establishment of a municipality to be known as South Newport. In to-day's local paper Col. De Lancey Kane, Mrs. Mary R. H. Glyn, and Miss Alice Ketcltas for herself and her brother, Philip R. Ketcltas, deny that they signed the petition or favor the project. Col. Kane says in part:

"Having been born and brought up here, I would view with the greatest alarm the present effort to mutilate our city did I not know how futile that effort is.

"From pre-Revolutionary days till now many travelers have told and many poets sung of the hospitalities of Newport. We, and in descendants, the modern dwellers in this old city by the sea, are as ready as our forbears were to welcome the stranger and Summer resident. But we are content with our dear old Newport as it is, and are not looking for any outside assistance to make us more so."

TO END WAR BY CABLE AFTER AMERICAN STYLE

Russia and Japan Decide to Cut Diplomatic Red Tape.

PRECEDENT MADE BY MR. HAY

Washington Will Be Informed of Signature by Emperors and Treaty Will Be in Force.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Another triumph for American diplomatic methods, a few years ago called "shirt-sleeves diplomacy," was recorded to-day, when it was announced that Japan and Russia would end the war by wire.

Instead of waiting for the formal exchange of ratifications at Washington by plenipotentiaries, it has been agreed that the exchange will be made by cable and telegraph. Announcement of the change in plan was made at the Japanese legation to-day.

The first precedent for such action was made when Secretary Hay, for the American Government, decided to cut diplomatic red tape and ratified the last treaty with China by cable. At that time the diplomats were amazed at the resort to such an informal method of binding an international transaction.

The treaty, it is understood, has passed through the necessary preliminary stages of approval in each country, and is now before the respective Emperors. As soon as it has been signed this fact will be communicated by cable to the State Department and the Washington Government will apprise each Emperor of the act of the other. With this accomplished the war will be at an end.

The formal exchange of ratifications will be carried out in Washington as soon thereafter as the signed treaties reach here. The copy signed by the Emperor of Russia will be delivered to a Japanese plenipotentiary for transmission to Japan, and the copy signed by the Emperor of Japan likewise will be delivered for transfer to St. Petersburg. This function, according to present intentions, will be devoid of all formality.

PRESIDENT HAS GOOD LAUGH.

He Proves the Star at Performance of "Mlle. Modiste."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—President Roosevelt to-night attended the performance of Fritzi Scheff in "Mlle. Modiste," by Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom, at the Columbia Theatre. Mrs. Roosevelt and several friends accompanied him. It was the first time they had been to the theatre since their return from Oyster Bay.

The audience rose and cheered repeatedly when the President came in. He was in a jovial humor, and laughed heartily, led the applause, started all the encores, headed the demand for curtain calls, and was the first to ask Mr. Herbert for a speech.

Mr. Herbert, when he left the stage, took the baton from the regular conductor, turned to face the President, and led the orchestra in "The Star-Spangled Banner." The audience arose and cheered wildly again and again, and the President bowed his thanks, after which the regular conductor went on with the entr'act music.

In one song by Bertha Holley, entitled "Our Culture Club in Keokuk," occurred the lines:

We've argued politics and such,
We don't think Kaiser Bill so much,
We even send advice to Oyster Bay.

The President enjoyed this so much that the audience compelled several repetitions of the verse just to see him laugh.

AIMED AT FATHER; SHOT GIRL.

Young Man's Bad Aid Starts Up Feud—His Father Killed.

Special to The New York Times.

SOMERSET, Ky., Oct. 9.—As the result of a shooting affray in the lower part of the county to-day Alexander Bowland is dead, Miss Ethel Childers is expected to die, and a feud war of wide proportions is expected.

Edward Childers and Frank Bowland, each about 20 years old, with ten companions, were returning from a picnic and fishing party. Bowland near his home became engaged in an altercation with Childers in which the senior Bowland joined. It is alleged that he advanced on Childers with stones in his hand, when the latter fired a rifle.

The bullet struck Bowland in the centre of the forehead, causing instant death. Frank Bowland hurried into the house and, seizing a rifle, came out into the roadway, and fired at Childers. The bullet went wide of the mark, but lodged in the body of Miss Ethel Childers.

The families are close neighbors, but the wounding of the young woman has aroused indignation, and it is likely that further shootings will follow. Childers surrendered to the authorities, but young Bowland has not been apprehended.

HUNTERS AFTER THREE FOXES

Meadow Brook Women in Hard Run to Oyster Bay.

Special to The New York Times.

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y., Oct. 9.—Three foxes made things lively for the Meadow Brook hunt to-day. The meet was at Jericho and the first covert drawn. The foxes were found on the Joseph Stevens estate. One started north and the other east, which caused the pack to split. Most of the hounds followed the trail leading east, with the hunt party at their heels. The trail was hot and the pace fast, the fox running almost to Oyster Bay before he was captured. With jaded horses the party started homeward, but before going far another fox jumped in front of the pack. Only a few of the lightweights essayed to follow with their tired mounts, and these were rewarded by seeing the fox holed on the Dudley Winthrop place at Old Westbury.

There were six women in the saddle, all of whom were in at the first death. The riders were P. F. Collier, M. F. H.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr.; E. Willard Roby, J. F. Rainey, J. M. Waterbury, Jr., J. P. Grace, Morgan Grace, Miss Adelaide Randolph, Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Beverly Robinson, Harry S. Page, William C. HEMPSTEAD CAB FIGHT OFF.

Hackmen Have a Space Set Aside for Them at the Station.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Oct. 9.—The long-drawn-out fight between O. H. P. Belmont and the village hackmen for precedence at the station curb is a thing of the past or at least a working agreement has been reached which promises to be satisfactory to every one. The fight has gone on for two years. It became acute recently when Luke Fagan, leader of the hackmen, one day not long ago refused to move from his stand in front of the station so that Mr. Belmont's automobile could draw in close to the curb and allow the Duchess of Marlborough to alight from it.

On Sept. 27 Mr. Belmont took the matter up with the Long Island Railroad Company. The railroad was powerless, because Luke Fagan and his fellows were out in the public street. Luke declared he paid his taxes and had driven a hack for thirty years and knew his rights. The village was appealed to, but the road was a county highway, and they put it up to the Supervisors. The Supervisors did not see what right they had to police a village street.

To-night there was a special meeting of the local board. There was much talk back and forth, and then Hen Sammis got the floor. Hen is Luke's junior in hacking by only a year or so. Hen's idea was that the Long Island Railroad should take care of the hackmen.

He said there was a big open space on the west of the depot where the trains come in which the express wagons use. The space is big enough for 100 wagons, and there are never more than two there. Hen proposed that the hackmen be allowed to drive in there and solicit trade close to the steps of the arriving cars. Hen's suggestion was adopted, and that ended the trouble.

HAD YELLOW FEVER RELAPSE.

Doctor Working with Louisiana Cases Dies of Second Attack.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 9.—There was but one yellow fever death in the twenty-four hours ended at 6 o'clock to-night and but 17 new cases appeared in this city. The cases under treatment number 187, falling considerably below the average of last week.

Dr. C. M. Shanley, formerly of North Dakota, died to-day at his plantation home on Bayou Barataria as the result of a relapse from yellow fever. Dr. Shanley came to Louisiana with his family three years ago. When fever appeared on Bayou Barataria he volunteered his services, placed his steam launch at the disposal of the authorities, and for days and nights visited the sick.

Several weeks ago he was stricken and brought to the New Orleans Emergency Hospital. He remained until he believed himself cured, and immediately returned to the Bayou to resume his work. Exposure and the fact that he had ventured out too soon resulted in a fresh attack, and death came to-day.

After raining steadily for thirty-six hours, the weather cleared late to-day. Adverse winds and the heavy rains backed the water from the lake into the basins and submerged a considerable portion of the city. A stop was again put to the sanitary work.

Yellow fever appeared in a thickly populated residential district of Natchez, Miss., to-day. Of eight new cases, four are white. Eight new cases of yellow fever and five deaths occurred at Pensacola Fla. Weather conditions favor a more rapid spread of the disease.

STATUTE OF LIMITATION WAS M'CURDY'S DEFENSE

Sued in 1879 for Obtaining Money by Alleged Fraud.

COURT'S OPINION ADVERSE

But the Case Was Thrown Out Years Later—Sale of Stock to the Old Reserve Mutual.

That President Richard A. McCurdy of the Mutual Life Insurance Company once invoked the statute of limitations in defense of a suit brought by the receiver of the Reserve Mutual Life Insurance Company for the recovery of moneys alleged to have been made through the sale to the Reserve Mutual Life of the stock of the Widows and Orphans' Benefit Life Company was brought to light yesterday in the records of the New York State Courts.

The case dates back to the winding up of the affairs of the Reserve Mutual Life in the later seventies after the unprofitable sale to that concern of the assets and stock of the Widows and Orphans' Benefit Company, which had gone to pieces some years before. Mr. McCurdy was a trustee of the Reserve Mutual, and as such in 1871, while also serving as Vice President of the Mutual Life, he was instrumental in negotiating the sale. One hundred and sixty thousand dollars of the Reserve Mutual's money was paid to Mr. McCurdy, according to the court record.

Of this amount, $1,868 went to President McCurdy for twenty-five shares of the Widows and Orphans stock that he owned; $15,000 he retained in payment for his services in putting the deal through, and $10,000 went to Charles H. Raymond, who had been President of the Widows and Orphans Benefit Company. It was Mr. Raymond who was subsequently to become general agent of the Mutual in the metropolitan district, and with a son or son-in-law of President McCurdy as a partner was to make the tremendous profit through the Mutual that has been testified to by witnesses before the Armstrong investigating committee.

To Question the McCurdys Again.

The insurance committee, when it resumes its session at 10:30 o'clock this morning, will have President McCurdy as a witness, although Counsel Charles E. Hughes may ask a few questions of Mr. McCurdy's son, the general manager of the Mutual, before the company's President goes on the stand. Mr. McCurdy will be questioned, it was said last night, as to how Mr. Raymond became metropolitan general agent of the Mutual, and also how Vice President Grannis of the company came to be taken over from his former connection with the Widow and Orphans Benefit.

There is a very interesting court record in the New York State reports of the suit which Receiver Henry R. Pierson of the Reserve Mutual Life began in 1879 for the recovery of the money which had been paid to Mr. McCurdy for the stock of the Widows and Orphans Company. A demurrer was entered in this action, and after the argument had been made before Justice Lawrence, then of the Appellate Division, a decision was handed down of which this is an extract:

Fraud and Conspiracy, Court Said.

It is alleged in substance that the defendant [Mr. McCurdy] knowing that the stock of the Widows and Orphans' Company, of which he was a Trustee, was greatly impaired and depreciated in value, became a party to a transaction by which he knowingly and illegally received the trust funds of the Reserve Mutual Protective Company in payment for that stock, and that with such knowledge he dispensed the money thus received to himself and others in payment for that stock; that he also received $25,000 for services in acting in the capacity of a stakeholder of moneys and stocks pending the consummation of an agreement between the parties and also paid to the President of the Widows and Orphans' Company $10,000 in pursuance of an agreement alleged.

In other words, the facts stated in the complaint, in my opinion, show fraud, conspiracy, or a scheme on the part of the defendant and others to obtain the trust moneys of the Reserve Mutual Company by means of a sale to the latter which he knew to be illegal. He was bound to know, under the laws of the State that the Reserve Mutual Protective Company was prohibited from investing its funds in the stock of the Widows and Orphans' Company, the market value of that stock being below par. I agree with counsel for the plaintiff that the extravagant price paid, independently of other considerations, raises a presumption of fraud which would alone be sufficient to sustain the complaint.

The case dragged along in the courts until June, 1885, when it was decided against Receiver Pierson on the ground that the alleged misapplication of funds was no longer a basis for action by reason of the Statute of Limitations, which counsel for the defendant availed themselves of.

That Advertising Bill.

The lead which was opened up by Counsel Hughes at the last session of the committee in his inquiry concerning an item of $1,134,838.76 charged up in the Mutual Life's report to the State Superintendent of Insurance as expense for printing, postage, stationery, and advertising, will be followed up by the committee. It is now known that A. C. Fields, the manager of the Mutual Life Supply Department, is the "Al" Fields whose name has been referred to frequently in connection with the use of life insurance funds for various political purposes.

The item of expense for stationery, printing, postage, and advertising was handled by Mr. Fields for the Mutual Life, and from the facts that have come to the knowledge of the committee and its counsel it appears that he had a very free hand in the expenditure of this money. Last year the Mutual's account for stationery was $601,101.21, the Equitable's $275,060.20, and the New York Life's $420,-393.83. Whether or not these items have afforded the channel for the payment of Mutual Life money for political purposes is a subject which the committee will inquire into.

It was learned yesterday that a large part of the Mutual's printing and stationery business was handled by Lysander W. Lawrence of 40 Nassau Street, a tenant in the Mutual Life Building. Mr. Lawrence was out of the city yesterday, but Mr. Rogers of his firm said that he did not believe Mr. Lawrence handled all the Mutual's work. Mr Rogers, however, would not go into details, and when questioned in regard to his observation of the activities of A. C. Fields refused to talk. The matter is another thing that the Armstrong Committee will inquire into in connection with the Mutual's heavy expense for advertising, printing, postage, and stationery. The investigators have been informed that the great bulk of this work was handled by Mr. Fields without advertising or bids, as is customary in contracts of such magnitude.

McCURDY AS A POET.

"Get Thee Behind Me Satan, Mine as Thine the Cry," He Wrote.

President Richard A. McCurdy of the Mutual Life, in the rôle of a poet, is a new figure to many. However, he has from time to time contributed verse to periodicals. Most of them have been anonymous, but one, which was signed, appeared in The Independent on Dec. 22, 1898. It was entitled: "Apage, Satanas," and is as follows:

Swift flow ths circling years and Christmas bells
Again ring out their meesage loud and clear,
Alas,
If to the heavy heart, if to ths isadsn ear,
Their vibrant melody no story telle,
Of hope or cheer.
Ah, weary years—yeare full of toil and care,
While gray the locks that ones wers flecked with gold,
Alas,
That hearte of yore responsivs to ths tals oft told,
No mors beat high as Christmas bsils declars,
The story old!
Ay, is it so? God help ue if it be!
God help us if Christ'e birth no longer make,
Alas,
Our waking joyoue, and ths glad chimes only break,
Dull and unheeded on the apathy
Of hearts that achs.
Nay, nay, not eo! E'en heavy hearts that ache—
Hearts brooding over wrong or hidden ein,
Alas,
Or grieving for the loved and lost while dark within
Her chamber eite ths soul for Chriet'e dear sake,
Sweet comfort take.
O Babe of Bethlehem, Mary'e child adorsd,
Saviour, Redeemer, born as on this day,
Alas,
Though doomed for ein to suffer and to ranaom pay,
For 'prisoned souls—ring, ring Thy belle, dear Lord,
In sweet accord.
Ring gladsome chimes until ths leaden ear,
Shall hearken to their vibrant melody,
Alas,
"Get thee behind me Satan," mine as thins the cry,
But lo! it triumphs! Heart bs of good cheer,
Christmas is here.

CANNED FOODS DENOUNCED.

Members of Medical Association Blame Them for Many Ills.

Foods and nutrition were the subjects of a series of addresses given at a meeting of the Medical Association of New York, held in Hosack Hall, 17 West Forty-third Street, last night, by some widely known physicians and surgsons. The general opinion was that canned meats and vegetables were highly injurious to the human system snd should be strictly avoided by those who esteem their health. In his remarks on preserved foods containing chemicals, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, said: "Some scientists tell us that teeth are now no longer necessary, as the new methods of preparing food have done away with mastication. When some other scientists discover the hunger microbe, we shall reduce the cost of living to a minimum.

"In the last 25 years it has been quite unusual to find any preserved animal or vegetable foods free from chemicals. My investigations into the effect these drugs have upon nutrition is distinctly unfavorable to their use. Chemicals have no taste and do not reveal themselves, and are often eaten without knowledge of the consumer.

"We ought to be able to choose our food," continued Dr. Wiley, "the same as we do our politics and religion. The introduction of chemicals into food without the knowledge of the consumer is a crime. When taken in food for a long time these chemicals are prejudicial to health and digestion. They cause loss of appetite, weight, and malaria, and are unnecessary. Kidney disease is very much on the increase in this country, and all these chemicals act directly upon the kidneys, especially borax, which is one of the drugs most commonly used in canned goods.

"Let us keep the pharmacopoeia out of the family groceries."

Col. Valery Harvard, M. D., Assistant Surgeon General, United States Army, said that on a black bread and meat diet the Russian soldiers had enjoyed excellent health in the Far East, and the percentage of deaths from disease had been less than those from wounds in battle, for the first time in the world's history.

Major Louis L. Seaman, M. D., late First Surgeon First Regiment of Engineers, United States Volunteers, denounced can goods as the cause of dysentery and catarrh among the troops in Cuba in '98. He said that his regiment lost five tons in weight in that Summer in Cuba and Porto Rico.

Prof. La Fayette B. Mendel of Yale University, said that man could exist on a strictly vegetable régime, but in his opinion a mixed diet of meat and vegetables was best for the human system. In regulating diet it was best to regulate quantity rather than kind. The chair was taken by Dr. Thomas Satherwaite and the hall was well filled with members of the medical profession, a number of them women.

Dr. Carl Van Noorden, the eminent German physician, who was present at the meeting, was called upon by the Chairman for a speech. He said that America was ahead of the whole world in the study of nutrition. He said that the work of the Department of Agriculture was without an equal.

QUICK FIRE RESCUES.

Two Men Save a Houseful of Panic-Stricken Tenants.

There was quick rescue work last night at a fire in the five-story tenement at 437 Sixth Street. Two men, whose names could not be learned, and three policemen achieved the rescue of half a dozen families before the arrival of the firemen.

Abraham Kahn, who, with his family, lived on the fourth floor, was returning from work when he saw fire in a hallway. He notified the janitress, and after trying to put out the flames ran to the Fifth Street Station shouting "Fire!"

Two men, said to be employes of the Consolidated Gas Company, heard the cry and ran to the tenement. The halls were already filled with smoke, but the men ran up to the third floor where they found Morris Lichtner, his wife, and three children in a panic. The five were handed on to the fire escapes and told to stay there. Then the two men ran into the hallway, closing the door behind them, and went to the fourth floor, where they assisted a Mrs. Pclasky and her child and Martin Peskliff, his wife and two children, to the fire escapes.

While they were busy looking for other tenants Policemen Unger, Cahill, and Newman of the Fifth Street Station, finding they could not enter the building by the hallway, went up the fire-escapes, and, assisted by the two gas men, coaxed the frightened tenants to take advantage of the ladders between the fire escapes.

This the tenants seemed afraid to do, because the flames were roaring in the windows. For some time there was such a huddled mass of men, women, and children to be dealt with that the policeman and the two gas men were afraid some one would be injured. Mrs. Doll, with two children, and her daughter, Mrs. Gallagher, with two more, were helped from the fifth floor and added to the crowd on the fire-escapes.

Eventually, by dint of persuasion and the employment of a little force, the tenants were started. Seeing some reach the street safely, the others did not hesitate much longer. Policeman Cahill, who got a severe cut on his right hand, was the only one injured. The damage was estimated at $5,000.

FORAKER NOT TO MAKE PHILADELPHIA SPEECH

Mixing in Pennsylvania Politics Might Be Misinterpreted.

SHIFT NOT FOR ROOSEVELT

No Thought of the Administration in Making the Change, Says the Ohio Senator.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 9.—Senator Foraker has canceled his engagement to speak in Philadelphia Oct. 18, and has sent the following letter in explanation:

Cincinnati, Oct. 8, 1905.

Hon. W. R. Andrews, Chairman, Philadelphia:

I am satisfied from reports I am receiving from Philadelphia that if I go there to speak at this time it will be interpreted as having direct reference to your local troubles and differences, with which I cannot with propriety have anything to do, instead of National politics, about which and in behalf of your State ticket alone I was invited to speak. While I think this is unreasonable and while I dislike exceedingly to recall an appointment that has been announced, yet I am unwilling to be put in such attitude, and therefore cancel my engagement for the 18th.

J. B. FORAKER.

In an interview to-day Senator Foraker said:

"The telegram from New York to the effect that the Administration is offended because I accepted an invitation to speak in Philadelphia is ridiculous throughout. Where I shall speak and what I shall say are questions that I answer for myself, and no one concedes my right to do so more thoroughly or cheerfully and cordially than President Roosevelt.

"Neither in accepting the invitation nor in canceling the engagement did I have any thought of the Administration one way or the other, and would not have been influenced thereby one iota if I had. I have not made any attack upon the Administration. I have supported the Administration in all its propositions and policies, agreeing with it thoroughly, except in the proposition to remedy railway evils by conferring the ratemaking power on the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

"I believe in remedying these evils, and that the Administration is to be commended for calling attention to them and asking Congress to legislate on the subject, but I don't believe the best way to do this is to confer the ratemaking power on the Inter-State Commerce Commission or any other Governmental agency."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—That the great Foraker revolt against the Administration is assuming a complexion not satisfactory to the Senator himself, and that the Administration has won first blood, is the general understanding of the situation here. Supporters of the Administration were wearing broad grins tonight when the news that the Senator had backed out of his Philadelphia speech became known.

This result is generally ascribed to the decided attitude taken by the Administration in letting it be clearly known that no friend of the President would take a hand in the Philadelphia fight. It is considered here that as a tactical move that was unsurpassed. It drew a broad line of demarkation between Foraker and the friends of the Administration; it left him solitary, and made the significance of his attitude unmistakable. By it Foraker was forced to decline the invitation or else pose openly as the enemy of the Administration. In such a position there was too much danger. Foraker was obliged to desert his friend Penrose, even at the hazard of the Pennsylvania delegation in the convention of 1908.

Mr. Foraker has never openly broken with the Administration. Not a single Republican Senator or Representative, even among the President's bitterest enemies, has ever done that.

That the Ohio Senator has been forced to abandon one part of his anti-Administration programme is a matter of much self-congratulation among admirers of the President here. "The pace was too hot for him" is the general expression. It is now beginning to be believed that when Mr. Taft goes to Ohio and begins to announce the President's views and policy on rate regulation, Mr. Foraker will again find the pace too hot for him, and will have to cease assailing that policy. That this is the real object of Mr. Taft's trip is not doubted here.

ROOT ON A CURE FOR WAR.

Talks to Sanitary Congress on Benefits of International Meetings.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Delegates from twelve South American republics and from the army, the navy, and the Marine Hospital Service, attended the opening of the Second General International Sanitary Convention here to-day, Surgeon General Wyman presiding. Secretary Root and Mr. Taylor, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, welcomed the gathering. Mr. Quesada, the Cuban Minister, responded.

Dr. Wyman asked consideration of the advantages of international agreements in the interest of the health of their peoples. Secretary Root declared:

"I believe almost all war and bitterness between nations result from misunderstanding, from a failure of the people of one country to appreciate the people of another. The cure of national misunderstandings is acquaintance, the cultivation of good relations and friendship. May you accomplish much for that common humanity for which we all join in most sincere wishes and devout prayers."

This afternoon the delegates inspected the city water filtration plant.

O'REILLY GOT EVEN.

Sent Ancient Horse to the Firemen Who Played a Joke on Him.

Fireman Oppe of Truck No. 7, Twenty-eighth Street, near Third Avenue, was notified yesterday by the New York Central Railroad Company that a horse consigned to him from Rochester, and intended as a gift to his company, was in the railroad yards at Mott Haven. Oppe sent a small boy after the animal.

Late yesterday afternoon the horse ambled up to the truck company's house. It was gaunt and bony and might have served as Don Quixote's charger. The boy was assisted to the ground and was hardly able to walk.

"Dat wuz a tuff job," he said. "It wuz wolse dan ridin' on a rail."

Attached to the old horse was a card announcing that the donor was Joseph J. O'Reilly, the editor of The Chief, a paper devoted to the interests of the fire and other city departments. When he went to Rochester several days ago to be married the firemen of Truck No. 7 substituted an old fireman's uniform for O'Reilly's wedding suit.

Now O'Reilly is even.

BANKER TO END DAYS IN DEPENDENTS' HOME

Jefferson P. Raplee Goes to City's Farm Colony.

KNEW VANDERBILT AND GOULD

His Firm Once Did a Yearly Business of $500,000—Crash in 1869 Overwhelmed Him.

Supt. George Meeks of the Bureau of Dependent Adults was sitting in his office, at the foot of East Twenty-sixth Street, yesterday afternoon, when in walked an old man with a light overcoat over his arm and carrying a suit case. Mr. Meeks was struck by his resemblance to Chauncey M. Depew, which was accentuated by side whiskers and a clean-shaven upper lip, but was rather spoiled by the fact that the old man's black suit was shiny at the elbows, frayed at the cuffs and buttonholes, while his linen showed the marks of trimming at the edges.

The old man laid down the suit case, folded the overcoat carefully over a chair, drew out a card case, and handed to Mr. Meeks the last card in it. The card bore the name "Jefferson P. Raplee."

Mr. Meeks had met Mr. Raplee once before, but only for a moment. He remembered him, however, as a banker and one of the best-dressed men on Broadway. He said he was glad to see him again, and hoped he would be able to serve him in some way.

"Yes," said Mr. Raplee, "you can serve me. You may think it strange that on such slight acquaintance I should ask a favor, but I wish to go to the Farm Colony on Staten Island, where now and then you send poor people. I don't know the prelim—"

"Hold on, Mr. Raplee!" exclaimed Mr. Meeks. "Am I to understand that you—you are in distress and wish to—to—"

"There is no need to avoid the point, Mr. Meeks," said the old banker, with a smile. "I have outlived nearly all my friends, and the few that are left have been so kind that I will not let them help me any more. I wish to go to the Farm Colony."

Mr. Raplee, who is 86 years old, then told his story. He is a son of Nehemiah Raplee, who, up to the time of his death, was a County Judge at Dundee, Yates County, N. Y. The elder Raplee was a leader of the Democratic Party in Dundee, and was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention in 1860.

Upon Nehemiah Raplee's death, his son, Jefferson, found himself heir to a fortune, which he invested in the banking business at Dundee. The firm was known as the J. P. Raplee Banking House. Jefferson Raplee also opened a branch of the banking house at 137 Broadway, this city, at which time he became acquainted with Commodore Vanderbilt, Jay Gould, and John P. Blair.

The house of J. P. Raplee prospered for some years. The financier became interested in coal mines and a big carpet store on Broadway. His bank was capitalized at $200,000, he said, and did a yearly business of $500,000.

In 1869, however, a crash came in his affairs. He would not say how it came about, but blamed nobody, not even himself. Mr. Raplee began life again. Getting on in years, he found it difficult to face the hill, and said yesterday in Mr. Meeks's office that his means dwindled steadily, until three years ago, when he gave up the last office he occupied, at 136 Liberty Street. How he has lived since the old man would not say. He declined to state whether he had any relatives living or not.

Supt. Meeks was much moved by the story. He called a messenger, who, carrying the suit case and the overcoat, went with the old banker to the Battery. They went over the ferry to Staten Island, where at the Farm Colony Mr. Raplee will have a quiet home for the rest of his days.

Leaving the Superintendent's office, Mr. Raplee was heard to say:

"Wall Street would do for any man."

ORDER RESTORED IN MOSCOW.

More Workmen Out and Railroad Laborers May Strike.

MOSCOW, Oct. 9.—After the exciting events of the last three days, to-day passed in comparative tranquility. The strike of the bakers, printers, and car men continued, and was joined by the theatrical mechanics.

Two large gatherings of the strikers were held in the open air, at which red flags were waved, but otherwise the proceedings were orderly, and the manifestants dispersed of their own accord. There were no serious collisions with the troops and the feeling was much less tense. All the stores, except the Philipoff bakery, were open.

Traffic was resumed on all the streets with the exception of the Tverskoi Boulevard, the centre of the previous disorders, which was closed, with troops and police at all the intersecting streets. Detachments of Cossacks, dragoons, and mounted police patrolled the vicinity and kept the crowds moving. Infantrymen and cavalry were held under arms in the courtyards of the police stations in various quarters of the city.

The number of persons wounded in the previous disorders has not been definitely established, but it is believed to be about 100, of which number 25 are police or soldiers.

The railroad employes are threatening to join the ranks of the strikers.

SAYS HOPKINS MADE THREATS.

Mrs. Johnson Thinks Shooting May Have Been Premeditated.

Statements made yesterday by Mrs. Mary Johnson of 252 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, suggested the possibility that the killing of Mrs. Jessie Hopkins, who was shot by her husband, Denton H. Hopkins, at her home, 46 Johnson Street, on Saturday, in what was said to be a duel, was premeditated. Mrs. Johnson alleged that Hopkins while talking to her two weeks ago threatened his wife's life and showed two revolvers.

Mrs. Johnson is a sister of Mrs. James McNish, who rents a floor in the apartment house at 257 Greene Avenue, which Hopkins owns and where he lived. She said yesterday that while she was visiting her sister about two weeks ago Hopkins called her into a room which he used as an office and talked to her about his family troubles. He showed her a revolver with a long barrel, and then called her attention to a pistol with a stubby barrel, which was on the window sill. She said that Hopkins talked bitterly against his wife, declaring that he would not rest until he had taken her life.

The revolver with which Hopkins shot his wife had a long barrel, and the one she was supposed to have used had a stubby barrel. On the day of the shooting Harry D. Hopkins, the woman's son, declared that his mother did not possess a pistol.

Coroner Flaherty will hold an inquest into the death of Mrs. Hopkins to-morrow.

PRINCETON MAN MISSING.

Percy Kuttroff, '08, May Be Visiting Friends in West.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, Oct. 9.—The sudden disappearance of Percy Kuttroff, a Princeton student of the class of 1908, without any explanation, is causing considerable anxiety to the university officials. Kuttroff left his home in New York on Sept. 18 and told his family that he was going to return to college, which opened Sept. 20. He reached Princeton and was seen around here for about a week, although he did not register at the university office.

Last Thursday his brother came down to look for him. He failed to find the young man. Yesterday he sent a detective, who, with the university Proctor, is making a thorough investigation.

It has been learned that Kuttroff sent his trunk to Princeton by express, but has not taken it from the office. He was a popular student, and ranked well in his freshman work last year. He was to occupy a room in Blair Hall this term, which his family has asked to be reserved for him until something definite has been learned. In his habits he was very quiet, and none of his friends can explain his disappearance.

Percy Kuttroff is a son of Adolph Kuttroff, a dealer in colors, who lives at 17 East Sixty-ninth Street. When a reporter called there last night the following note was the result of an inquiry:

"Percy has gone West to visit friends. Thanks for the interest which you have taken in the case.

"Adolph Kuttroff."

Percy Kuttroff is described as a youth of about 17 years, athletic, good natured, and very fond of horses. Up to a year ago Mr. Kuttroff kept an extensive stable, but since the death of Mrs. Kuttroff last year this has been reduced to two saddle horses, which are kept for the use of the son.

97 DOUGHERTY INDICTMENTS.

Shortage in Peoria School Funds May Aggregate $750,000.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 9.—The Grand Jury this afternoon reported eighty-four indictments against Newton C. Dougherty, in addition to the thirteen already found. Forty-five of these are for forgery and thirty-nine are for embezzlement. Bonds were fixed in the sum of $1,000 on each indictment for forgery, and for $500 on each for embezzlement, making a total of $64,500.

It is estimated that the total shortage for the twenty-seven years of Dougherty's management of the school funds was $750,000.

Dougherty, when interviewed to-day, did not indicate any anxiety for his future.

"If I have done anything wrong," he said, "I suppose I ought to be punished for it. My prosecution can be ascribed to the wave of reform which seems to be sweeping over the country."

He was asked to explain the charges of shortages in the school funds.

"Oh, I suppose there are errors. I am not a bookkeeper, but a teacher, and I know nothing of bookkeeping; it is possible that many errors will be found."

FULL CONTROL FOR TAFT.

Told the President He Must Be Supreme in Canal Matters.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Secretary Taft will sail on a naval vessel from New Orleans for Panama about Nov. 1. It is not his intention to remain very long on the Isthmus, his main object being to talk with Gov. Magoon and Engineer Stevens and to look over the situation as it now exists in the way of construction and preparation.

Secretary Taft has made it plain that if he is to have the responsibility for the canal, he must be supreme in its management, and there must be no intermediary between himself and the President. The Secretary will take absolute charge of all the important business transactions regarding the canal construction and its management, operating through the Isthmian Commission.

COLON, Oct. 9.—Members of the Advisory Board of Consulting Engineers of the Panama Canal, who are still inspecting the work, have been much annoyed by the bites of grass lice.

Come Up Where You Belong.

Perhaps you know why you fail in the plans for money, fame and position.

Some don't.

Just why the brain does not produce practical money making results is a puzzle to many men.

Strong, healthy, natural brains cannot be made from the food most men eat, and good brains can't work sharp when slugged to weakness by coffee.

Unsuccessful brains come from improperly selected food and from coffee drinking.

Coffee affects the stomach and nerves, thence the brain and prevents proper digestion of even good food.

A distinct improvement in mental power will follow in a week or ten days after coffee is left off and Postum taken on.

The results are multiplied when the brain-building food Grape-Nuts is used twice a day.

There are well established and very clearly understood reasons for these sure results from the change in food and drink. You can make Money, Position, Fame if you have the kind of Brain that works that way.

Postum well boiled produces a delicious beverage, satisfying and nourishing.

Quit drugging and poor food and Come Up Where You Belong.

THE PASSING OF RIP VAN WINKLE

When, at Wallack's Theatre last night, Rip Van Winkle asked in tearful accents: "Are we then so soon forgot?" there must have been an unspoken negative on many lips. Certainly Thomas Jefferson only succeeds in emphasizing the sense of a loss already keenly felt.

It was a dubious experiment at best—this appearance of Joseph Jefferson's son in a play which the genius of his father had lifted to a plane far above anything which its scant merits justified. It might have been less dubious, perhaps, if the son, like the father, had served a long and faithful apprenticeship. But in any event it could not have been much more trying for both actor and auditor.

That is not to say that the new Jefferson is entirely incompetent, for he has learned some of the tricks of the trade. But the underlying sympathy, the poetic imagination, above all the peculiarly subtle artist feeling—all these he lacks. And without these the Rip Van Winkle of Dion Boucicault's crude old drama becomes almost entirely a thing of wood and paint. Almost—because even without the inspiring breath of art, the old figure has a glamour of poetry about it. And that is an advantage for which the actor cannot be too thankful. We felt ourselves moved in the scene of Rip's return to his home—a stranger in the midst of his own people. But it was the tear of memory that moistened the eye. That, to-day, is the greatness of Joseph Jefferson's Rip Van Winkle. We hear the old lines, see the old masks, and forget the present, while living in a fond, regretful recollection of the past.

As for Thomas Jefferson's "Rip" it is the outward shell. That it would be that and nothing more was apparent almost at the beginning. Who that has heard it will ever forget the note of pathos with which Rip laments Gretchen's ill-treatment of his dog Schneider, who could evoke the catch in the throat on the "I'd rather she'd beat me than my dog." We never saw Schneider, but we always felt certain that there was a Schneider. And we were nearly as much cut up about his death as was old Rip Van Winkle himself.

But not so last night.

One might go into further detailis and extol those scenes with the children in which in spite of all the artificiality one was moved to tears; one might dwell on the mellow humor of Rip's continued taking and breaking of the pledge, of the joy we felt in his "here's to you and your family, may they all live long and pr-rosper," but to what end? It is but a little while since the voice was stilled—we remember, we regret, and the memory and the regret will be as strong with others.

There is little humor in Thomas Jefferson's Rip—less humor than pathos, for there the art tells more than in the situations that call for tears. In appearance he is not unlike his father, and, like his father, he plays Rip with a German dialect—always in questionable taste in a play where all the characters supposedly speak one tongue. But, unlike his father, Thomas Jefferson forgets his dialect about half the time, with a peculiarly disconcerting result.

There was not much illusion left in Rip Van Winkle last night. Partly, that was the fault of the old play, which is as creaky as the joints of old Rip himself after his sleep of twenty years; but more it is the fault of the actor in the rôle. There are probably a thousand actors on the American stage to-day who could play Rip as well as Thomas Jefferson plays it; we have no doubt that there are many who could play it much better: we are certain that there is not one who could play it as Joseph Jefferson did. Rip Van Winkle is dead. Let him rest in peace.

MRS. CARTER REVIVES "ZAZA."

A Large Audience Greets the Star at the Belasco Theatre.

Mrs. Carter and her support were well received in the revival of "Zaza" at the Belasco Theatre last evening. The star seemed to be in exceptional sympathy with the rôle and played with power and emotion. Mrs. Carter's Zaza is such a familiar figure to local theatregoers that detailed consideration is unnecessary at this time. A large audience welcomed her and she received a great number of flowers.

Of the company Charles A. Stevenson appeared as Bernard, Harold Howard as the Duc de Brissac, and Lizzie Conway as Rosa Bonne. The settings had been newly painted and were effective, while the stage management as usual, reflected Mr. Belasco's skill.

"TOMORROWLAND" IS STAGED.

Problems of the Thirtieth Century Are Solved by Mr. Bangs.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 9.—"2905 or Tomorrowland," by John Kendrick Bangs and Manuel Klein, was produced at the Academy of Music this evening. The author solves for the thirtieth century the servant question and other fixed problems of to-day with automatic lackeys, liquid air police, and other wonderful creations. Money has lost its value and the billionaire is anxious to turn back time.

The cast is headed by Christie Macdonald. The other principals are Helen Marvin, Helen Hale, Clayton White, Edward Martindell, Reuben Fax, Clarence Harvey, and William Weeden.

"THE VIRGINIAN" AGAIN.

Dustin Farnum Seen in His Old Part at the Academy.

"The Virginian," which has successfully weathered three seasons, began an engagement of three weeks last evening at the Academy of Music. Dustin Farnum appeared in his old part of "The Southerner," but with the exception of Frank Campeau as Trampas and one or two minor parts the company was an entirely new one.

The performance last evening moved smoothly. Mr. Farnum won the favor of the audience with his characterization of the Virginian. As Trampas, Mr. Campeau was also applauded. Mary Conwell was a newcomer in the part of Mollie, and played the part to the satisfaction of the large audience. Bennet Musson was cast for Steve.

ELFIE FAY'S SPEECH.

"Gee! Looks as If I Was Dead," She Says, as the Flowers Heap the Stage.

Elfie Fay, with a method all her own, made her first appearance as a star in New York last night when she gave "The Belle of Avenue A" at the Grand Opera House before an audience that packed that large play house. Miss Fay's success was instantaneous, if you can base an opinion on an audience's behavior.

With "The Belle of Avenue A" the play is not the thing. Instead of a musical comedy the vehicle for Miss Fay's stellar début might have been called, more properly, "rough-house farce." No one came to see dramatic entities; they came to see Miss Fay.

After the second act a procession of ushers marched down the aisle carrying floral pieces of extraordinary size and variety. There were so many that it took twenty-five minutes to pass them up on the stage to the smiling star. When they had all been placed some one cried "Speech!" and the cry was taken up until Miss Fay, looking immensely pleased, stepped forward. She cast one look at the floral display, and said:

"Gee, looks as if I was dead, doesn't it?" When the shout that went up had subsided, she continued:

"This is only the second speech I ever made, and I want to say that I worked hard to land where I am. I hope that some day I will be on Broadway."

Maud Earle, Marie Dumont, Nat Fields, and Frank Hollins shared honors with the star.

AT THE THEATRES YESTERDAY.

"In the Palace of the King," the dramatization of Marion Crawford's novel in which Viola Allen starred some seasons ago, was revived yesterday at the Fifth Avenue Theatre by the Proctor all-star company. In the afternoon Isabelle Evesson played the role of Dolorss, while in the evening the part was played by Amelia Bingham.

Keith's top-liners were Hal Davis and Inez Macauley, who presented a short play, entitled "Pals." Other important acts were those of Harry Le Clair, Merian's dogs, and James Thornton.

Lillian Russell was still the big feature at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre. She sang a new selection of songs. Dolan and Lenmarr, Fields and Ward, and the Lloyd Brothers were also on the bill.

Robert Edeson returned to the city last night at the Harlem Opera House, where he presented his play of last season, "Strongheart." The support last seen here appeared with Mr. Edeson.

"The Sporting Duchess," with the same production as seen a few weeks ago at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, was played by the stock company at Proctor's 125th Street Theatre.

At Hurtig & Seamon's, Olive May and John W. Albaugh, Jr., occupied the places of honor. Among other entertainers were Edward Clark, Ethel Hoag, the Juggling McBans, and McBride and Coakley.

Roy Knahenshue was the stellar attraction at Hammerstein's Victoria. He gave a brief and interesting lecture explaining his means of aerial navigation. Others were Six International Female Wrestlers, Rice and Cohen, Charles Seamon, and Stuart.

Nat M. Wills appeared last evening at the Fourteenth Street Theatre in "The Duke of Duluth."

At the Alhambra, Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon appeared in "A String of Pearls," initially produced at the Colonial. Emma Carus was the extra feature on the programme. Others were Mason and Keeler and Maybelle Adams.

B. E. Forrester's production, "Bankers and Brokers," in which Yorke and Adams are appearing, seemed to please the patrons of the American last evening.

The afternoon and evening concerts by the Budapest Hungarian Band and the new additions to the World in Wax are the attractions at the Eden Musée.

"La Tosca" was revived by the stock company at the Yorkville Theatre last evening. Eugene Moore and Mabel Montgomery appeared in the leading roles.

"The Ninety and Nine" was the offering at the West End. The melodrama seemed to please the audience.

Harry Houdini, the handcuff king, was again the head-liner at the Colonial. Emmet Corrigan, Hyams and McIntyre, Burke and La Rue, Macart's monkeys, and George Wilson were others.

The vaudeville at Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre was headed by Wheelock's Indian Band. Others on the programme were Mrs. Stuart Robson, Thompson's elephants, Gould and Suratt and Clarice Vance.

"The Shadow Behind the Throne" began a week's engagement at the Metropolis last evening.

In the Curio Hall at Huber's Museum, Mme. Laurens and her lions were the special features.

Two ballets were on the bill at the Circle, entitled "The Golden Crook" and "The Four Seasons."

Hal Reid's musical drama, "The Street Singer," with Jessie Mae Hall as the star, held the boards at the Murray Hill last night.

"Fast Life in New York" was portrayed to the satisfaction of the audience at the Third Avenue last evening.

"Dangers of Working Girls" was the melodrama at the New Star.

The attractions that remain in the city are: "A Yankee Circus on Mars" and "The Raiders," at the Hippodrome; James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering in "The Walls of Jericho," at the Savoy; Chauncey Olcott in "Edmund Burke," at the Majestic; David Warfield in "The Music Master," at the Bijou; Henry Dixey in "The Man on the Box," at the Madison Square; "The Prince Chap," at Joe Weber's; "The Prodigal Son," at the New Amsterdam; Joseph Wheelock, Jr., in "Just Out of College," at the Lyceum; John Drew in "Delancey," at the Empire; Mrs. Fiske in "Leah Kleschna," at the Manhattan; Robert Loraine in "Man and Superman," at the Hudson; Maxine Elliott in "Her Great Match," at the Criterion; "The Rogers Brothers in Ireland," at the Liberty; "It Happened in Nordland" and the burlesque of "The Music Master," at the Lew Fields'; Sam Bernard in "The Rollicking Girl," at the Herald Square; Edna May in "The Catch of the Season," at Daly's; McIntyre and Heath in "The Ham Tree," at the New York; "The Pearl and the Pumpkin," at the Broadway; Lulu Glaser in "Miss Dolly Dollars," at the Knickerbocker, and De Wolf Hopper in "Happyland," at the Lyric.

THEATRICAL NOTE.

Claire Heliott, the European lion trainer, arrived in New York yesterday. She will appear with her seventeen lions at the Hippodrome next week.

Julian Mitchell's production in this city of the new musical play, "The Eight Princesses," has been postponed until Tuesday, Oct. 24, when it will open at the Majestic Theatre. In the cast are Aimee Angeles, Eva Davenport, Bessie Wynn, Latta Faust, James Marlowe, and Charles Barry.

The Shubert-Fisher-Perley production of "The Nazarene," which was to have opened last night at the Empire Theatre, Newark, will not be produced until Wednesday. The company includes Charles Dalton and Bertha Westbrook.

Curley Renominated in Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 9.—Ex-Representative Thomas F. Curley, whose seat in last year's Legislature was declared vacant following his sentence to serve sixty days in jail for participation in civil service frauds, was unanimously nominated for Representative this afternoon by the Executive Committee of the Democratic City Committee, dissolving a tie at the September primaries.

JEROME AND TAMMANY.

A Story Now That If Indorsed He Will Keep Off the Stump.

Another story got around last night that District Attorney Jerome was "sliding up to" Tammany Hall. Although he is adhering to his declaration not to give any pledge to get any nomination or indorsement, it was declared last night that Mr. Jerome had informed two personal friends, who are in good standing with Tammany, that there is no basis for the fears said to exist in Tammany Hall concerning what he would do if indorsed at the Democratic County Convention Thursday night.

According to these persons, the District Attorney, should Tammany place him on its ticket, would make no speeches in the campaign, but would devote his time to his office and a study of the insurance investigation. Furthermore, they say that to them Mr. Jerome declared that he had not the slightest intention of becoming a factor in the Gubernatorial situation next year, so that any idea on the part of Tammanyites that he might be in the way of McClellan would be groundless.

The meeting of the three men was a casual affair, but that it was the intention of the District Attorney to have his views repeated at Tammany Hall is the belief said to be held by the men in question, and they promptly conveyed the information to Charles F. Murphy. Mr. Murphy would not discuss the matter. Later it was learned that there was no change in the attitude of Tammany toward Mr. Jerome. The chances seem to be against his indorsement.

That Justices Ingraham and Gildersleeve would be renominated for the Supreme Court, and that the third place on the slate would go to Judge Newburger of the Court of General Sessions, was the general belief at Tammany Hall yesterday, although the friends of Corporation Counsel Delany were putting up a hard fight to get a Supreme Court nomination for him. They declared that he had not been sidetracked, as reported.

There has been something of a mix-up over the nomination for Sheriff, the Sullivanites putting up a fight to land the place for Patrick H. Keahon, leader of the Seventh District. Although Fire Commissioner Nicholas J. Hayes is the choice of Mr. Murphy there may be a shift between now and Thursday night. In such an event Mr. Keahon would be named for Sheriff and Mr. Hayes for County Clerk.

To-night the Tammany Assembly District Conventions will be held and to-morrow night the Aldermanic Conventions will be held.

JEROME CAMPAIGN OPENING.

The District Attorney Will Speak In Carnegie Hall on Oct. 19.

District Attorney Jerome will open his campaign on Thursday night, Oct. 19, at Carnegie Hall. Mr. Jerome will speak and make known the lines upon which he will conduct his campaign.

Jerome headquarters were opened last night at One Hundred and Forty-third Street and Amsterdam Avenue. The headquarters are being maintained by Tammany men, two of whom, John P. Leo and Auckland Cordner, are said to be members of the Tammany General Committee.

There was considerable talk yesterday among the supporters of Mr. Jerome as to the effect the Republican situation would have on his prospects for a Tammany indorsement. Some were of the opinion that as the confidence of Tammany in its ability to win increased the chances of Mr. Jerome being indorsed would be lessened. Others held the view that as the Republicans were now certain to indorse Mr. Jerome, having no one else in sight to bear the burden of their campaign, Tammany would indorse him in order to take the last prop from under the Republican campaign.

FOR JUSTICES, DEMOCRATIC.

Municipal Court Conventions Nominate Lynn, Hoyer, and Herman.

Democratic Judiciary Conventions were held last night in the First, Second, and Fourteenth Municipal Court Districts of Manhattan. Only these three districts elect Justices this Fall.

Justice Wauhope Lynn was nominated in the First to succeed himself, and Justice John Hoyer was nominated to succeed himself in the Second. In the Fourteenth, which was created by the last Legislature, Moses Herman was the nominee. The First District Convention was held at 141 Hudson Street, the Second at 48 Madison Street, and the Fourteenth at the Osceola Club, at 135 East Seventy-eighth Street.

Justice Lynn and Justice Hoyer were appointed by Mayor McClellan. Mr. Herman, who was nominated in the Fourteenth, is a lawyer of 229 Broadway, and lives at 335 East Sixtieth Street. He was an Assistant District Attorney under Col. Asa Bird Gardiner and Eugene A. Philbin.

FULLER FOR JUSTICE.

Brooklyn Assemblyman Nominated in One of the New Court Districts.

The Democrats of the Sixth and Seventh Municipal Court Districts of Brooklyn made nominations last night for Justices of those courts. The districts are new, having been created by the Legislature of 1905. The term of the office is ten years and the yearly salary $6,000.

In the Sixth District Assemblyman Charles H. Fuller was nominated. Fuller first came into notice by defeating Jacob D. Remsen, sponsor of the Remsen Gas bill, at the election of 1904. Republicans say his nomination insures the election of a Republican.

John F. Hylan of the Twentieth Assembly District was nominated for Justice in the Seventh District at Congress Hall, on Atlantic Avenue, in East New York. The Seventh District is almost certain to go Democratic. McCarren men made the slates and put them through.

HEARST'S ANSWER THURSDAY

Municipal Ownership League to Hear It at a Mass Meeting.

There will be a mass meeting of the Municipal Ownership League forces Thursday night, when William R. Hearst will give his answer on the Mayoralty nomination. It has not been decided where the meeting will be held, but it probably will be in Carnegie Hall or Grand Central Palace.

If Mr. Hearst decides not to run, the Municipal Ownership forces will then decide whether they will put a third ticket in the field or indorse the Republican ticket.

FARMHAND IS ARRESTED IN TRIPLE MURDER CASE

He Was Near Scene of Crime, and Told of Hearing Shots.

TWO OTHERS ARE RELEASED

Alanson Graham, Accused by Beaten Woman, Offers Enthusiastic Aid to Middletown Police.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 9.—Milton Cuddeback, a farmhand, is under arrest here to-night on suspicion that he knows something of the murder of the aged Olney brothers and little Alice Ingerick last Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Davis, who were held in prison all night in the hope that something bearing on the case could be got from them, were released this afternoon.

It is reported to-night that Mrs. Ingerick, who was badly beaten, has recovered sufficiently to make a statement to the authorities, but as yet no action has been taken on it. Physicians of Mrs. Ingerick said to-day that it was probable that she would be unable to say anything for several days, and that her mind might be so affected that nothing lucid could be gained from her.

Cuddeback was arrested in a saloon in Port Jervis by two policemen from this city who had started an independent hunt for the murderer. He was employed by Horace Beakes on the farm adjoining the Olney place. He reported to his employer Saturday morning that on the day before, just after he had returned to his work picking apples in the orchard, he had heard three pistol shots and then three more in the Derby woods.

Cuddeback left his employer Saturday noon, and his whereabouts were unknown until he was found by the policemen. He was intoxicated. When he was taken from the train in this city he remarked:

"You fellows have brought me here to find out something about the murder, but you won't get anything out of me."

Alanson Graham, the neighbor who was taken into custody yesterday and released at midnight, went straight to his house near Howells, four miles from here. Early this morning he again appeared in Middletown and told Chief Brinkerhoff that he would assist in every way possible in clearing up the mystery. His services were accepted and he spent an active day. In fact, he became too enthusiastic, and this afternoon he had to be ordered from Police Headquarters.

The Rev. C. H. Cookman of St. Paul's M. E. Church conducted funeral services in an undertaking establishment at 2 o'clock this afternoon over the bodies of the Olney brothers, and they were buried in the Howells cemetery.

HAD SECRETS TO SELL IN VENEZUELAN SUIT

Witness Mentioned Bowen and "S. D." in Asphalt Case.

LETTER TO ROOSEVELT, TOO

One Witness Says Another Asked $5,000 for Letters Involving the State Department.

Additional testimony was taken yesterday before United States Commissioner Gilchrist in the suit of the Venezuelan Government against the New York and Bermudez Company, for $10,000,000 damages because of the company's alleged participation in the Matos revolution in 1901.

The testimony taken yesterday, together with all previous testimony taken in this city, Newark, and Philadelphia, will be offered when the suit is finally tried before the Court of First Instance in Venezuela this Winter. Lawyer Frank J. Dupignac represented the Venezuelan Government's side of the case, while John D. Lindsay, the New York and Bermudez Company's counsel, looked after the latter's interests.

Lawyer Dupignac introduced Frank Y. Baldwin to impeach the testimony of a man named Miller, whose affidavits in behalf of the asphalt company had been read at a hearing in Philadelphia. Baldwin said Miller had approached him with an offer to give valuable testimony on payment of $5,000.

The witness said he got copies of the evidence Miller proposed to furnish. Against the objections of Lawyer Lindsay, these copies were introduced and made a part of the record. The typewritten heads under which the alleged testimony was divided indicated plainly the character of the evidence. Some of the headings were:

Instructions from Secretary of State detrimental to you.

Documents showing Receiver Garner's official relations with the Pan-American Company, a subsidiary company of the A. L. Barber Company, from the inception of the company.

Copies of cables to Gen. Francis Greene from Receiver Garner.

Important letters regarding relations of Minister Bowen with S. D.

Extract from letters reflecting upon the reliability and status of Bowen. This would queer me in Philadelphia and Washington with Bowen.

Affidavit of "A. D. A." and proof of association of Receiver Garner, "A. L. B." and "O. E. T." in Pan-American Company, showing Garner as receiver was selling to himself.

"A. D. A." letter to Roosevelt.

My affidavit covering a letter from revolutionist sources sent via Nicoli, Anable, and Lindsay requesting arms, ammunition, and money for revolution.

Copy of receipt from the $1,000 man. I have notes and extracts from interesting correspondence.

Lawyer Dupignac then had the witness read a letter he had received from Miller, wherein the latter advised, "Your friends should take action quickly."

Mr. Lindsay asked that his objection to all this be noted on the record.

R. A. D. Thurber was called next, and supported an affidavit previously made by him. The witness said he had read a statement signed by Gen. Francis Greene wherein the latter denied that he had in any way participated in the Matos revolution.

"I am inclined," declared Mr. Thurber, "to believe any statement made by Gen. Greene. Judging by my business relations with him, I am inclined to believe that his statement is correct, but I also am constrained to believe that other officers of the National Asphalt Company and its subsidiary corporations were more or less implicated in the affairs of the revolutionists."

MR. HUGHES.

To Mr. WOODRUFF's wordy and sophistical speech Mr. HUGHES made a dignified and adequate reply. He refused the nomination tendered to him in a manner that would have made less hardened partisans than the Committee of Notification blush to have offered it.

Mr. HUGHES's mind acts with a certain deliberation and elaboration that may easily give the impression of slowness, but in this case it acted with cruel precision. He told Mr. WOODRUFF and the committee in substance that the work he had in hand was absolutely so inconsistent with the position they offered him that he could not undertake both without injury to both, and he left the implication very plain that he could not betray the work of investigation without perfidy. Certainly it was silly, not to say worse, to ask him to abandon the work of investigation. As he has so flatly refused, there is this consolation for the folly of the Republican politicians: it gives a certain guarantee that the investigation will be conducted to the end without bias.

AN INSULT TO BROOKLYN.

Really Mayor MCCLELLAN must feel as if his fair name were being used as a cloak for a good many political offenses. The latest and most outrageous is the nomination as President of the Borough of Brooklyn of the notorious JAMES W. RIDGWAY. Since Mr. MCCLELLAN gives to Mr. MURPHY the only possible claim he can have on the toleration of decent men, and since Mr. MURPHY'S recent alliance with Mr. MCCARREN gives to the latter the only chance the latter could have of control in Brooklyn, the chain of causation runs straight enough to the Mayor. He may plead, of course, that he is not responsible for what his party machine does in the several boroughs, but the connection cannot be a pleasing one to reflect on when so bad a thing would not and could not have been done but for the Mayor's association with the leaders who have done it. The cost of being a Tammany Mayor is pretty heavy and the items of the account turn up at every stage in politics.

It is conceded in Tammany circles that Brooklyn is a danger point even in this campaign, and that, though there is no prospect of the borough rejecting the candidate for Mayor, there is good reason to fear that other candidates may be turned down. The Presidency of the borough is a dignified and important office. Its powers for good or for ill are considerable, and, especially, a man of RIDGWAY'S type could do a lot of harm in it. He was for three terms the District Attorney of Kings County and held that office at the time that JOHN Y. MCKA[illegible]s election frauds in Gravesend were unearthed. It was found necessary to employ special prosecutors in these cases, and WILLIAM J. GAYNOR, now Judge of the Supreme Court, and at the time Judge-elect, urged the need of this course in the following language, cited by The World yesterday morning:

> The District Attorney of this county openly, in court, in the newspapers, and in public campaign speeches, sided with Mr. MCKANE and the other officials of Gravesend in the gross crimes which they were committing. Since the election he has, of course, done nothing to bring them to justice.

Now there are many honest and independent Democrats in Brooklyn whose memories go back these dozen years to the time at which RIDGWAY was betraying the public interests in a manner so conspicuous as to draw out this protest from a Democrat addressed to a Democratic Governor. They and all who are in sympathy with them should organize a movement to save the borough from the disgrace with which it is threatened. It will be all the easier to do so because the Republicans have, in Major EBSTEIN, a candidate worthy of all confidence and respect. He is a man of probity and energy, made an excellent record as Deputy Police Commissioner, is thoroughly acquainted with the needs of the borough, and is as obviously fitted as RIDGWAY is unfitted for the place. It is not a question of party loyalty; any party is injured by such a nomination as that of RIDGWAY. He should be cast out by a majority so telling that even MCCARREN would not dare to repeat the offense.

QUEER LABOR UNIONS.

We wonder what is the real standard of public honesty in the labor unions of Philadelphia. Their Central Union, with 124 affiliated organizations, met on Sunday, withdrew a ticket previously placed in nomination, indorsed the Republican ticket, voted thanks to Senator PENROSE for his services to union labor, and started a campaign against the City Party, led by Mayor WEAVER. The substance of the argument by which this extraordinary course was sustained was that the Republican organization had favored the union policies, putting only union men on public works in the organized trades, enforcing an eight-hour day and union wages, and supporting eight-hour laws in State and Federal legislation. "If we stand by the party, the party will stand by us," was in effect the sole plea.

It is not at all certain that the reform party would not be just as favorable to union policies as the Republicans have been, though in the nature of the case it is not under the control of a few men who could make a bargain with the union leaders. But the avowed basis of the support given by the union men to the Republicans is the assumption that the unions will forgive and aid rascality in order to advance their own selfish interests. That is an atrocious doctrine. The leaders of the Republican machine in Philadelphia have been exposed in cheating the city, in diverting public funds, in debauching public officers, in procuring fraudulent elections, and in corruptly delaying and preventing public improvements needed for the health and security of the people. With the labor leaders all this counts for nothing as long as the guilty men will help the labor unions. Nothing could more tend to undermine the public conscience and bring upon the city evils from which the laboring class must suffer most than such an unprincipled line of conduct as this. And it ought to tend to the weakening of the unions themselves.

TOO MUCH ZEAL.

We may trust the common sense and good judgment of Gov. FOLK to restrain the bumptiousness of Insurance Superintendent VANDIVER of Missouri. It is plain enough that in notifying President MCCALL that if his company's contributions to Republican campaign funds were not returned to its treasury within the next thirty days the New York Life Insurance Company would be forbidden to do business in Missouri, Supt. VANDIVER was actuated by some other motive than an intelligent regard for the interests of Missouri policy holders of the company. What that motive was is not very material. There is some plausibility in the conjecture that Mr. VANDIVER is an ardent Bryan man, and resents the faults of Mr. MCCALL'S administration somewhat more earnestly on his political side than on his moral side. If that be true, his action should serve as a solemn warning to all Presidents of life insurance companies that the giving of campaign contributions is a mighty risky business. For as soon as it is known that they have augmented the campaign funds of one party, Superintendents of Insurance belonging to the other party will have a double reason for calling them to account. It may be, of course, that Mr. VANDIVER has an idea that in thus publicly rebuking insurance mismanagement in New York he exhibits himself in an attitude likely to make a most favorable impression upon the people of Missouri. The impression he makes upon well-informed policy holders of the company is likely to be the reverse of favorable.

The Missouri statute relating to the withdrawal of the privilege to solicit life insurance business in that State is loosely drawn, but we are unable to find any warrant of authority for the action the Superintendent has taken. In the first place, he has himself made no examination of the affairs of the New York Life, he has no report of any such examination by any person appointed by him, and he has before him no statement of the company justifying the action he has taken. Moreover, the company is not "in an unsound condition," it is not "insolvent," and it is untrue "that its capital or fund is impaired." Mr. VANDIVER has not the slightest reason for suspecting that the continuance of the company in business "is hazardous to the public or to those holding its policies." Nothing in the disclosures made by the Armstrong Committee, serious as they are in their effect upon individual reputations, presents the company itself in any light which need give uneasiness to the holders of its policies. If Mr. VANDIVER had been concerned only with the interests of Missouri policy holders he would doubtless have paid a visit to the City of New York in order that he might inform himself somewhat more definitely concerning the solvency and financial condition of the New York Life Insurance Company.

Senator ARMSTRONG, the Chairman of the Investigating Committee, uttered a telling criticism of the hasty and ill-considered action of Supt. VANDIVER, before leaving Rochester for New York on Sunday evening:

> These insurance companies are perfectly solvent and are able to carry out every contract they have made or may make. There is no reason for refusing to permit them to continue to do business. If Nevada proposes to do one thing, Missouri another thing, and some other State still another thing, there will be a chaotic condition of affairs. I believe there is due at least the courtesy to New York State to wait until the investigation is completed and our remedial legislation is applied.

To forbid one of the insurance companies under investigation to do business in any State is to inflict an injury upon it, and to that extent to do harm to its policy holders. The Insurance Departments of other States can afford to wait until the Armstrong Committee has completed its inquiry and made its report public. The New York Legislature will then attempt to provide remedies for the abuses revealed. If Insurance Superintendents in other States doubt the efficacy of the suggested remedies it will then be time for them to take action. Senator ARMSTRONG and members of his committee had a conference with several Western Insurance Superintendents before the inquiry began, and promised to submit to them, with their suggestions, the amendments to the insurance law which will be introduced at Albany this Winter. Any State Insurance Superintendent who was a reasonable man and faithful to his trust would be content to await the outcome of the investigation. Supt. VANDIVER himself is not so entirely free of responsibility for the long continuance of insurance abuses in New York that he can afford to put on airs of sudden ostentatious virtue. It was his duty to Missouri policy holders to uncover these abuses. He has been guilty of contributory negligence. His zeal is belated, and there is somewhat too much of it. Insurance abuses in this State are in the way of being very thoroughly cured without long-distance medication.

THE MONEY MARKET.

Not long ago Wall Street observers were marveling that the stock market could be unmoved by a larger reduction of loans than accompanied the Northern Pacific corner and panic. Now Wall Street is wondering at the stability of the stock market under an 8 per cent. money market. The explanation is similar in both cases. The liquidation of loans was apparent, not real. The loans were shifted to other borrowers, not reduced, and the situation was unimproved because it remained substantially unaltered, never having been fundamentally bad. Had it been bad it could not have been improved by so simple a device as shifting loans, and thus putting a better appearance upon the bank statement. Nobody would have had the had loans, and the banks would have been compelled to reduce their requirements of reserves in the old-fashioned painful manner. In other words there was a demonstration that there is now a second line of loanable capital, which operates as a reinforcement of the visible reserves by an invisible supply, not unlike that which sometimes embarrasses operators in the produce markets. Put otherwise, the situation was not what it appeared when construed by the official and accustomed indications.

The same is true of the apparently close working of the money market. It is a violation of tradition for an 8 per cent. money market to have so slight a sequel, and the prophets of ill were put to it for an explanation. They are on the wrong scent, for they are seeking for lack of values, instead of investigating the reality of the stringency which would exist if money were really fairly quoted at 8 per cent. When that is the case the interior money markets are higher, and relief from distress elsewhere is the occasion of the search for funds in New York. Nobody hears of distress anywhere else at this time. Money is not being borrowed to pay dividends or to replace diminishing profits or to bolster credit. When an eager demand has such motives there is a corresponding reluctance to supply it. It is the unwholesomeness of the demand which puts a baleful significance upon a close money market, not the price of money.

The present demand is characteristically wholesome. The bank exchanges denote a full and expanding volume of business, the crops are exceptionally large and valuable, speculation is moderate, and the crop of indigestibles calls for no remark. It is no sign of distress to want money to move the crops or to use to swell profits. This does not shock confidence, and supplies no reason for anybody selling stocks except under compulsion. The present phenomena in the local money market are symptoms of functional disturbance, not of organic disease. Wall Street's hypochondria, not the country's wasting disease, is denoted by the present money market. Wall Street is blue, while the country is ruddy with health. Wall Street neither understands the country nor even itself. It is hysterical and introspective and acts as though the Nation's profits were made where they are only handled, and as though the only benefit of the crops were the commissions and scalping profits made or lost by the philosophers of Bowling Green and Beaver Street. They are blind to the signs of the times. Congestion upon the railways, an excess of tonnage above the supply of rolling stock, is a familiar incident now, but was conspicuous by its absence in other close money markets when stocks were weak. The leading dealers report a good demand for bonds from the very centres to which currency is being shipped. It was largely out of town credit which supplied the local demand yesterday. Concurrently local reserves are still threatened by the interior demand for currency, which is something very different from a demand for banking accommodation.

What Wall Street needs is a little puff of air from the prairies, a little closer association with the men who really make values and deal in realities. EDWARD EVERETT HALE once supplied to the Lend a Hand Clubs a series of maxims which may be prescribed for Wall Street's present condition. "Look out, not in; look up, not down; look ahead, not behind." Wall Street needs to study the country more and itself less. It needs to get into touch with the country, and not to imagine it is the country, in any sense in which it would be representative of the country if law-made conditions permitted. For it is not forgotten that there are real as well as fanciful ills at the present time. The crudities of our currency system, and the rivalries between the banks and the trust companies, are, however, another story which cannot be gone into at this time.

THE CONFESSIONS OF J. D. ROCKEFELLER.

We are inclined to believe that the people who keep writing to us to protest against the amount of space which we give to the utterances of Mr. JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, at prayer meetings, receptions, and the other kinds of assemblages which pass with him for social functions, must be friends of his. At least they must be friends of old age and prosperity. Their mental attitude must be that of the sons of NOAH, who regretted and to the best of their ability repaired the indiscretions of the old man.

Such persons may read THE TIMES'S reports of Mr. ROCKEFELLER'S doings and sayings with their "faces backward." But why anybody who disapproves of the venerable financier should also disapprove of the amount of space which we give to his automatic disclosures is what we fail to see. Of course there is an almost unlimited number of old asses, and even a considerable number of old Midases, who make feeble and platitudinous addresses to Sunday schools in this country every Sunday in the year. We do not report them all. If we did, THE TIMES would not contain the things that would be reported. If we make an exception in favor of Mr. ROCKEFELLER the reason is plain. He is the only billionaire in the lot who makes Sunday school addresses. He is the richest man in America. And it cannot but be wholesome as well as interesting for the youth of America to be able to judge, from his own authentic utterances, what kind of man is the American who has most amply attained the kind of success which is perhaps increasingly coming to be accounted the only kind of success that is worth having.

Nor is the Rockefellerian eloquence entirely beneath contempt, even on its intrinsic merits. The description which the venerable billionaire gave of himself last Sunday as having formerly been a sponge, but being at present a pump, is really felicitous, the more because so many persons are visibly attempting to get hold of the handle. But we admit that his attempt to portray himself as an amiable patriarch is not altogether a success. Readers of DICKENS will remember, in "Little Dorrit," that old fraud Casby, who managed to pose as an amiable patriarch until the irate Pancks cut off his flowing locks. It was only then that he was exposed as what his creator describes as a "goggle-eyed booby," or words to that effect. It is superfluous to observe that Mr. ROCKEFELLER is already devoid of these adjuncts to the patriarchal make-up, and therefore cannot be deprived of them. Our readers who think that we make too much of Mr. ROCKEFELLER ought really to consider that what we are doing is to give him the public opportunity of showing how little he makes of himself.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

"Al" Adams Wants Justice!

We hope that our readers gave to the letter from ALBERT A. ADAMS which we printed Sunday the careful study it so well deserved, in particular as a revelation of the writer's character, and in general as an illustration of the amazing possibilities of the humen mind. All through the many years during which there were at least weekly references in the New York papers to ADAMS as the head of quite the vilest system of robbery that ever took well-organized form here, he very wisely allowed every charge against him not made in court to pass unnoticed. Thus he escaped with what, though large, was the minimum amount of public attention, and made as easy as possible the task of those whose protection he could so well afford to purchase. He was, therefore, credited with being that rarest of rarities, an intelligent criminal, and received the sort of respect which intelligence, even in a criminal, deserves and gets. But now he voluntarily comes out of the safe obscurity into which he was allowed to fall after his release from prison, and, for no better excuse than that his name had been recalled in connection with the revival of his old "game" in Brooklyn, he writes for publication a letter which the dullest of his former employés—yes, of his former victims, and comparison can go no further than that—could and would have told him was grotesquely injudicious. For in it this man, who heaped up a huge mountain of stolen pennies, assumed the tone of a man with a grievance. He whined that his "medicine," as he called it, had come some time after his participation in "the policy business" ceased, said that present mention of his "past troubles" was an injury to the enterprises in which "my fortune is now placed," and as culmination of impudence closed with—"RICHELIEU once said to LOUIS, King of France: 'My Liege, I ask but justice, the right of every man. The meanest artisan that crawls the earth, the very leper shrinking from the sun, may stand erect before Almighty Heaven and boldly ask for—Justice.'" Of all astounding spectacles, surely that of this man ADAMS, while he still has a fortune to "place," standing erect before Almighty Heaven and boldly asking for justice is best calculated to make the observer doubt his own eyes. The fellow evidently thinks that a few months in prison paid all his debt to society, identifies the sentence of a court with the end as well as—sometimes—the beginning of "justice," and sincerely believes that he is entitled to the tender consideration due to the man who has had "trouble." ADAMS in his letter gives no faintest trace of regret for a career in comparison to which that of the common gambler is honorable, but he is quite right in his assumption that what he received and is now receiving is not justice. His strange mistake is in imagining that he wants it.

A Mystery in This Case.

Nothing could well be more dangerous than adverse criticism of a judicial decision when the critic does not know all the facts in the case, and therefore we certainly do not intend even to say that there was something surprising in the release by a City Magistrate of Mr. JOHN W. GATES'S chauffeur without a fine or other punishment. Policemen have been known—or at least reported—before now to seek fame and a reputation for stern devotion to duty by showing to men of one or another sort of eminence a severity they would not take the trouble to exhibit in the case of this ordinary, unadvertised citizen. The fact remains, however, that the story of this policeman who made the arrest, as it reached the newspapers, seemed to be extremely straight, and it bore many marks of what may be called intrinsic probability. He said that when he tried to reserve a place for an ambulance that had been summoned to the waiting ferryboat, the automobile of Mr. GATES was forced into the advantageous vacancy, and that efforts to remove it resulted in the use of extremely harsh language and threats to "break" him, the policeman. Mr. GATES, in rebuttal, denied that the language used was anything worse than profane, and if he explained the attempt to get into the place reserved for the ambulance it didn't get into the reports of the episode. As the Magistrate summarily dismissed the case, he must have had information about it that we lack. And that is unfortunate, for our lack will be the public's, and, as a result, there will be created a more or less general, and of course false, impression that Mr. GATES'S chauffeur would not have escaped so easily and cheaply if he had been the chauffeur of somebody else. Such impressions are dangerous, as well as harmful, and whenever the giving of them can be avoided at the cost of explaining things a little, it is perhaps judicious—and magisterial—to do so. As the matter stands, we are under the painful necessity of supposing that we printed only one side of a story that has two sides, and that worries us a whole lot.

Competitors That May Compromise.

Now that the independent telephone companies have combined, or are on the point of combining, into one great organization, there will be some curiosity, not to say anxiety, to see whether the methods and policies of the new concern will differ materially from those which characterized its one great antagonist in the days when it was no bigger than its new rival. The Bell Company itself is, now at least, a combination of many companies that still have separate identities more or less real, and the new combination will be subjected to about the same influences and have about the same opportunities that have created for the old one its somewhat widespread unpopularity. And the same causes in like environments usually produce the same effects. With only two companies in the enormous American telephone field, a division of that field is much more likely to follow than fierce competition throughout the whole of it, and then—well, where will the people come in?

ROOSEVELT IN LATIN.

Text of the Ode That Gave Pain to The Springfield Republican.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A clipping in to-day's TIMES, from The Springfield Republican, bearing the caption "Roosevelt Latinized," prompts me to send you the full text of the poem mentioned, which is as follows:

A TEODORO ROOSEVELT
ODE LATINA.

Hoc tibi Pax tribuit: nomen, Roosevelte, perenne.
Dixit enim properans,
Caesariem foliis redimita virentis olivae,
Asthera per liquidum:

"Surgite, vos, nuptae! Matres, en surgite, castae,
Quas viduavit atrox
Mars. Lacrimis tendem vultus tergete madentss:
Pax ego, nata Deo.

"Adsum. Me Tenais prope ripas orta salutet
Fulva juventus heram.
Oceanum spectat croceum quae a litors pubes
Aera cruenta meos.

"Vertat in usus. Jam redeant ed prata juvenci
Ubera; multitidae
Jamque rotas celerent, Galvanica quas agitat vis, Prelaque dura strepant.

"Tuque, decora cui circumdedit ora corona,
Fortis ad arma, Cuba,
Per juga fulmineum cum Mississippius ardens
Te sequeretur eques.

"Res facunda dedit cui gestas dicers Clio
Magne sonente tube,
Quem regere Atlantis populum virtute potentem
Iure superba sinit.

"Nobilis, o salve, tu Weshingtonia proles:
Ts duce—non Scythicus
Nipponicusqua cruor maculabunt eequor Eoum—
Ts aspice magnanimo!"

—EDUARDO SAN GIOVANNI.

New York, Sept. 8, 1905.

The author, Mr. San Giovanni, is a local school teacher, who has achieved previous successes with Letin poetic renderings from Longfellow, Whittier, Holmes, Stoddard, and others. He is a pupil of Prof. E. G. Sihler of New York University.

As to Line 17, will it be necessary to put a macron on the ending of "corona" and the oppoeits mark on the ending of "Cuba"? Besides, I shall not disgrace the profound scholarship of your Springfisidian confrère by suggesting that in Line 19 "fulmineum" might after all agree with "te." Chipping in for the purpose of huying a Latin Primer, wherewith our Republican frisnd might hrush up some of his forgottsn lore, might be a friendlier act. But I positively decline to supply a "crib."

New Orleans's Low Death Rate.

From The New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The death rate in New Orleans is to-day lower than in any other Southern city. The following figures for the months of August and Septembsr will shed further light on the subject by showing the improvement made during the month. It should be noted, by the bye, that there were more people in New Orleans during September than in August, a large number of the Summer wandsrers having returned:

AUGUST.

Total deaths	735	From yellow fever.	217
Whites	535	Whites	210
Colored	200	Colored	7

DEATH RATE PER 1,000.

Whitss	26.86	Total	27.17
Colored	27.91

SEPTEMBER.

Total deaths	576	From yellow fever.	111
Whites	376	Whites	102
Colored	206	Colored	9

DEATH RATE PER 1,000.

Whites	18.57	Total	21.26
Colored	27.77

Comment is unnecessary. The figures for September show a lower death rate than in any Southern city save one; and those for the last week of September, as we have already noted, are the best in the South.

COMSTOCK GETS AFTER POOL.

Anti-Vice Agent Says Magistrate Violated the Code in His Court.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Oct. 6 I saw one John Berg sell a thousand obscene pictures to a young man on the street. I caused his arrest and seized the pictures. Two days prior I had had ths same pictures before Mr. Pool, and hs had committed ths party to ths Tombs in default of $500 for selling the same. There heve been a number of persons convicted for selling the seme pictures by the Special Sessions Court in this city. This court has exclusive jurisdiction under the code over such cases. Sitting as a committing Magistrate, Mr. Pool hed no right to refuse to receive my complaint; nor hed he any legal power or right to dismiss the defendant Berg. It was his duty to examine the witnesses under oath.

I hed prepered my complaint end the affidavit of the witness who bought the pictures, (who was the very man whom Pool had held two days hefore, as above mentioned,) end both of us hed signed the seme. The formel examination of the defendant hed been duly teken end signed by him. My papers were complete, and conformed to the requiremsnts of the code. I brought the witness up to be sworn by the Megistrete. He refused to swear either myself or witness. He took the picture, glanced at it, and said, "I don't ses anything out of the wey."

I said: "It is the eame picture that your Honor held the witness here presnt on, day before yesterday, end the Court of Special Sessions, which has exclusive jurisdiction in this cless of cases, has judicially declared this to be within the statutes, and three persone have already been convicted." Judge Pool eaid, "I don't care anything about whet the Special Sessions have done. They are Magistrates, like myself, and there is no proof before me of what they heve done." I replied: "I am ready to be sworn, and will produce the records of that court to support whet I sey. I have personal knowledge of the fects."

Pool then said: "I don't see anything the matter with the picture," end eaid to persons standing hy: "Do you?" holding the card out so thet those in front of hie desk could see it. He then laid my complaint and picture one side and said to me: "You go and sit down. I'll take the matter up later."

He then showed the picture to several persons, and they laughed over it. Later I saw the Clerk take it and show it to a young lawyer. The picture having been adjudged obscene and unlawful to show, I made up my mind not to sit quiet and see the law openly defied in a court of justice, and I left my seat, took the picture from the young man who was looking at it, end waited my turn to be heard. The Judge said he would not hear me then. I told him that I had three cases bsfore Justice Wyatt (they were the three which Pool had the day before refused a warrant in,) and esked him to dispose of my case so that I could go to the other court. Pool told me to go, and I went. Judge Pool did not, in my presence or hearing, give any orders to the Roundsman as reported in THE TIMES: "See thet this person steps down at once and leaves the courtroom."

I took my papers to the District Attorney, and he gave me a letter to Judge Pool. I was called into another court in the three cases, and sent the District Attorney's letter hy the officer in the case to Judge Pool. He afterward rsturned the letter, saying Judge Pool had gone without taking any action against the prisoner. The prisoner was afterward arraigned before Justice Wyatt and held for trial. Let the public judge of these facts es to which one has done his duty.

I insist that every person approaching a Judge upon the bsnch should do so with all respect. But I also insist that the Judge conduct himself so as to command respect. Let the Bar Association of this city appoint a committee to attend the eessions of court as held by Mr. Pool. I have been before the courts in this and other States for more than a third of a century, and I have never been so insulted, nor seen such extraordinary conduct as I have witnessed in Pool's court.

I represent a society chartered by the Legislature of the State to enforce certain laws. I have had a large experience, and prepare my cases with care. It was my right to be sworn to my complaint. I had a right to produce the judgment roll of the higher court, to show that the picture in question had been adjudged within the law. And it was the imperative duty of Mr. Pool to have heerd the evidence and held the defendant for trial. He chose to make a display in his court in violation of the code, by showing an obscene picture to divers persons who hed no interest in the matter and no right to see the same.

I eought to secure the proper enforcement of the law, and being thoroughly disgusted with the manner, treatment, and conduct of this man after he had mede a display of an obscene picture—one adjudged hy his superiors to be within the statutes—I gathered up my papers, left the courtroom, and went before a tribunal where laws were respected and the dignity which belongs to the proper administration of laws is preserved.

Go-tham, by All Means.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you kindly set the public aright in the pronunciation of the name of the new hotel at Fifth Avenus and Fifty-fifth Street, the Hotel Gotham. In the days of my childhood I was taught the rhyme of the "Three Wise Men of Gotham," which is my criterion. I notice that ths Century Dictionary gives the long o, like ths vowsl sound in boat. I hold that it should be pronounced as if spelled Goatbem. It is annoying to hear it called the Gotham, with ths short sound of the vowsl like ths o in not. If you can assist a passing stranger through a reader of THE TIMES here and elsewhsre for many years you will do a greet favor end at ths same time instruct the public.

After Ferryboat Smokers Again.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I hava been reading with much interest the letters on your editorial pags on the subject of smokers on ferryboats. Does it not seem a mockery to confine them to one side of the boat, while allowing them on deck, where the wind may blow the smoke to the other side? Give them all of one deck, say, the rear one, and keep them off the other; or, better still, confine them to one cabin. It can be no great privation to abstain for the few minutes it takes to cross the river.

HUGHES FOR GOVERNOR?

Named for Mayor by Odell Merely by Way of Pre-emption?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When Charles E. Hughes declined the Republican nomination for Mayor he certainly put the local Republican organization in a hole. But has it occurred to you that probably the Newburg statesmen who dictated the nomination of Mr. Hughes was looking further ahead than the Mayoralty campaign when he suggested Mr. Hughes's nomination to head the local ticket? A year from now Mr. Odell will have the fight of his life to maintain his control over the State organization. The leader who goes into the State Convention with the strongest candidate for Governor is the man who will win the State leadership fight. By nominating Mr. Hughes for Mayor Mr. Odell has pre-empted him as his candidate for Governor a year from now. Whom can the Platt-Bleck-Barnes combination suggest for Governor who will have the strength of Hughes?

Mr. Odell has lost the Mayoralty—if, indeed, he ever had a chance of gaining it—but how about the Governorship and control of the Republican State organization a year from now?

McCURDY AND ROCKEFELLER.

Latter's Scriptural Taste as Bearing on the Former's Profits.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Allow me to edd my word of commendation to thet of Mr. Penn for the moral instruction given by Mr. Rocksfeller and THE TIMES. His valuable precepts are given additional effect by the editorial skill with which they are placed to point the morel. For instance: In this morning's paper two parellel columns read:

"McCurdy family got $4,600,000 from the Mutual Life in saiaries and commissions," and "Mr. Rockefeller's text, 'The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want,'" evidently cause end effect. One slight chenge would vastly enhance the value of such instruction. At present it is somewhat doubtful whether the financiel reward precedes or follows the Divine blessing. Reverse the position and when it is pointed out by such a moral and financial expert as Mr. Rockefeller that the Lord's blessing brings so great a financial reward, you will bring about the greatest moral revival the world has ever seen.

COMMENT ON COMMAS.

An Exception Noted to a Punctuation Rule That Holds Good.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I think you err in advising "M. S. L." to delete the comma before the final "and." In a phrase containing more than two substantives, or adjectives or adverbs followed by a substantive. It is unwise to advise the general application of such a rule, as ths deleting of the comma may, in some instences, cause confusion if not positive misstatement of fact. Here is a case in point.

Ballots for the election of officers of a corporation were recently sent to the stockholders. Thess ballots contained the printed statemsnt: "The following officere are to he elected: President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer." In this instance the deleting of the comma before ths "and" caused a number of the stockholders to assume that one man filled two offices, while as a matter of fact the Secretary is one man, the Treasurer another. If the comma had been inserted, if the print shop had followed copy instead of a pernicious print-shop rule, the resulting confusion would have been avoided.

The Defeat of Judge Wright.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Our Judicial Convention is over. Judge Wright was caught just in time—the tide against him commenced to turn with the review of the situation in THE NEW YORK TIMES, when first mentioned in its editorial columns. Its momentum was increased immediatsly thereafter by a general acquiesence in your views, and the forcing of ths Justice to an explanation which feiled to explain; these things, with the combined efforts of various journals, gave the matter such speed that it was impossible to check it, and we find this morning a great deliverance by reason thereof. Most of the members of the bar of this district are inclined to e preyer and hymn of thanksgiving, and appreciate what a great factor has been the influence of THE TIMES, and we wish to place ourselves under everlasting obligations.

FIFTH DISTRICT.

Oswego, N. Y., Oct. 7, 1905.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I owe you my congratulations. No question your editorials moved, perhaps determiningly, ths bettsr sentiment that defeated Judge Wright's renomination. You can have no doubt, I think, but that the result is entirely justified by ths facts, so I shall not try to give you any further assurance, except to say thet it relieves the Supreme Court of an incubus. The factor that made Wright's success impossible was the firm stand of the Onondago delegation, headed by that big man and lawyer Judge Andrews, (formerly Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals,) which represented exactly the sentiment you expressed so effectively.

Grateful for Small Favors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having read in your paper of Saturdey's issue the article, "McCurdy the Martyr," with the feelings of a policy holder in the New York Mutual, who for the third of a century hoped year by year for an increase of his dividends with the solicitude of a hard-working man looking to the welfare of his family, I wish through your columns to express my gratitude to Mr. McCurdy for his strenuous efforts—so admirably elucidated in a foresaid article—not to meks thoss dividends less.

Public Amusers.

From The Montreal Gazette.

The New York public library has placed the works of George Bernard Shaw in the "restricted" list of that institution. Mr. Shaw has done his best to amuse the world, but he will probably be the first to admit that he has failed lamentably in comparison with this effort of the New York library authorities. Nothing funnier than their action in taking Mr. Shaw seriously has been done since Andrew Lang was accused of being a syndicate.

ELOISE LEE SHERMAN.

WHITTIER AND LOWELL FOR THE HALL OF FAME

Committee Counting the Votes at the New York University.

GEN. W. T. SHERMAN CHOSEN

Poe Again Defeated and Greeley and Webster Rejected — Historians, Teachers, and Jurists Fail.

Fame is a coy goddess, hard to woo and harder still to win. At the election for the names of famous men to be inscribed in the Hall of Fame of the University of New York yesterday morning only two authors were elected, James Russell Lowell and John Greenleaf Whittier, and not a single teacher.

The voting for those who are to be commemorated in imperishable bronze was intrusted to a jury of college Presidents, professors of history, and scientists, publicists, editors, authors, and jurists. The ballots of ninety-five have been received and were counted yesterday, and to them the nominations of Whitelaw Reid, the American Ambassador in London, will be added as soon as received. A few of the voters have not troubled to record their opinion. Fifty-one, a majority of the electors, is necessary for the success of any candidate.

The votes are being counted in the council chamber of the University of New York, in Washington Square, by a committee composed of Chancellor MacCracken, Dr. J. J. Stevenson, professor of geology, and Dr. Francis H. Stoddard, professor of English in the university.

The votes for American authors and American teachers were counted yesterday morning. There are also classes for teachers, scientists, soldiers, statesmen, and septimi who distinguished themselves in the service of this country, but were not of American birth, and the American women who did good work as authors, teachers, scientists, home or social workers, and septimi.

Lowell received 58 votes out of a possible 95; Whittier 52. Oliver Wendell Holmes came nearest to the requisite 51 of the unsuccessful, and scored 48, with William Cullen Bryant only 2 behind. The historians were rejected as one man, though their works are as well known as any authors of their class, Motley and Parkman each finding 46 supporters, Bancroft 39, and Prescott 25. Poe, who was defeated for election five years ago, was 8 short of the requisite number, with only 43. Fenimore Cooper was tied with him. Horace Greeley scored 34, only 4 members of his own craft voting for him, while William Lloyd Garrison with 20 came far below Noah Webster, who found 32 gentlemen of the present time to recognize his lexicographic toils.

The teachers were all denied a title to enduring fame. Phillips Brooks nearly attained it, but even if Whitelaw Reid is found to favor the great preacher he will lack one vote of the 51. Mark Hopkins got 38 votes and Matthew Simpson 29.

At the afternoon session only one more name was added to the list, that of William Tecumseh Sherman, who, with 57 votes, qualified as the only soldier to join Grant, Farragut, and Lee, whose names are already inscribed in the Hall of Fame. Nathaniel Greene came next, with 33, and behind him were Thomas J. Jackson, 21; George Rogers Clark, 20; George Henry Thomas, 18; Stephen Decatur, 18, and Philip Henry Sheridan, 17.

In the Jurist Class no one was elected, though Rufus Choate headed the list with 31 votes, a long way ahead of Oliver Ellsworth, 13; Roger B. Taney, 11, and Lemuel Shaw, 10. A curious thing was the scanty support that the Judges received from men of their own profession. Even Choate, with his 31 votes, got only 3 of them from the twenty-two jurist electors.

Thirty-two scientists were nominated as worthy of immortality, but not one came anywhere near getting it. The best figures scored were Joseph Henry, 32; Elias Howe, 28; William T. G. Morton, 27, and Benjamin Rush, 23.

Chancellor MacCracken expressed surprise that so few names had been elected. There were twenty-six vacancies for men of American birth and six for men of foreign birth. He had expected that about half of these would be filled, judging by the experience of five years ago, but this is unlikely, as only two more classes of famous Amcrieans remain to be filled, the Statesmen and the Septimi, with, of course, the famous American women also to be considered.

The method of nomination is this: First, every name that received ten votes five years ago was ipso facto put on the list. Then nominations were received from any one in the United States, but were not considered unless seconded by some member of the Senate. However, the seconding proviso was only inserted to prevent absurd names being added to the list, and every name that had any chance at all of being elected was duly seconded by somebody. Any of the electors had permission to add any name he wished to the first list of nominations. This permission was not neglected, but in at least one case where an elector proposed a name he did not vote for it in the end.

The election will continue at 10 o'clock this morning.

NOT A UNION POSTER.

Brooklyn Man Tears Down an Election Card and Is Arrested.

Patrolman Gerrity of the Adams Street Police Station, Brooklyn, had just tacked up a "Registry for Voters" placard at 27 Smith Street yesterday, when a man rushed across the street and tore the card down.

"Are you crazy?" asked Gerrity.

"No," responded the stranger; "I've been instructed by the walking delegate to tear this down. It was not put up by a union billposter."

"Well, my man, here's where you get jugged by a union cop," said the policeman; and he led the man to the police station.

The prisoner said he was James Mahan and that he lived in Fourth Avenue. In the Adams Street Court his case was adjourned.

Franklin Simon & Co.'s Addition Open.

Franklin Simon & Co. yesterday opened the addition which they have been constructing during the Summer to their premises in Fifth Avenue, between Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth Streets. This addition runs from the basement to the fifth floor, almost doubling their space. There is abundant light and air in their workrooms, which are in an exemplary sanitary condition. They are making a special display of Paris models in dresses, suits, gowns, coats, evening wraps, &c., from the leading Paris houses.

Tammany Leader Thomas Murphy Ill.

When Thomas Murphy, Deputy City Clerk, and Tammany leader of the Twentieth Assembly District, failed to appear yesterday in his district to watch the registration, it was learned that he has been ill for some time. It was at first said that he was out of the city about to undergo an operation for cancer. At his home, 243 East Thirty-third Street, this was denied, however. It was said that Mr. Murphy had gone to the Adirondacks for recuperation.

MR. SHIELDS'S ONIONS.

The Commissioner Has a Bushel of Fine White Elephants.

The sight of United States Commissioner Shields wandering about the long corridors of the Federal Building carrying on his back a crate of big white Bermuda onions and a huge tin pan staggered the clerks and officials in the building yesterday afternoon.

The Commissioner first visited the office of United States District Attorney Burnett, and, depositing his burden, exclaimed:

"Here, General, is a bushel of onions, sent in as an exhibit in an importers' case, and I guess you'll have to take care of them."

"We guess not," exclaimed Assistant Attorneys D. Frank Lloyd, Houghton, Byrne, and Capt. Ball. Gen. Burnett busied himself with a law book.

"It says here that all exhibits shall be filed with the Clerk of the court," said the General, "and I guess you are the custodian under the law. What is the pan for?"

"The Lord knows, I don't; it's a part of the case," replied the Commissioner, as he reluctantly shouldered his burden and departed. He then visited the office of Marshal Henkel and urged him to take the onions. The Marshal declined.

The Commissioner finally lugged them back to his office and hid them under his desk. Deputy Marshal Ankner came in and cut one to see how it tasted. All afternoon the Commissioner sat at his desk trying to write, while the tears ran down his cheeks. The aroma filled the whole office. Some one opened the door, and Judge Lacombe got a whiff.

"Here," he called to a messenger, "make John Shields drive all those Italians out in the hall. This onion and garlic smell is awful."

Clerk John L. Donovan hunted up the history of the onions. They were filed by Hills Brothers & Co., importers, who had appealed from a decision of the Board of Appraisers, which assessed the onions at 40 cents a bushel averaging 60 pounds. It will take two years to settle the case, and the onions must be kept.

20,000 IN A CRUSH AT THE BEAUTY SHOW

Reserves Called Out to Handle the Crowd at the Garden.

5,000 WERE TURNED AWAY

The 15,000 Who Got In Wondered What It Was That Aroused Mr. Comstock to Action.

When the much-advertised Physical Culture Show opened in Madison Square Garden last night Roundsman Gleason of the Tenderloin Station, who was in charge of the police, found it necessary to send for the reserves to keep the crowd back. It was all done without a press agent, too. Anthony Comstock attended to all of that by having the show managers arrested the other day.

At 9 o'clock Madison Square Garden was crowded to the doors, and the 15,000 people who managed to squeeze in were kept busy mopping their brows, for there was scarcely room in the Garden to turn around. In the streets about the Garden a mob of 5,000 men and women struggled to get near the entrance. Those who did get near found Fire Inspector Henry Carr ordering the police to close the doors, so that no more people could get in.

It was the third time in the history of the Garden that it was found necessary to close the doors while a public entertainment was in progress there. But the 15,000 who got in were even more disappointed than the 5,000 who were barred out. They had gone there expecting to see a show that would unnerve the Superintendent of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, but instead they saw a tame programme of athletic sports, backed up by a dozen women who stood on pedestals behind a muslin curtain high up on a circular moving stage in the centre of the arena.

It was a good natured crowd, however, and aside from "guying" the "most superbly developed lady from Long Island City" and poking fun at the Venus from Hoboken, the people were orderly.

The first two hours of the show were taken up with foot races by members of various athletic clubs about town, and then two wrestling matches followed. Then came a running high jumper and a weight thrower, and after that seven women in knickbockers engaged in a 50-yard run.

Among the women ushers there was a girl with very red hair, and the crowd had much fun with her. Now and again the red-haired usher yanked a man or two out of the reserved seats because they didn't have seat coupons, and then the crowd in the galleries cheered her. On one occasion she remonstrated with six men who were sitting on the backs of chairs.

"Sit down," she roared, and when the men did not sit down, she jerked one after the other into a seat and then threatened to throw them into the street if they didn't behave. After that she bossed the policemen and compelled them to keep the stairways clear.

"Who is she?" shouted a voice from the gallery, and the crowd down below answered in chorus, "Anthony Comstock."

When a chesty man in tights came out and posed as "Ajax Defying the Lightning," a young woman in one of the arena boxes exclaimed in a shrill voice:

"I wonder if it eats beans?"

Thereupon Ajax almost fell off his pedestal.

"Hey, Adam, where's Eve?" shouted a man in the gallery, and the muslin curtain was rung down.

And when the curtain went up again eighteen young women were seen posing on pedestals in costumes such as are worn by the burlesquers seen nightly in Tim Sullivan's Dewey Theatre, on Fourteenth Street. Then a bald-headed man in the front row, who had been sneezing all through the show, explained to a friend that he was suffering with a cold in his head.

"What do you think of the girls?" asked a fellow behind him, and the man with the cold replied:

"Burty buskular, ain't they?"

HAS HIMSELF LOCKED UP.

A Rum-Pursued General's Means of Ending a Spree.

A man wearing a broad-brimmed felt hat, a black frock coat and flaring open at the top so as to expose an elaborately embroidered silk waistcoat, walked up to a policeman in Quincy Street, Brooklyn, yesterday and asked:

"Pardon me, Sir, but are you not an officer of the law?"

"Sure," returned the policeman. "What's the row?"

"I should like to be confined in your local lock-up for about a month, Sir," explained the picturesque stranger. "I am in the grip of the demon rum."

"Oh, I see," said the policeman. "Take a walk around to the Gates Avenue Court and maybe the Magistrate will take care of you."

"I am indebted to you, Sir," remarked the stranger, moving off after a courtly bow.

A few minutes later he appeared in the Gates Avenue Court and asked for an interview with Magistrate Furlong.

"Your honor," he said, bowing low, "I am Gen. Frederick G. Foscula of Virginia and Springfield, Mass. I have been admitted to the bar in both places. Circumstances which I deeply deplore are responsible for my being here. I come of my own volition to make appeal that you send me to jail as a drunkard. For weeks I have temporized with the demon rum, but he has stung me like a serpent."

"I'll tell you what I will do," said the Magistrate when he had recovered from his astonishment. "I'll send you to Raymond Street Jail until Friday. If you feel then that you are strong enough to do successful battle with the demon I'll release you."

"I would prefer a month," said the General in a tone of disappointment, "but I thank you, Sir, for even the few days."

He then filled out a complaint against himself and was carted off in the van.

TOOK SERGEANT FOR BURGLAR

Police of Parkville Precinct Said to Have Had a Surprise.

Hunting for burglars in a schoolhouse early yesterday morning, the reserves of the Parkville Police Station, Brooklyn, are said to have found one of their own Sergeants stretched out comfortably in a chair in one of the classrooms, whiling away the dreary night hours reading a book. At the police station everybody expressed ignorance of any such incident.

According to the story, A. S. Thompson, who is janitor of Public School No. 134, at Eighteenth Avenue and Ocean Parkway, and who lives opposite the school, saw a light in one of the rooms on the third floor of the building early yesterday morning. Thompson hurried to the Parkville Police Station. The Sergeant in charge turned out the reserves, and, accompanied by Thompson, they dashed around to the school.

While several of the policemen guarded the entrances, the others crept up stairs. They entered the room where the light was.

In a chair beside the teacher's desk, with his cap and coat off, and with a book in his hand, was a man, who jumped up as the policemen rushed in. According to the story, they recognized him and stopped in confusion.

"I saw a light in here, and, thinking there might be burglars in the place, came in to investigate," explained the reader to the Roundsman in command of the reserves.

The light was put out and the reader silently followed the reserves down stairs. They returned to the station and he went "on patrol."

"There wasn't any burglar there," was the Roundsman's report upon reaching the station.

RETURNED SERGEANT'S $3.

Young Woman's Prompt Repayment Surprised the Doorman.

Sergt. Stahl was on duty at the desk of the West Forty-seventh Street Station on Sunday night when Miss Mary Pierson made her first appearance.

She was well dressed, of refined manner, but brought a tale which has monotonously echoed through many unbelieving years.

"I come from Canada," said Miss Pierson. "I was to have had a theatrical engagement upon my arrival, but things went wrong. I have only 10 cents left, but I have relatives in Philadelphia. Will you lend me $3?"

The doorman and the reporters smiled, but Stahl leaned across the desk and looked hard at Miss Pierson. After a silence of ten seconds, he said:

"Certainly, Madam."

He counted out three dollars and Miss Mary Pierson, thanking him, left the station. The doorman and the reporters breathed hard.

"Maybe that was throwing away money," the Sergeant said with a smile, and resumed his writing. Last night Miss Mary Pierson reappeared.

"I have just come in from Philadelphia," she said, laying $3 upon the desk. "You have my most sincere thanks."

As Stahl folded up the bills he looked triumphantly at the doorman, who went out to see if the green lamps were still burning.

JULIUS, HE INVITATIONS.

There Will Be Doings in the City Hall Cellar on Columbus Day.

Julius, the manager of the City Hall cellar, picked up one of last month's German newspapers, and, after glancing at it, shouted to the boss of the underground saloon:

"Mr. Zitzler, der Soupway saloon is closed, und it stands in der paper dot it don't pay to run der vater vagon no more. Peoples night believe it means our saloon. Ve must celebrate another opening. Fife years ago to-day, on der Twelf of October, you are here fife years."

"Vhen is der Twelf of October this year?" inquired the boss.

"Vell," said Julius, "it comes on Thursday. Dot is der day Chris Columbo discovered America. Vhat?"

"Fine!" answered the boss. "Ve vill celebration it. Make der invitations by der printer to-day."

And Julius returned two hours later with 600 cards, on which was printed:

Columbus Day! Oct. 12. Zitzler Day!
Fifth Anniversary on New York.

Dear Sir: Thursday, Oct. 12, being the fifth anniversary of dicovering myself and Christopher Columbus at the corner of Broadway and Chambers Street, you are cordialantly invitationed with your friends and your ladies to my establishing myself in the City Hall Cellar, to participate in the celebration of Mr. Columbus and Mr. Zitzler. Good amusement and musics will be furnished with four well-known artists on an excellent luncheon. Respectfully yours. JULIUS, Manager.

After mailing the invitations to patrons, Julius declared that he would do things that had never been done before in getting up his celebration programme.

"Ve must do it," he said. "If a man goes in business Fort of Yuly und don't know it's Vashington's Birthday till he hears der firecrackers, den it time ve let it oudt. Vhat?"

HOW WOULD THE ROMANS DO?

Inscription MDCCCCV for 1905 Starts Washington Controversy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—A classical quandary will be up for debate in the House this Winter, which will draw out the academic accomplishments of a score of members. Carrere & Hastings, architects of the House office building, have had cut in the cornerstone in one long and very plain line, "MDCCCCV.," to tell that the great building was erected in the present year of grace. Already a discussion has started among officers and Government architecta as to the correctness of the inscription.

Some urge that the inscription should be "MCMV." Those who have had the temerity to suggest that it should be plainly "1905" have been told that they had no soul for the artistic. Carrere & Hastings insist that they have the Roman way, because this form was decided on for the New York Public Library after the question had been submitted to professora at Yale and Harvard and the French Institute.

The point haa been raised that on the face of the Roman sun dial the hour of 4 was never written IIII. There are those who contend that, as long as 19 is indicated by XIX. and 190 by CXC., there is no logical reason for changing the form when indicating ten times 190.

CUNARD LINE TO ADHERE TO INVERCLYDE'S POLICY

No Change Likely as Result of the Chairman's Death, Says Agent.

SIGNS OF MOURNING ON SHIP

Flags at Half-Mast and Officers Wear Crape Sleevebands—The Successor to Title.

Owing to the death of Lord Inverclyde, Chairman of the Cunard Steamship Company, at Castle Wemyss, Scotland, on Sunday afternoon, flags on the Etruria and Slavonia, now in port, were at half mast yesterday, as well as those on the Cunard piers. Captains and officers wore crape sleevebands on their uniform jackets.

Vernon H. Brown, who has been the agent for the Cunard Line in America for many years, was very much affected by news of the death, as he had known the Chairman personally. To a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES Mr. Brown said yesterday:

"The death of Lord Inverclyde has cast a gloom over the whole shipping community and a host of friends to whom he had endeared himself by his many noble qualities. He was gifted with a striking personality and a magnetic influence was felt by all who had the privilege of knowing him intimately. Lord Inverclyde was in the prime of health and vigor, and was only 44 years old.

"Since he succeeded to his title and the Chairmanship of the Cunard his business foresight and good judgment had brought him to the front and commanded the respect and confidence of all with whom he had business affiliations.

"It is too early to speak of what effect his death will have on the Cunard policy. His colleagues on the Board of Directors have all been in perfect accord with his views in the past, and I have no reason to believe that there will be any change.

"The Deputy Chairman of the Cunard Company, William Watson, is well known in shipping and financial circles. The Hon. James C. Burns, who succeeds to the title, is a younger brother of the late Lord Inverclyde, but is not connected in any way with the shipping company."

Lord Inverclyde's vigorous policy was effective in the rate war from May to December of last year, the White Star, North German Lloyd, and Hamburg-American Lines being glad to call off the fight. When the Morgan shipping combination was formed Lord Inverclyde got the $12,500,000 loan from the British Government at the rate of 2½ per cent. and an increase of subsidy to $750,000, which enabled the company to remain independent.

TO BUY PROCTOR'S MARBLE.

Senate Building Committee Rules Out Granite, Which Costs Less.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Senator Proctor of Vermont, from whom, it was discovered two years ago, the Government purchased marble for the gravestones of soldiers killed in the war with Spain, is again to have a customer at Washington. Senators Gallinger and Cullom, a majority of the committee appointed to pass on bids for the new Senate office building, decided to-day to buy Proctor's marble.

Proctor's concern was not the lowest bidder, but the lower bidders had offered granite and limestone, and the committee concluded that neither of these was as good as marble.

Elliott Woods, the architect, who has charge of the Capitol and of the office buildings that are being erected for the Senate and the House, in order to preserve the balance between granite and marble advertised for both. Forty-six bids were put in, seven for granite, nine for marble, five for limestone, and twenty-five for combinations.

The argument for granite is that it holds its color against the climatic conditions here better than marble, which must be worked on continually at no little expense to keep it in order. The Library of Congress is of granite and is regarded as more artistic in exterior texture than the marble in the Capitol.

Senator Gallinger had stood out for granite. Cullom said marble like that of the Capitol should be used even if the Library of Congress was as white as the Capitol and cost nothing to be kept so. Senator Teller, who was associated with them on the committee, had little to say and left it to the others to agree.

DREAM TOLD OF SON'S DEATH.

Mrs. Harris, Dying, Learns That Vision Was True.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 9.—Members of the family of Mrs. Mary J. Harris, who died at her home, Saturday night, at 121 James Street, declare that she had a vision or dream that her son, Samuel D. Harris, had died in Colorado about ten days before her death. Young Harris had gone to Colorado several months ago for his health, and died there on Sept. 5. As his mother was then ill, it was decided to keep from her the news of his death.

A few days after he died she awoke one morning and told members of her family that she had had a dream that her son was dead and that she was sure it was true. The vision so preyed on her mind that the family physician advised that the truth be told to her. When she heard it Mrs. Harris said she knew all the time that her son was dead. From that time she sank.

LANDINGS FOR NAVY'S GUEST.

Streets Along the Hudson Being Cleaned Up for Prince Louis.

Dock Commissioner Featherson began preparations yesterday for taking care of the squadron of Prince Louis of Battenberg, which is due to reach these waters on Nov. 9. Not only has the Dock Commissioner to figure on the anchorage question, but he must provide suitable landing places for the officers and crews of the ships. Stringing the ships out three or four to the mile they will stretch from Fortieth Street to Grant's Tomb, and many landings will be necessary.

The landings probably will be at the foot of West Twenty-second, West Thirty-fourth, West Forty-second, West Forty-fourth, West Fifty-seventh, West Eightieth, and West One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Streets. Where landing floats will not already in place temporary floats will be provided. It is probable that the float now at the Battery will be taken to West Eightieth Street, for the use of Prince Louis and those aboard his ship.

HARPER'S BOOK NEWS.

Pole Baker

Pole Baker will be remembered as a humorous character in Will N. Harben's former novels. A shrewd, wayward, shirt-sleeves philosopher, in this new story he occupies the center of the stage, with some capital yarns to tell and a genius for meddling in other people's affairs to their own ultimate good. Without him the romance of the young lovers would not have ended so happily. The characters and scenes are again those of Georgia, as in "Abner Daniel" and "The Georgians," and the same good-humored, delightful narrative winds leisurely through this story as in its popular predecessors.

TWO WORLD'S RECORDS TIED AT BELMONT PARK

Klamesha Ran a Mile in 1:37 2-5, Equaling Dick Welles's Mark.

AERONAUT'S FAST SPRINT

Colt Finished Six and a Half Furlongs In 1:18 2-5—Favorites Were First in Three Races.

World's records were equaled in two races and a track record equaled in a third event at the Belmont Park course yesterday. In a whirl of fast time that set the doubting element among the horsemen to gossiping again about the old report of a short track, and that, too, in spite of the fact that a final survey, to prove the accuracy of the distances, had been completed during the morning.

Klamesha finished first in the second race, after running the mile in 1:37 2-5, just equaling the world's record, established by the great horse Dick Welles more than two years ago.

In the fifth event of the card, the fast three-year-old colt Aeronaut won the Westchester Highweight Handicap, at six and a half furlongs, in 1:18 2-5, this just being equal to the world's best time for the distance, made by both Martimas and Mineola at Sheepshead Bay. The third fast race of the afternoon came in the mile-and-three-sixteenths handicap, for which event Ostrich was the winner in 1:57 3-5, the track record time, Ostrich in winning beating Santa Catalina, who made the mark only six days before.

All conditions favored the horses for the day, the fields being of only moderate size and the weather warm and clear, but time has become such a feature of the Belmont Park racing that the big crowd in attendance found more interest in the record races than in the fact that three strong public favorites had won, and the most marked outburst of enthusiasm that the meeting has produced greeted Klamesha on her return to the stand after her victory, as the mile record was too well known to racegoers to call for any reference to records, as happened in the races at fractional distances.

Klamesha, carrying the colors of the Oneck Stable, owned by H. K. Knapp, started in a purse race conditioned for horses that had not won $1,200 in 1905. The weights were low throughout the field of six, Klamesha, with 104 pounds, going to the post favorite at 2 to 1 over Eugenia Burch, second choice at 14 to 5, and Lord of the Vale, third in the betting at 7 to 2. The fast three-year-old Grapple, first away, raced in front for the first quarter of a mile at a terrific pace, Lord of the Vale, second for that distance, then taking command and carrying the same fast rate of speed around the turn and to the head of the stretch. To that point Klamesha waited third, just at the heels of the pacemakers, and got the full benefit of the pace, though she had to race her best to get to Lord of the Vale on the turn into the stretch. As Klamesha and Lord of the Vale went to fighting just inside the last quarter pole a third contender appeared in Eugenia Burch, and Klamesha had only just shaken off the horse when the mare took his place and drove Klamesha to the whip. Knapp was on Klamesha and Miller on Eugenia Burch, and the advantage in riding was with the three-year-old filly, but the result was in doubt until fifty yards from the post, Eugenia Burch began to swerve out, and, though she still gained, Klamesha, running straight on the rail, won by a scant length, with Eugenia Burch, then on the extreme outside part of the track, nearly a hundred feet to the outside, Lord of the Vale finishing third. The fractional time of the mile was 0:12 4-5, 0:24, 0:36, 0:47 2-5, and 0:59 1-5, the five furlongs being the last fraction caught by the timers, as after that the horses were running straight to the stand down the long stretch.

Dick Welles, in his race at the Harlem track, Chicago, Aug. 14, 1903, the horse then being a three-year-old, carried 112 pounds, so that there still is room for argument as to the merits of the two performances, aside from the fact that Klamesha ran around only one turn, while Dick Welles ran around two turns on a regulation mile track.

The victory of Aeronaut in the stake feature of the day was one to rest on its merits, as he carried higher weight than did either of the horses that previously ran six and a half furlongs in 1:18 2-5, and on a track very similar, with only one turn to make. Aeronaut was a hotly backed favorite in a field of twelve horses, including two added starters, and from the first jump to the last was racing out in front, and won easily. Only one fraction was caught in Aeronaut's race, and that was the first half furlong in 0:07. That fraction, subtracted from the time of the race, would make the last three-quarters of a mile run in 1:11 2-5, faster even than Roseben's world's record, made last Friday. Summary:

TURLEY'S TROTTING STAKE.

Winner of Walnut Hall Farm Cup Equaled the Race's Record.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 9.—The feature of the sixth day of the Kentucky Breeders' Association meeting was the Walnut Hall Farm Cup, $3,000 guaranteed, by L. V. Harkness, for trotters. It took four heats to decide the event, Turley winning from Glenwood M., the favorite. In the first heat the stake record of 2:07¾, made by Billy Buck in 1903, was equaled by Turley. In the second heat Glenwood M. clipped a half second from the record. Fast time characterized every heat, and the finishes were close.

Citation, the favorite, had no trouble in taking the 2:10 pace in straight heats.

In the 2:16 trot, Boreazella, the heavily played favorite, was able to take only the second heat. The first went to Pat T., and the third and fourth to The President. The races will be concluded to-morrow. Summary:

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

F. Ambrose Clark, a wealthy patron of cross-country racing, rode his own horse in the hunters' steeplechase stakes at Belmont Park yesterday and won a round of applause from the spectators in the stands when, after being thrown when his horse The Bowery blundered and fell opposite the grand stand, he clung to the bridle and after being dragged a short distance, climbed into the saddle again and started to go on after his field. He only discovered then that The Bowery had dislocated his stifle in his fall, and was crippled beyond any chance of finishing the race. One other gentleman rider, Mr. Harper, on Judge o' Gin, got a severe fall on the back stretch, but the remaining two amateurs in the race fought it out at the finish and were first and second.

The filly Last Cherry, owned by Catesby Woodford, ran away while out for exercise at Belmont Park, and after covering about eight miles without a rider, fell into the fence and broke her tail at the root.

The lightweight boy Brussell, apprenticed to Peter Wimmer and rider of Ocean Tide yesterday in the fifth race, was carried against the rail in the turn into the stretch and had his leg badly bruised. He was helped from the saddle when he pulled the mare up, and was taken in an ambulance to the hospital at Garden City.

The programme decided at Belmont Park was the first run this year without a selling race on it, and it happens that the races were so conditioned that another programme of six events, none selling, will be run on the same track.

Jockey Knapp rode three winners at Belmont Park yesterday, and it was the luck of the most successful rider of the season that the three races produced the fastest events of the year, his mounts being the record-equaling horses Klamesha, Aeronaut, and Ostrich.

The official resurvey of the Belmont Park race course, ordered by the management of the course to disprove the report that the distances are short, and thus account for the fast time made, was completed yesterday by John McLaughlin, chief of the Long Island Railroad Surveying Department, the engineer taking measurements of the track from the starting post in front of the grand stand to the same post at the finish. His report was that the distances as stated by the Westchester Racing Association are absolutely correct, and that a horse running the regulation estimated three feet from the rail would cover the distances as marked out on the course as nearly as possible without varying more than a matter of inches at any distance that might be run.

NATIONAL LEAGUE TEAMS WIN.

AUTO RACING COURSE UNDER STRICT PATROL

Bad Spots to be Remedied and Road Will Be Reoiled.

KEENE'S SHOWING IS GOOD

Szisz and Lancia Make Fast Time in Practice—Only One Panhard Car to be Weighed.

Chairman Robert Lee Morrell of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association, with Asa Goddard and some of the other Directors, made a careful inspection of the Vanderbilt Cup course yesterday, and made arrangements to improve three or four bad spots which are likely to give trouble to the high speed cars in Saturday's race. It was also decided to begin reoiling the course to-day. The continued warm weather of the last two weeks, combined with the hard usage to which the twenty-eight-mile circuit has been subjected not only by the big racing cars but by hundreds of touring cars, has literally worn off the original surface of the road in many places.

Three or four bad stretches of this sort are to be found on the northern part of the course along the North Hempstead Road and below the Bull's Head turn. These road conditions were carefully discussed at a special meeting of the Racing Board last night at the Garden City Hotel, and the necessity of reoiling was so urgent that it was decided to begin at once.

Chairman Morrell presided at the meeting, and the others present were George Isham Scott, A. L. Riker, Samuel M. Butler, E. T. Birdsall, and Secretary A. G Batchelder. A stricter method of patrol will be established to-day. The discovery of bits of glass and an obstruction of market baskets concealing an old bicycle, placed directly in the middle of the road, have shown the committee that mischievous, if not absolutely malicious, persons are disposed to give the racing automobilists trouble unless carefully watched. As a precaution against the least detail that might cause injury to the racing cars, the course will hereafter be patrolled day and night. The subject of offering rewards for the arrest of persons purposely obstructing the road was discussed informally at the meeting, but no action was taken. The very fact of offering a reward, it was suggested, would have a tendency to encourage malicious acts.

An application was made to the committee by the Panhard Company requesting that two Panhard cars might be weighed, allowing George Heath to take his choice of the racing car on the day of the contest. Only one Panhard car is entered, and with it Mr. Heath will defend his title to the Vanderbilt Cup. The committee considered that as only one Panhard car had been entered it could not allow a second to be held in reserve, and therefore denied the request. All of the cars will be required to report at Albertson's on Friday for the final weighing in, which will be in charge of the technical members of the racing board.

Owing to the unprecedented number of applications for grand stand seats, the committee authorized the building of an addition, giving accommodations for 120 seats. Work will begin to-day. Every seat and box has been sold, and yet many prominent automobilists from a distance are writing for accommodations.

Nearly all of the racing men were out on the course in the early hours of the day. Szisz, with his eighty horse power Renault, made the best time, going over the 28.3 miles in 24:15. His second round was 28 minutes, a total of 52:15 for 56⅗ miles. Szisz is looming up rapidly among the more dangerous contenders, and he handles his car with great ability.

Foxhall Keene is attracting the attention of the critics as a racer who will have to be reckoned with. He handles his 120-horse power German car like a veteran, and indeed he is no novice, as he has driven racing cars for several years, and was a member of the German team two years ago in the Gordon Bennett race. Keene made two rounds in 28 and 27½ minutes respectively, and did not appear to be letting his car out at its best, either.

Lancia, the good-natured Italian, who still ranks favorite for the race, made one round in 26 minutes and another in 27:18. Jenatzy made one round in 29 minutes. George Heath went around easily in 36 minutes. Walter Christie went over the route in 41 minutes, and Walter White made two conservative rounds with his big steam car in 40 and 32 minutes respectively. Dingley, the American elimination race winner, made a fast round in 27:30. Others on the course were Joe Tracy, Wagner, Warden, Nazzare, and Duray.

CHALLENGE FOR SLOSSON.

Veteran Billiardist to Ignore Hoppe—Frenchmen Coming for Tourney.

Among billiard players considerable interest was manifested last night over the challenge that William F. Hoppe had issued to the veteran George F. Slosson. While the greater number agreed that Hoppe exhibited temerity before he had won his spurs, so to speak, in the arena of the cue and carroms, they agreed that such a match would be interesting. They recalled the fact that Frank C. Ives first won recognition as a player of the first rank by defeating Slosson.

When the "Student" was seen at his academy last night he declared that he had no intention of playing Hoppe or paying any attention to his challenge, which is for 1,500 or 2,500 points at 18-inch balk line, with two counts in balk. Hoppe deposited a certified check for $500 to bind the match.

Slosson declared that he was ready to enter into a tournament with Schaefer, Sutton, Cure, Morningstar, Vignaux, or any of the leading Frenchmen. He would make a match with any of them singly, but that Hoppe must make his mark in a tournament first.

The prospect of such a tournament as Slosson outlined is promising for the coming season. In fact, Julius Balke sails for Paris to-day with the intention of returning with several of the top class professionals for a tournament at 18-inch balk line, two counts in balk. That he will be successful in making the arrangements is certain, for both Jacob Schaefer and Hoppe have had their contracts for Paris academy play canceled because of the French court's decision against the gambling feature of the games. This means a hard Winter for the billiardists in Paris, and they will be eager to get into some money play in this country, especially as the scheme contemplates tournaments in this city, Chicago, and St. Louis.

Alfredo D'Oro and William Clearwater have been matched to play a 600-point game of continuous pool for the emblem representing the world's championship and a side bet of $300 in St. Louis, Oct. 19, 20, and 21. The games will be of 200 points each. This will be the fourth time D'Oro, the present champion, has competed for the valuable trophy. The emblem was first placed in competition in a St. Louis tourney about a year ago, and was won by D'Oro. Grant Eby, former champion, challenged and was defeated. Jerome Keogh challenged D'Oro, who by failure to post a final forfeit lost the emblem. D'Oro later challenged Keogh, and in a game played at Buffalo won. Clearwater, also a former champion, is the present challenger.

BILLIARD PLAYERS IN FORM.

Gallagher Makes Big Run and Leads McLaughlin in Match.

Thomas J. Gallagher and Edward McLaughlin, the veteran billiard experts, began a six-nights match at Maurice Daly's rooms, 1,241 Broadway, last night in the presence of a large and enthusiastic audience. Both players were in splendid form, Gallagher especially, in a run of 118 in the ninth inning, giving as skillful an exhibition of eighteen-inch balk-line billiards as has been seen in this city for a long time. Notwithstanding his big lead McLaughlin braced up and with runs of 69, 44, and 41, finished within twenty-one points of his opponent, the score being 300 to 279.

According to the conditions the men are to play for six nights, 300 points a night, at eighteen-inch balk-line, two shots in balk, the one having the most points at the close of the match to be declared the winner.

The score last night:

Thomas Gallagher—0 1 5 0 51 12 6 10 118 0 9 4 53 13 0 1 0 0 17. Total, 300; high run, 118; average, 15 15-19.

Edward McLaughlin—0 15 1 5 1 1 2 10 72 1 41 12 0 2 44 69 0 3. Total, 279; high run, 72; average, 15 4-18.

THE DAY ON THE GRIDIRON.

Light Practice in Order After Saturday's Hard Games.

Keenest interest among football enthusiasts yesterday centred in the call of President Roosevelt for Walter Camp, Yale's gridiron adviser; Coach Reid of Harvard, and Coach Hildebrand of Princeton, presumably to confer on the question of rule changes in the game to eliminate brutality and restrict injuries. Speculation was rife as to the meaning of the move.

All the leading teams took light practice to allow the players to recover from the bruises inflicted in Saturday's hard games. It was substitutes' day everywhere, when second strings were tried out whenever possible to give the regulars a needed rest. The new men in the main acquitted themselves creditably.

At Harvard among those laid off were guard Pierce, tackles Montgomery and Squires, half back Foster, half back Wendell, end McFadden, and Capt. Hurley. The other regulars were in the play but a short time. Those who played were put through some hard paces. The individual honors went to Channing, a half back that "Reggie" Brown discovered in the second squad and picked out as a "comer."

Channing played brilliantly, running with the ball splendidly, tackling hard and often, and kicking better than any punter the Crimson has tried out this year. Two end runs of fifteen yards each he negotiated, in each case getting away by clever wriggling when a loss of ground appeared inevitable. His kicks, seven in number, averaged over fifty yards, three of them against the wind. He was heartily cheered as he left the field.

At Princeton Tooker was again laid off, while Tenney, quarter back; Dutcher, centre, and Bard were on the side lines. The other regulars were retired after a few minutes' play. The whole scrimmage practice only consumed twenty minutes, but was fierce while it lasted.

At end Fryer and O'Brien showed excellent form, while Vaughan, a freshman from Scranton, Penn., displayed an improvement that alarmed the other candidates.

Sam Carothers was again at centre, while McClintock was used at quarter. He ran the team in good style, and may yet cause Tenney, the old Penn Charter star, to work hard for the place. There was not the usual complaint about slow, listless work when the men left the field.

Cornell introduced secret football practice yesterday, with the candidates working behind closed doors for the first time. Nothing out of the ordinary developed, according to the coaches. All the players reported in good shape except the four on the sick list, and all of these were in their togs. Furman was in the line-up for the first time in two weeks.

The 'Varsity was drilled in two new plays. Rice at quarter back ran the team in better fashion than he did in Saturday's game. The coaches feel sure that he will make a better showing in his next game, when his greenness in the pivotal position is rubbed off. No scrimmage was held, as the men still felt the effects of Saturday's game. Only signal practice and similar work was indulged in, the men grumbling for a chance to mix it up. Scrimmages will be resumed to-day.

OARSMEN GAIN TIME.

New York Central Stops Laying of Tracks Pending Authority.

The New York Central will stop the work of laying extra tracks close to the boat clubhouses on the Harlem River pending the settlement of the question of their right to proceed. Ex-Park Commissioner John E. Eustis, representing the oarsmen, held a conference yesterday with Mr. Harris of the law department of the railroad, and an agreement was reached to await the action of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment before continuing excavations begun Saturday. While claiming the right to begin condemnation proceedings against the five pieces of land in question, Mr. Harris agreed to hold up further operations for the present.

The railroad officials claim that contemplated alterations do not touch the buildings of the boat clubs. The railroad can lay extra tracks on the park land for the purpose of "eliminating grade crossings," with the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, taking title with the sanction of the Department of Parks.

Secretary Pullis, representing Commissioner Schrader of the Bronx Department of Parks, said yesterday the department would refuse to issue a permit for the land, and that the workmen would be arrested if found trespassing. Mr. Eustis said that he thought the railroad had legal right in the matter, and that the boat clubs would have no alternative but to sue the railroad company for damages.

OFFERS FREE COACHING FOR ENGLISH FOOTBALL

Sir Alfred Harmsworth Plans to Popularize Association Game.

AMERICAN GAME TOO ROUGH

British Baronet Will Send Corps of Experts to American Colleges—International Contests.

The British Association football authorities are planning a systematic invasion of the American college football field, with the hope of firmly establishing the English popular Winter sport in this country. The visit of the Pilgrim team is to be used as a vehicle to accomplish the project. The recent offer of Sir Ernest Cecil Cochrane of a two-hundred-and-fifty-dollar international trophy for association football matches between college teams of America, Canada, and England will be supplemented with an offer to supply professional association football coaches to all the leading American colleges for the purpose of introducing the game.

The originator of the project is Sir Alfred Harmsworth, the London publisher, whose representative is accompanying the Pilgrims on their tour. It is believed that if the game is properly introduced to the patrons of football through the medium of the leading colleges, the American Rugby game will eventually play a secondary part to the "socker" style of playing. Ten years ago Rugby was the popular game in England, but the steady growth of the association rules has gradually but surely driven Rugby into the background. The final tie for the championship of England, played last April at the Crystal Palace, London, under association rules, drew over 100,000 persons, while the Rugby championship contest was attended by less than a fifth of that number.

The English football players say the American college game is brutal and featureless, and believe that a fair trial for the association game would result in its adoption. Although there is at present an intercollegiate association football league, with Harvard, Pennsylvania, Cornell, and Haverford as members, no efforts have been made to push the game at Yale, Princeton, Columbia, and other institutions of learning. The absence of competent coaches is believed to be the real cause of its non-popularity, and Sir Alfred Harmsworth will send to this country a corps of expert players to coach college teams. He will pay all the expenses of the coaches during their stay in America, so that the colleges will not be taxed for their services.

It is expected that if the offer is accepted international contests will follow. The difference of the Rugby games, as played in America and England, precludes the possibility of contests between Oxford and Cambridge and American college teams. With proper instruction the students on this side of the water could master the details of play and make international games possible within two or three years.

It is to this end that the offer of Sir Alfred Harmsworth is made. Before returning to England Sir Alfred's representative will sound the American colleges on the proposition and future action will be determined after his report.

BRITISH FOOTBALLERS HERE.

Seek to Make Association Game More Popular in America.

Sir Charles Kirkpatrick and his team of English Amateur Association football players, fresh from their triple victory over Philadelphia, arrived at the York Hotel last night. The English Baronet is accompanied by Lady Kirkpatrick, who is an enthusiastic sportswoman. The Britishers, who are traveling under the name of the Pilgrims, arrived at Montreal on Sept. 2. Since that time they have played thirteen games, winning ten, losing two, and drawing one. The team has played in Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Halifax, Berlin, St. Louis, Chicago, and Philadelphia. During the tour they have scored 67 goals to their opponents' 12.

The Pilgrims consist of an all-star aggregation of Scotch and English players, and every member of the team is an amateur in the strictest sense of the term. All the gate receipts above the actual expenses are to be donated to London charities. The team includes Sir Charles Kirkpatrick, Bart.; Fred Milnes, Captain; J. D. Barnesdale, J. Bryning, C. Coopland, T. Fletcher, A. R. Milton, W. H. McNuttal, J. E. Raine, E. W. Storey, F. S. Walmsley, F. O. Wright, and Vivian Woodward. The mission of the Britishers is to demonstrate to the American public the advantages of association football as a sport over the game played by the college teams.

Capt. Milnes voiced the sentiment of the members of his team yesterday when he said: "I cannot see much merit in the football game as played by the American colleges. It is involved, unscientific, and puts a premium on brute strength. The game we play is skillful, scientific, and easy to understand. Any one who has never seen an association game will understand our game before the ball has been in play five minutes. In addition brutality is entirely eliminated. I do not desire to condemn the American game, as it evidently appeals to the followers of football on this side of the water, but we would like to see the colleges take up our game. If the college men could see us play I'm sure it would not be long before English football would be popular in this country."

The visitors will remain in this city until Friday afternoon, when they will leave for Fall River, where they will play on Saturday. They will return to New York the following day and begin practice for the match with All-New York on Saturday, Oct. 21. Invitations will be sent to several of the Presidents and members of the Faculties of the big Eastern colleges to witness the game.

Torrey, Penn's New Football Captain.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—Robert G. Torrey, centre rush of the University of Pennsylvania football team and a captain of last year's squad, was elected Captain of the 'Varsity eleven to-night to succeed Marshall Reynolds. The latter graduated last June and wanted to return for a post-graduate course in law, but the University authorities refused to permit him to matriculate. Reynolds is a great punter and his loss will be a severe blow to Penn.

Canadian Lacrosse Team Expelled.

TORONTO, Ontario, Oct. 9.—By playing against a Chicago team on Sunday the Brantford lacrosse team has expelled itself from the Canadian Lacrosse Association. Sunday playing is strictly prohibited, with expulsion as the penalty for infraction.

NEW MORRIS COUNTY RECORD

Boston Gets Largest Share of Representatives in Qualifying Class, with New York Second.

Miss Georgianna Bishop, the present National woman golf champion, and Miss Margaret Curtis, one of Boston's strongest players, divided the low-score honors yesterday on the links of the Morris County Golf Club, near Morristown, N. J., in the opening round of the women's National golf championship. Each played the 5,824-yard course in 87 strokes, within one point of what Willie Weir, the club professional, calls par golf for a woman. Two prizes were offered by the officers of the United States Golf Association for the best scores, so two of the most dangerous claimants for the National championship title began the week's play under fortunate auspices. In addition, the 87 strokes made a new woman's competitive record for the Morris County course.

Sixty-six players started in the eighteen-hole qualifying round, and all but two turned in complete cards. The best 32 qualified for the match-play rounds that will occupy the remainder of the week. Boston, New York, and the Philadelphia localities naturally sent the largest delegations. Only three Western women journeyed East for the biggest women's tournament of the year, but two of these got in the eligible list, Mrs. C. L Dering, the new Western champion, and Mrs. V. J. Hall, who, as Miss "Johnnie" Carpenter, had a National reputation for years as one of the most aggressive players on the Chicago links.

Promptly at 10 o'clock President Ransom H. Thomas, assisted by Secretary W. Fellowes Morgan and Treasurer Samuel Y. Heebner, started the fair golfers. A large gallery of fashionable residents of Morristown, Madison, Bernardsville, and adjacent places arrived at the club to watch the finish, and H. McK. Twombly tooled his big coach over from Florham with a party of young people.

The fair green was in fine condition, but the putting greens were erratic, as is usual at this season of the year, due to worm casts. Exceptionally low scores, therefore, were not looked for, and the record-breaking cards were a surprise. Miss Curtis's golf was a trifle more steady, as six was her highest score for any hole, whereas Miss Bishop had two sevens, on the long fourteenth and fifteenth holes, respectively, 442 and 545 yards. Miss Curtis, on the other hand, made these two holes in five each.

As a result of the weeding-out process, New England made the best showing, thirteen Massachusetts golfers, most of whom are from Boston clubs, getting in the coveted set. The New York clubs got ten representatives, Philadelphia six, Chicago two, and Miss Marion Oliver, daughter of Assistant Secretary of War Oliver, gave one to the District of Columbia through the Chevy Chase Club.

Mrs. Charles T. Stout, the ex-National champion, after an absence of two years from championship golf, returned to the competitive ranks, but her playing was a disappointment, as she needed 96. Miss Frances C. Griscom of Philadelphia, also a former champion, just managed to get in with 104. The general character of the golf was unusually high, better than has been seen in many championships. The qualifying thirty-two are:

MR. ROOSEVELT IN P. S. A. L.

Elected Vice President of Great Schoolboy Athletic Organization.

Because of the interest he has taken in the work of the Public Schools Athletic League President Roosevelt was yesterday elected to the office of Vice President of that organization. The election was held at a meeting of the Executive Committee in the office of Gen. George W. Wingate, 20 Nassau Street. The honor of presenting the name of Theodore Roosevelt fell to John R. Van Wormer, President of the New York Athletic Club, and his motion was seconded by William T. Brown, after which the athletic-loving Chief Executive was unanimously elected a member and officer of the largest organization devoted to sports and athletic pastimes in the world.

In presenting the name of Theodore Roosevelt for the consideration of the committee, Gen. Wingate stated that the Public Schools Athletic League, although less than two years old, had become at the present time, the largest athletic league in the world. It has now 22 active district leagues, and during the past year its competitions have been participated in by 143,365 boys. Outside of the athletic badge contests, 49,900 boys participated in 327 athletic games. One hundred and one elementary schools and 10 of the high schools have participated in the contests for the badge. The number of the badges won was 1,146. This number will be largely increased during the present year.

The Woman's Auxiliary League is in process of organization, for the purpose of looking after the needs of the girls in the schools, whose physical condition is even worse than that of the boys. A number of prominent women are taking an interest in the matter, and the details of the organization will be made public during the present month.

The league has secured the New West Side Athletic Club grounds on Fifty-fourth Street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues, on stated hours for the use of the elementary school boys, and has placed an instructor in charge. Commissioner Shrady has reserved the new athletic grounds at Macomb's Dam Park on Tuesdays and Thursdays for the exclusive use of the elementary schools from 3 to 6 P. M., and for the high schools on Wednesdays from 3 to 6 P. M., and on Saturdays from 9 to 12 A. M., and the league has provided an instructor to take charge of the boys during these hours.

During the meeting Gen. Wingate presided and Dr. Gulick acted as Secretary. The following Directors were present: Gen. George W. Wingate, Dr. John H. Finley, Thomas O. Baker, William T. Brown, S. R. Guggenheim, Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick, Gustave Straubenmuller, John R. Van Wormer, Edward Lauterbach, Gustavus T. Kirby, James E. Sullivan, Dr. C. Ward Crampton, William H. Andrews, Henry Tifft, and Dr. John T. Buchanan.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Lower; Call Money Rates, 3½@6½ Per Cent.

Prices Drop Sharply, Then Rally, Closing at Losses—Cotton Breaks Again.

Further consideration of Saturday's bank return, with its substantial decrease in surplus, and a money rate which worked around 6 per cent. until the bulk of the day's loans were made, were two of the factors in the sharp declines which occurred in the early trading in yesterday's stock market. A materially lower range of quotations for American stocks in the London market was accompanied by moderate foreign selling, but more important in its effect on prices was the evident closing out of fair-sized speculative accounts which had been held open in the belief that high money was the outgrowth of only temporary conditions. To this was added sales by the Wall Street clique which has been dabbling in cotton, and at the same time manipulating certain industrials. The aggregate of the sales was therefore great enough to make the day, so far as volume is concerned, one of the most active in a fortnight, and to substantially depress prices while this process of liquidating was under way. During the movement, which ran up to midday, losses of some 2 points were scored by American Smelting and American Locomotive, while Amalgamated Copper and American Car and Foundry dropped 1½ points each. In the railroad list St. Paul, New York Central, Louisville and Nashville, Union Pacific, and Baltimore and Ohio lost a point or more. The rest of the day was spent in a slow and incomplete recovery of these losses. The United States Steel issues declined less abruptly and rallied less vigorously than other active issues, and the trading in them made up over one-seventh of the total transactions of the day.

Cotton prices tumbled again on the Cotton Exchange, several options selling a dollar or more a bale under Saturday's quotations, but these declines would mean more to the foreign exchange market and therefore to our opportunities for importing gold if they were accompanied by a fall in the price of spot cotton. This was quotably higher at New Orleans yesterday in spite of the declines in contracts. It is interesting to note in this connection that Gov. Vardaman of Mississippi announced yesterday that the planters of his State would be helped to hold their product for 12 cents, while the President of the Southern Association stated that if prices fell much lower under speculative onslaughts farmers and bankers would be brought together to provide means for carrying the staple. The dispatches from St. Louis that the Ramsey suit to enjoin the Missouri Pacific and other Gould roads from voting their Wabash stocks had been dismissed were interpreted as indicating an easy victory for the Gould forces at the annual meeting of Wabash stockholders. Rumors of additional gold engagements were current, but went unconfirmed. Demand sterling held firm, while in Paris exchange on London moved up, encouraging the hope that the Bank of France was about to release some of its hoardings of gold, although a concurrent advance in discount rates took place in Paris. Here the banks lost again to the Sub-Treasury, the total drain so far now amounting to little less than $1,000,000.

LONDON GOLD DECLINES.

Unconfirmed Report of a Further Order of $1,250,000 for New York.

Rumors that gold bars to the amount of about $1,250,000 which reached London yesterday had been bought for New York were current in Wall Street yesterday. Inquiry at a number of international banking houses failed to confirm the report. It is known, however, that the gold was offered to New York bankers. The announcement from London that bar gold had declined three-eighths pence per ounce indicates apparently a desire on the part of American bankers not to compete for gold in the London market at the expense of keeping up the price.

Foreign exchange rates here were firmer yesterday, the price of demand sterling advancing to 4.8530, or about 15 points above the figure quoted at the close of last week. One of the influences now at work in the exchange market is the return to this market of some of the securities which have been held for some time abroad. The transfer to Paris of American stocks that had been carried in London has been in progress for some time, and more recently stocks have been coming this way from London. To some extent also yesterday's exchange market was affected by the easier call money market which prevailed in the afternoon. Rates dropped to 3½ per cent., and the last loan was made at 4 per cent. The bulk of the day's business in call loans, however, was at 6 per cent.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call on Stock Exchange collateral loaned at 3½@6½ per cent., with the last loan at 4 per cent. Most of the day's business was done at 6 per cent.

Time money rates, 5@5½ per cent. for sixty to ninety days and 4½ per cent. for four to six months.

Mercantile paper rates, 4½@5 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsed bills receivable and choice four to six months' single names, and 5@6 per cent. for others.

Foreign exchange was firm. Nominal rates were $4.82½ for sixty days and $4.86½ for demand. Rates for actual business were as follows: Sixty days, $4.8170; demand, $4.8520; cables, $4.8575; commercial bills, $4.81¼@$4.82¼.

Commercial bills were quoted: Francs, 5.20⅝ and 5.18⅝; reichsmarks, 94 5-16 and 95⅛; guilders, 39 13-16@39⅞ and 40.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Money was in active demand in the market to-day. Discounts were firm.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was quiet. Operators were disinclined to enter into fresh engagements, and many were absent owing to the Jewish holiday. Later prices recovered somewhat from the opening dullness. Consols were weak, but rallied well at the close on prospects of easier money. It is reported that gold went into the Bank of England to-day, but it does not appear on to-day's return.

Americans opened dull, relapsed to below parity on New York selling, improved later in spots, and closed dull. Canadians dropped sharply.

Japanese Imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101⅝.

Bar silver steady at 28⅜d per ounce.

Bar gold, 77s 9½d. American eagles 76s 4½d.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 26.77; Lisbon, 5.

Bullion amounting to £100,000 was withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day for shipment to Egypt.

NEW COMPANY PROMISES CHEAPER TELEPHONES

The Great Eastern Incorporated at Albany with $1,000,000.

PART OF A TRIPLE SYSTEM

New York City Wires Will Connect with Those of the State Line and Coast Line Companies.

The Great Eastern Telephone Company was incorporated at Albany yesterday, with a capital of $1,000,000.

Degbert A. Reynolds, one of the Directors, said last night:

"The Great Eastern is an independent company, and is one of a system of three companies recently incorporated. The other two are the State Line Company, which already has 2,200 miles of wire in Westchester County, and the Coast Line Company of New Jersey, which has acquired 10,000 subscribers in the eight weeks of its existence.

"The Great Eastern Company will operate in New York City only. The canvass for subscribers will begin in ten days or two weeks."

The incorporation of the Great Eastern Company is generally regarded as another step in the war on the telephone monopoly. The new company, it is understood, will be aided by the United States Independent Telephone Company and other companies in this State and Canada with which it will have connection. It is expected that the Great Eastern will be in operation next year, and that it will cut rates in this city about one-half.

Other Directors of the Great Eastern are William H. Schack, Eugene H. Brock, Elias J. Beach, and W. Myron Reynolds of New York, and Stephen M. Conger of Brooklyn.

Thomas W. Finucane, President of the new United States Independent Telephone Company, gave out a statement yesterday, comparing the franchise of the Bell Telephone Company and that of the Mercantile Electric Company, now merged into the Independent Company.

"Our franchise is an operating property," he said, "and has been for more than ten years. Rights to lay wires under ground come from the same source, and are of the same form as those of the Bell Telephone Company. Both franchises were granted by the Board of Electrical Control."

President Finucane produced the franchises. They are almost identical. The Bell franchise was granted two years later than the other.

"We are advised by counsel," said the President of the new concern, "that the two franchises, ours and that of the Bell Company, are the only two existing which give the grantees the express right to use electrical conductors for 'telegraphic and telephonic' business. The Mercantile Company began the construction and operation of its system through the subways of the Empire City Subway Company and subsidiary conduits constructed for its own account. The cables and wires extend through Broadway, Wall Street, Cortlandt, Cedar, Pine, Nassau, and Broad Streets. The system now centres in 120 Broadway, where its switchboards are situated. The appliances of the company have been used in connection with burglar alarm business, and are adaptable to telephonic use.

"We are in the field," he said, "to develop an existing property operating under a franchise which antedates that of the Bell Company. We have behind us an adequate manufacturing plant to supply necessary equipment. The character and wealth of the men in the enterprise are a sufficient guarantee of their ability to carry out their plans."

RECORD COTTON EXPORT YEAR

Twelve Months' Production to Sept. 1 Was 14,455,994.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The Census Bureau to-day issued its first bulletin under authority of the act of Congress last February, showing the production and distribution of the cotton of the United States available between Sept. 1, 1904, and Sept. 1, 1905, as 14,435,994 bales. Sixty-one per cent. was exported, and 30 per cent. used in domestic consumption, leaving a surplus of 9 per cent. The domestic consumption includes 36,776 bales destroyed by fire.

Of the total, 13,693,279 bales were the crop of 1904. In the United States 2,138,829 bales were used in Northern mills and 2,140,151 in Southern mills. In addition to the totals given, 124,469 bales of foreign cotton were imported into the United States during the year.

The exportation for the period exceeded that of any previous year by 1,144,452 bales, and exceeded the average for ten years by 2,313,948 bales. New Orleans, with a total of 2,463,421 bales, held first rank as an exporting point, while Galveston had 2,388,318 bales. Savannah, with 1,290,989 bales, held third place.

The value of the raw cotton export was $404,209,293. The United Kingdom took 4,043,999 bales, almost 50 per cent. of the exports, other countries taking in bales, as follows: Belgium, 161,151; France, 857,103; Germany, 2,115,672; Italy, 536,929; Russia, 125,463; Spain, 289,688; Japan, 324,668; British North America, 125,407, and Mexico, 73,276.

The annual consumption of cotton per spindle in the Northern mills is 67 pounds, compared with 124 pounds in the South. The difference indicates that the Northern mills are spinning much finer yarns.

In twenty-five years the production of the United States has increased from 5,575,359 to 13,693,279 bales, while consumption of cotton in this country increased from 1,671,383 to 4,278,980 bales. Within five years the cotton establishments of the Southern States have increased consumption from 1,483,711 to 2,140,151 bales, the Northern mills showing a decrease of 16,955 bales.

The world's cotton production for 1904, entering commercial channels, was 18,041,859 bales, with a total consumption of 15,474,980 bales, indicating a world surplus of 2,566,879 bales. Of the total production 2,960,000 bales were grown in the East Indies and 1,187,000 in Egypt.

The report declares:

"Since the inauguration of the census reports on cotton ginning the cotton crop has been brought more completely within the purview of the statistical method than any other farm commodity. The total production of each year is now known, within a few thousand bales, as early as the following March. The progress of the crop can be traced, bale by bale, to the mills North and South, and to the several foreign countries.

"It will be a part of the purpose of these reports to learn what proportion of their purchases the mills have consumed, and what the mills have on hand at given dates. In time it is hoped that this exact knowledge can be extended so as to include foreign countries. With this knowledge in their possession the producers can themselves determine what is a fair price for them to demand, and the consumers what is a safe price for them to pay."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

When a selling mood is on the market, as was the case yesterday morning, prices decline so easily and abruptly that misgivings are felt as to what might happen under the pressure of continued liquidation. Each of these selling flurries recently has culminated shortly in dullness, the supply of stocks becoming exhausted, or the desire to sell abating, which means the same thing, but the temporary effects which they produce upon prices show the narrowness of the market. It is the high-priced or highly manipulated stocks that fall back most abruptly when the supply temporarily exceeds the demand. In the first hour yesterday Reading broke from 121 to 120⅛ on a sale of 200 shares, and Southern Pacific, which, when advancing fluctuates only in eighths, sold at 69, and then immediately at 68½ without an intervening transaction. These, of course, are mere tape incidents, but they prove, nevertheless, that when professional buyers turn suddenly and begin to sell their market is hollow, at least in spots, owing to the absence of general participation and sustained support.

The selling under which prices broke rather sharply in the first hour yesterday was of miscellaneous origin. A good deal of it was supposed to be for the account of the Western bull crowd. The stocks in which the Western clique has been active of late were particularly weak, notably Reading, Erie, Louisville and Nashville, and Southern Pacific. Various professional operators lately aggressive on the bull side of the market were apparently inclined rather to reduce than to increase their commitments. A more conservative feeling on the market is found to prevail in a good many highly speculative quarters. This is probably due entirely to the belated idea that there will not be money enough for a while to finance an active bull speculation. Some of the principal operators on the bull side, it may be remembered, were quite confident only a few weeks ago that money was not going to be tight this Autumn. Money has already been tight, and some very careful observers believe it will be tighter still if the bull interests persist in the line of action that they have followed recently. This view of the situation has many more adherents than was the case a fortnight ago, or even a week ago. There are perhaps many bulls who would feel more conservative if they were out of stocks. It is not the kind of market on which one would willingly sell out a big line of stocks.

***

The market yesterday, as usual, became dull on price recessions. The excess supply of stocks evidently was exhausted in the first hour and prices recovered moderately in the afternoon. So far as the position of the market is concerned, it is largely a question of stocks. The selling movements that occur from time to time subside quickly because the supply of stocks, instead of increasing, diminishes as prices decline. There has not been a selling movement for several weeks of more than an hour's duration.

***

There has not been enough of a reaction in prices at any one time for five or six weeks to make large speculative holders of stocks uneasy in their position. It would probably take a break of 3 to 5 points to start any serious or involuntary liquidation.

***

The following expression of opinion by one of the most influential wire houses in the Street is fairly representative of that body of commission house sentiment which is opposed to the market: "I think advantage should be taken of what seems to me to be an overconfident situation, so that later advantage may be taken of what I fear to be inevitable, namely, when some real holders recognize that high money rates have come to stay for an indefinite period and convert their holdings into cash and loan the money, or when some speculative holders are forced by the tension to liquidate."

***

The London Statist on Saturday said: "It is not to the interest of the States to cause a serious disturbance to the London money market. * * * For some weeks past all gold arriving here from South Africa and Australia has been bought for the States. We should welcome an outflow of gold to America under normal conditions, but it is certainly not desirable that the States should take gold from London at an inconvenient moment, especially when there is no real necessity to do so. * * * In brief, it is desirable that we should check the demand upon London for gold for New York and from Paris, and that the French and American bankers should assist in the operation, otherwise a further advance in the bank rate in the early future to 5 per cent. will become unavoidable."

***

The only stock that went conspicuously against the market yesterday was Pacific Coast common, which advanced 3 per cent. and closed at the top. On Saturday the stock that did that was American Locomotive common, which fell back two points yesterday and closed at a net decline of 1 per cent. Several months ago there was an extravagant, though by no means a general speculation in Pacific Coast issues, which advanced phenominally. The turn was made and then the activity left off abruptly. A second crowd undertook to take up the manipulation where the first crowd stopped, and that demonstration was abortive.

***

One of the puzzles in the market is why the high market valuation placed upon Reading common is not reflected more in the stocks of corporations holding the majority interest in Reading, for example, in the price of Baltimore and Ohio common, the Baltimore and Ohio Company being a large holder of Reading securities. Baltimore and Ohio common continues, as a 5 per cent. stock selling around 112, to be the most conspicuous laggard in the whole market.

***

One reason why a 6 per cent. money market causes so many brokers to lose their enthusiasm for the bull side of the stock market is that the interest account ceases then to be profitable to them. There are some brokers who worry more about this than they do about a scarcity of commissions. A 6 per cent. money market makes no difference to the client who pays 6 per cent. regularly on the money the broker provides to finance his speculations, but it does make a difference to the broker. The difference of 1 or 2 per cent. between what the broker pays for money and what he charges his clients for the use of it is a source of much profit. When there ceases to be this margin of interest in favor of the broker he is prone to lose enthusiasm for the market and to encourage his clients to sell. Much of the scattered commission house selling that has been going on in the market ever since call money was established around 6 per cent. could probably be attributed to this attitude on the part of brokers.

***

The United States Steel stocks rallied rather poorly yesterday afternoon. Union Pacific made a very pronounced recovery from 131 to 132¼. It closed, however, at 131⅝. In the last five minutes of trading the whole market was turning heavy again.

***

Some persons suspected the Ramsey party of selling Wabash securities down yesterday in order to create the impression that the legal victory for the Goulds at St. Louis was interpreted in Wall Street as a bear argument. The decision wherein Mr. Ramsey's petition for an injunction to restrain the Missouri Pacific and the Iron Mountain, or their Trustees, from voting Wabash stock doubtless gave satisfaction to a number of railroad corporations which control and vote the stocks of competing roads. What Wall Street cannot understand is why Mr. Ramsey went into the fight without being assured of more backing than he appears to have. A question on which opinion is divided is whether Mr. Keene has been acting for himself alone or representing other interests. It is known that Mr. Keene's relations with the Pennsylvania Railroad people are very friendly.

Szechuen Wool May Be Invoiced at an Average Price.

In a decision by the full Board of Reappraisement of the United States General Appraisers yesterday it was held that importers of Szechuen wool have the right under the Dingley tariff law to invoice wool of this kind at an average price, and not by grades, as contended by the Treasury Department. The wool is used exclusively in this country for the manufacture of carpets, and must be admitted under Class 3 in order to be sold at a profit.

When the importing firm of Robert Crooks & Co. of New York entered a large consignment of the Szechuen wool, the Appraiser advanced the invoice values in such a manner as to put the wool in Class 2, where the duty is 7 cents a pound instead of 4 cents, as in Class 3.

It was maintained by the appraising officials that the merchandise should have been separated and invoiced according to grade. This contention the board denies, and as no appeal to the courts is possible, the decision is final. Everit Brown, attorney for the importers, said the finding constituted an important victory for importers and the carpet manufacturers of the United States.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Heavy Trading in Bonds on the Curb Yesterday.

Stocks Not Active—Interborough Opened Up, but Lost a Little in the Trading—Little Movement in Mining Stocks.

Bonds played a big part in the transactions on the curb yesterday. Of the American Steel Foundries 6s, $107,000 were sold, the price running up to 85¾. Japanese new 4½s closed ⅜ below the high figure of last week. Erie convertible 4s sold off from 101½ to 101. Interborough, opening at 212, shaded off to 211⅞ under transactions of 1,800 shares. Mercantile Marine preferred opened at 33¾ and closed at 33⅝. Bethlehem Steel's only price was 30. Thirty shares of Standard Oil were sold, and the price ran down from 669 to 666. Greene Copper fell off ⅜. The other mining stocks showed little movement.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 9.—The Provincial Government has seized six large log booms that had been sold to United States mills.

*Decrease.

After a rather tame opening a few buying orders came into the local market and the tone became stronger. There was no particular feature. Boston Consolidated was strong and in demand at 9½. The buying in this issue was pretty good. There was not the demand for stocks here that had been seen the past two weeks, but on the other hand there are but few selling orders. The closing was irregular.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—There was heavy selling of Reading and United States Steel for the New York account, and selling orders were also received from the same source in Lehigh Valley. As the market's absorbing power was extremely limited at the start prices ran off rather easily. In Lehigh Valley, for example, the price broke from 74 to 73 without an intervening sale, the order to sell presumably coming at a time when there were no orders to buy above 73 in the market. The price made a rather weak recovery, although the buying was by good houses.

American Cement advanced ½, liquidation in the stock apparently having run its course. Cambria Steel receded ¾. Keystone Telephone ⅜, Lake Superior Corporation ½, Philadelphia Company ½, and Philadelphia Rapid Transit ⅜. Some long stock came out in the general list, but the pressure to sell, except in two or three cases, was not particularly urgent.

Total sales, 37,805 shares.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—New York exchange was 5c discount. Time and call loans, 4@5 per cent.

Trading on the local Exchange was restricted much of the day, in part, probably, because of the sogginess of the Eastern market. Some small selling developed in Swifts around 108. Subway was easy early at 56, and Box Board preferred maintained a fair morning range around 14¼@14⅝. Quaker Oats went at 103. Tool went at 49 and Brick at 61. Kansas City Light sold down about two points, to 53.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 9.—Trading to-day was fairly active, and, although prices were shaded, there was a good undertone to the dealings. The declines were most noticeable in the investment issues.

Western Maryland 4s sold ⅛ lower. G. B. S. Brewing first 3-4s were ½ off. Stocks followed the lead set by bonds, and declines were made in many parts of the list. Seaboard new common shaded off ¼, to 27.

The trading was fairly active on the decline. Seaboard new second preferred dropped ¾. Houston Oil common, which has long been inactive in this market, gained 1¾ points. Consolidated Gas advanced 1½.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

LOUIS ROTHENBERG.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Henry P. Butler receiver in bankruptcy for the assets of Louis Rothenberg, manufacturer of clothing at 62 Walker Street, on the application of James Byrnes, a creditor. It was said the stock and fixtures were worth $4,000 and accounts $3,000. His stock and fixtures were damaged by fire on Sept. 29, and he is about to collect the insurance. It is said he carried an insurance of $17,000, and the loss was estimated at $10,000.

SIDNEY B. BOWMAN CYCLE COMPANY.—Charles F. Hickey has been appointed receiver for the Sidney B. Bowman Cycle Company, formerly dealing in bicycles at 944 Eighth Avenue, and 125 West 125th Street, by Judge Truax of the Supreme Court, on the application of Jordan J. Rollins, who obtained a judgment against it on April 3, 1905, which claim had been in litigation several years. The company was incorporated eleven years ago, with a capital stock of $5,000. For several years the company did a large business, but after the American Bicycle Company was formed and the bicycle craze died out the company was driven out of business and has done no business since October, 1902.

R. R. MABIE ROOFING COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the R. R. Mabie Roofing Company of 635 West Forty-seventh Street by Phillips & Avery for the following creditors: Atlantic Roofing Manufacturing Company, $7,313; Pfotenhauer & Nesbit, $947; Cornelius W. Owens, $36. It was alleged that while insolvent the company permitted the Federal Clay Manufacturing Company to obtain a judgment for $746, on which the Sheriff took possession of the company's property and advertised a sale for Oct. 12, and transferred $61 to C. K. Williams & Co. of Boston to prefer them. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed T. Tileston Wells receiver of the assets, fixing his bond at $5,000. The Sheriff is stayed from taking any further proceedings on the execution. The liabilities are reported to be over $20,000 and assets $10,000. The Barrett Manufacturing Company obtained a judgment against it on Friday for $4,499.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—From start to finish the wheat market was under bull control yesterday and closed ⅝c net higher. There was considerable talk about the possibility of Europe becoming a good buyer in the near future, and all cash markets were firmer, especially in New York, where a good deal of trouble is being experienced in filling export contracts, owing to the blockade at Buffalo. Liverpool was up ⅝@¾d on the decrease of 1,840,000 bushels in the amount on passage and the fact that the world's shipments were 1,400,000 bushels smaller than the previous week. Russian shipments, nevertheless, continued liberal, and private cables intimated that they would be large for some time to come. The visible supply increased 2,857,000 bushels. It was more than generally expected; but as last year the increase was 3,232,000 bushels, it failed to have much effect as a bear consideration. Throughout the day offerings of wheat were scarce enough to indicate that professionals had become timid on the short side. At the same time commission house business increased to a moderate extent and sentiment generally took on a more bullish aspect. A Broomhall cable said that their agent at Kurrachen, India, had estimated the remaining wheat surplus at that port at 12,000,000 bushels, and probably 15,000,000 bushels in all India. At Minneapolis there has been an increase of 450,000 bushels in the last two days. Because of double receipts at a number of points last year, the day's interior movement, while reaching 1,826,000 bushels, was about a million bushels smaller than last year. The weather map was unsettled, showing rains in Winter wheat States where they are needed. No. 2 red at the close was quoted 89c elevator and 90¼c free on board afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 92½c, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba 92c free on board afloat.

CORN.—Sharing the wheat strength all day, corn was fairly active, and from ⅜c to ⅝c higher, closing near the top. There was more or less commission house buying and not much for sale. Prospects for much lower temperatures in the belt, with rain, added to the bullish feeling, as did the advance of ⅝d to ¾d at Liverpool and the decrease of 2,380,000 bushels in the quantity on passage. The visible supply decreased 1,148,000 bushels. No export sales were reported, partly owing to the grain blockade at Buffalo. Interior wheat receipts were 525,000 bushels, compared with 679,000 bushels on the corresponding day last year. No. 2 corn at the close was quoted 60¼c elevator and 61c free on board afloat; No. 2 white, 61¼c, and No. 2 yellow, 62c free on board afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market again showed nervousness and excitement. An early rally was followed by a sensational break in the afternoon, which seemed to follow an attempt on the part of Wall Street longs to liquidate, and the close was at practically the lowest figures of the day, although the closing tone was steady at the net loss of 20@22 points. Sales were estimated at about 600,000 bales.

The opening was firm at an advance of 1@8 points in response to higher cables, reports of a severe storm along the Gulf, and predictions that low temperatures in the Northwest might work down into the cotton country. It was an October notice day, and reports that about 30,000 bales were being tendered caused some early irregularity. It soon became evident, however, that spot and banking interests would take up the tenders at the discount of about 35 points, as compared with December, and this helped to steady the list, which during the forenoon worked up to a net advance of about 14@15 points on covering of shorts and fresh buying from reactionists. When the offerings increased on the upturn, and it was rumored that Wall Street bulls were unloading, local bears became very aggressive. Around the closing figures of Saturday big stop loss orders were caught, and all the early buyers threw over their cotton, and it was not until the market was something like 25 to 30 points below the highest of the morning that there was any material support in the way of covering. Then big shorts were heavy buyers, but were careful not to rally the market to any extent, and the close was within 2 or 3 points of the lowest. No special attention was paid to the report of the Census Bureau giving the distribution of the last crop. Exports for the day were 51,480 bales, against port receipts of 53,059 bales. Interior receipts were large.

Contract prices ranged as follows:

The local market for spot cotton closed quiet and unchanged on the basis of 10.10c for middling uplands and 10.35c for middling Gulf. Sales, 4,300 bales, delivered on contract.

Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: Mobile quiet, unchanged at 9¾c; sales, 100 bales. Savannah quiet, unchanged at 9⅝c; sales, 746 bales. Baltimore nominal, unchanged at 10c. Norfolk steady, 1-16c higher at 9 13-16c; sales, 944 bales. Augusta quiet and steady, 1-16c higher at 9¾c; sales, 1,911 bales. St. Louis quiet, unchanged at 10c. Galveston steady, unchanged at 10c; sales, 4,258 bales. New Orleans firm, unchanged at 9 13-16c; sales, 500 bales. Charleston quiet, unchanged at 9⅝c. Wilmington quiet, ⅝c lower at 9¼c.

Estimated receipts at leading points for to-day: At Houston, 32,000 to 33,000 bales, against 27,935 bales last week and 27,751 bales last year; at Galveston, 39,000 to 42,000 bales, against 27,194 bales last week and 25,893 bales last year, and at New Orleans, 4,000 to 5,500 bales, against 4,336 bales last week and 21,405 bales last year.

COFFEE.—The reports of rain in sections of Sao Paulo, where complaints of damage from drought have originated, caused some liquidation during yesterday's market, and prices lost a portion of their recent gains. Selling was by no means aggressive, however, and while demand was very light the market showed a fairly steady tone at the decline. The opening was barely steady at a net lose of 5@10 points, and at one time bids showed a loss of about 5@15 points, as compared with the close of last week. Later, however, the market ruled at about the initial level, and the close was steady net 5 to 10 points lower. Sales were only 17,250 bags. European markets were easier also, with Hamburg closing a partial ¼ pfennig and Havre ½ franc lower. Primary markets were higher, with Rio reporting an advance of 150 and Santos 100 reis, but the rate of Brazilian exchange was lower, closing at 16 1-16d, or a decline of 1-32d. Receipts continued a shade over the figures of last year, the two ports getting 57,000 bags, against 41,000 bags last season, but the interior movement is falling off, with Jundiahy receipts for the day 38,000 bags, against 36,000 last year. Sao Paulo receipts were 50,151 bags, against 46,400 last year. Large trade interests seemed to be the chief sellers here, and while it is supposed that these parties entertain a favorable opinion of the market, the offerings from this source appeared to be about the main cause of the decline.

The market for spot coffee was steady, with quotations on the basis of 8 11-16c for Rio No. 7.

HOTEL MEN GO FREE; POLICE SHAKEN UP

Gallagher Fails to Prove They Were Illegally Conducted.

NOW HE GOES TO BROOKLYN

Declares He Did His Duty and That the Raids Caused His Transfer—Capt. Daly Succeeds Him.

Manchester Pitman of the Hotel Gerard, Harry J. Willis of the Dunlop, and Henry S. Bichnell of the Hamilton, all clerks, were discharged yesterday by Magistrate Baker, in the West Side Court. The same Magistrate had on Sunday morning discharged the clerk of the Cambridge Court Hotel, who, with the others, was arrested on the charge of conducting immoral places.

As the hotels have been of good standing and patronized by people of good reputation, including families well known throughout the United States, the raids on Sunday on the part of Capt. Gallagher's detectives caused conjecture among other hotel men.

The proprietors said that if the Magistrates would hold euch arrests as warranted, they would be in the same predicament, as the law required that they receive apparently respectable people who paid for their lodging, even if they did not bring baggage with them, and that detectives apparently respectable could not be turned away.

While the Magistrate was dismissing the cases word reached the courtroom that Commiseloner McAdoo had transferred Capt. Gallagher from the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station to Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn.

Magistrate Baker in discharging the men made no comment other than that the evidence was insufficient. Capt. Gallagher offered no witnesses other than the two detectives, who swore that they had got rooms at the hotels. Detectives McGrath and Marx swore that the hotel clerks had been jocular when they, with their companions, applied for rooms. The hotel clerks, backed up by the bell boys and telephone girls, swore that the detectives had said they were delayed commuters. As the witnesses were stationed near the hotel desks, they swore they would have heard the remarks which the detectives alleged passed between them and the clerks.

Police Commissioner McAdoo, after announcing the transfers yesterday afternoon, said that Capt. Gallagher wae not transferred on account of the hotel arrests.

"It is only fair that I should say that we carry a number of so-called respectable hotels on our lists of euspicious places," added the Commissioner. "We also have evidence of professionally bad people living in alleged respectable placss. The law protects the tenante in the tenements very stringently. A eo-called respectable hotel, which permits decent people to live in it and allows indecent people in it is guilty of a gross wrong to its respectable patrons. Ths Raines law hotel is not so dangerous.

"As a general rule," the Commissioner went on, "the hotel proprietors of New York are as anxious as the police or the public to keep these people from their hotels and to protect their guests. They employ detectives to take manifold precautione to prevent being imposed upon. What I would like to see them do is to help them put down the men systematically who run these houses with mixed characters.

"No decent and honest hotel proprietor or manager in New York need fear the police. They will only too willingly co-operate with him to keep his house respectable, and I would quickly punish any officer who violated the hotel keeper's rights."

Capt. Gallagher declared last night that his removal wae evidently due to the hotel raids. He said he had been thoroughly justified by the evidence that his detectives had gathered. The Captain was greatly dejected, and eaid that the Commissioner had reflected on his integrity and ability.

"I have done my duty as a policeman should," he said. "I obtained the evidence from respectable people, guests of the hotels, whose names I cannot reveal. They complained to me and asked where they might go for decent lodgings. I would not be so foolieh ae to raid a respectable hotel. In one of the places two women came to me, a Mrs. Bell and a Mrs. Cunningham. Mrs. Bell ssid that one of the negro bellboys had attacked her in her room trying to get her diamond brooch. The boy fled when she screamed.

"The two women then went to another hotel, which they described as loosely conducted. I sent detcctives there before I made the arrests.

"My treatment at the hands of the Commissioner has been harsh, but I will go to Brooklyn and do as I have done here. If there is any vice in the precinct I ehall do all I can to stamp it out. One of the hotel proprietore was quoted as saying that the raids were the beginning of a $36,000 graft fund. He has denied that. As long as I have been in the department no one ever tricd before to connect me with graft."

In shaking up the department yesterday, Police Commissioner McAdoo transferred, including Capt. Gallagher, dive Captaine and two acting Captains. Following are the transfers:

JOHN DALY from West Twentieth Street to West Forty-seventh Street.

ROBERT A. TIGHE from Madison Street to Central Office.

JOHN J. FARRELL from Old Slip to East Eighty-eighth Street.

HENRY W. FURFEIND from Westchester to West Twentieth Street.

Acting Captain LINCOLN GRAY from City Island to take command of both the Westchester and City Island stations.

Acting Captain JAMES SHEVLIN from East Eighty-eighth Street to Madison Street.

Capt. Daly wae formerly in command of the Union Market Station and, it is said, his transfer from that precinct was made at the request of Inspector Max Schmittberger, then the Inspector of the First District. Daly is an appointee of Commissioner Greene.

Capt. Farrell, appointed by Commissioner Greene, has served in only one precinct since his promotion, that being the Old Slip Station. He takes the place of Acting Captain Shevlin in the East Eighty-eighth Street Station.

Capt. Burfeind was removed from the Tenderloin by Mr. McAdoo, who appointed Capt. Cottrell in his place. Capt. Burfeind was at that time sent to Westchester.

Capt. Tighe was recently fined thirty days' pay by the Commissinner for conditions which existed in the Mercer Street Precinct while he was its commander. He was then sent to Delancey Street to take the place of Capt. O'Connor, who went to Mercer Street. Ten days afterward Capt. O'Connor was sent back to Delancey Street and Tighe went to Brooklyn Headquarters. Tighe is transferred to Central Office, Manhattan.

175 NEW LAWYERS.

Six Women in the Class Admitted to the Bar Yesterday.

A class of law students was sworn in as members of the bar yesterday afternoon in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Justice O'Brien presided and Justices Ingraham, McLaughlin, and Clarke were present. It was the first occasion on which Justice John Proctor Clarke sat as a member of the Appellate Division. The occasion was notable for the almost complete absence of Jews, owing to the fact that it was Yom Kippur.

There were six women in the class, one a daughter of Frank Moes. In the class, which numbered 175, was a son of Justice Dugro and a son of the late Justice Henry R. Beekman.

SAYS DU BOIS WAS INSANE.

An Alienist's Reply to a Question Comprising 15,000 Words.

Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, the alienist, was a witness yesterday in the suit brought by Mrs. Ivy Blanche McKee to break the will of her father, Alpheus D. Du Bois, the school Principal, who managed to saved almost $500,000 while earning a salary of $3,000 a year. A hypothetical question which contained 15,000 words was put to Dr. MacDonald, and in answer to it the alienist said that in his opinion Du Bois was insane.

Mrs. McKee testified that in her early life she lived with an aunt for a time and attended the Sacred Heart Convent. Later she lived with her mother at New Rochelle. She said she was married in 1876 to William H. McKee. She snd her husband went to Ann Arbor, Mich., and had to leave there because they were in debt for their board. They went to Chicago and other places in the West, and she had to teach vocal music in the State Normal College to earn a living. In 1889 she visited Public School 30, having learned that the Principal, Du Bois, was her father. She had been told that he had died during the civil war. She did not know of her father's illness, and only heard of his death through friends. When asked if her husband was living she said she did not know.

MAY TIE UP COTTON CROP.

President Jordan Threatens Concerted Move If Prices Go Lower.

The cotton market showed further unreet yesterday. Notices of delivery of about 35,000 bales of cotton on October optione were issued. Most of this was suppoeed to represent the cotton taken by the bull pool. It was believed in many quarters yesterday thst the pool had definitely abandoned its operations and was liquidating its holdings. All the options cloeed with a net loss of about 20 points.

The representatives of the Southern cotton growers continue loudly to denounce the decline in the option market as the work of Wall Street manipulators.

Preeident Harvie Jordan of the Southern Cotton Association issued yesterday another statement to the Southern farmers. In part, it is as follows:

"If the speculative element succeeds in forcing prices lower and preventing a rally to reasonable figures in the near future, I will issue a call for a general mass meeting of the entire farming and business interests of the South, such as was held laet January, and perfect a systematic play throughout the South between the farmers and bankers, which will result in absolutely tying up the crop for as many months as will be necessary to break the power of the present bear clement.

"We are now organized and know our strength. We can campaign every militia district in the Cotton Belt. Our smokehouses and corncribs are now filled with an abundance. We are ready for the fight."

SIR ALFRED MOSELY HERE.

English Educator Still Holds His Views Against Women Teachers.

Sir Alfred Mosely, ths English educator and capitalist who headed an educational commission which came to this country in 1903 and inepected our public schools, is in New York again. Mr. Moeely is at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Hs has two sons at Yale and came here principally to see them.

Sir Alfred still retains the views that made his report on educational conditions here so famous. Thie report, which was published last year, contained the declaration that womsn teachers in our public schools are slowly hut surely making our youthe effeminats and that our teachers are underpaid.

He said that his report had been widely read and commented on in England and that every newepaper in the United Kingdom had published editorials on it.

"Nearly 50,000 volumes of the report have gone into circulation," he eaid, "and the applications are still coming in."

"What is the educational situation in England now?" he was asked.

"The people are beginning to wake up, but only elowly," was the reply. "Our educational system has been in the melting pot in consequence of the administration paseing from the School Board to the County Council. Things, however, are gradually rounding into shape and the new educational bill, although severely criticised by the opposition party in politics, is nevertheless bearing good fruit and our echoole are gradually becoming more efficient."

15 DOGS DELAYED ARREST.

They Surrounded Demainville, Accused of Perjury on Bail Bonds.

When L. A. Demainville, a real estate dealer living at Aqueduct Avenue and 190th Street, was arraigned in the Tombs Court yesterday, Assistant District Attorney Miner told Magistrate Pool that the prisoner had committed perjury in three instances at least, when going on bonds for prisoners. The bonds were accepted by Magistrates after Demainville had sworn that he owned the piece of land in the Bronx where he has been living.

One of the prisoners for whom he became security was Charles Augustus Seton, who is now locked up in the Tombs on a charge of swindling the Houeton, Galveston and Interurban Trolley Company by means of a bond issue that never materialized. Magistrate Pool held Demainville in $2,500 bail for examination to-morrow.

Detective Sergeant McConvills, who arreeted Demainville, said in court that he found the real estate man at his home surrounded by fifteen savage doge, and that he called off the dogs only after McConville had drawn his revolver and threatened to shoot the whole pack.

Mathews's Trial Again Delayed.

The 200 taleemen who have been drawn to furnish a jury to try Armitage Mathews for conspiracy to rob the Welsell estate, marched into the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday and then marched out again. The trial was again delayed pending a motion fnr a change of venue. The motion probably will be argued in Brooklyn to-day.

BOROUGH PRESIDENTS WANT BIG INCREASES

Combined Estimates $2,943,250 More Than for This Year.

$1,224,383 MORE FOR AHEARN

Next Largest Increase Comes from Queens—To be Considered at a Special Board Meeting.

The five Borough Presidents have surprised the Board of Estimate by the heavy increases asked for their offices for 1906. These increases, amounting to $2,943,250 more than the present year, will be considered at an executive meeting of the board on Thursday.

Of the increases asked, Manhattan wants $1,224,383, Queens $665,668, the Bronx $517,221, Richmond $362,269, and Brooklyn $173,400. President Littleton says that the greater part of his increase is for salary increases and that $45,000 is wanted for sewer repairs and canal dredging. The estimate for Brooklyn is $1,667,950.25. President Haffen of the Bronx calls for $1,655,271, an increase of $517,221. Of the increase, $373,263 is in labor and maintenance of the 350 miles of earth roads in the borough.

President Ahearn's chief increases are $410,000 for repairing and maintaining asphalt pavements, for which no appropriation was made last year—the term of maintenance for which the contractors are liable on most of the old pavements expires with this year; $81,516.50 for repaving and regrading, $127,520 for pay rolls and supplies in the sewer department, $196,000 for supplies and repairs in the Bureau of Public Baths, &c., and $126,260 for increases in salaries and salaries of proposed new jobs in the Bureau of Buildings. The total for Manhattan is $3,320,832.81.

For Queens, President Cassidy wants $1,719,627.50. In his Bureau of Highways ths increase asked for labor and maintenance is $223,976, and in the Bureau of Street Cleaning, $111,794. Increases of salaries total $38,290, of which $20,176 is for new places in the Bureau of Buildings.

President Cromwell of Richmond asks $822,749. Most of the increase, he says, is needed for labor, maintenance, and supplies in the Bureau of Highways and the completion and furnishing of the new Borough Hall.

Controller Grout asked for his department, including the newly organized Bureau of Franchises, $1,019,701.90, an increase of $28,971.90. He provides for no salary increases, and said in support of his figures:

"The budget of the City of New York has increased from $90,778,972.48 in the year 1900 to the sum of $110,525,259.04 for the year 1905, and the amount of the city's bond issues and expenditures for improvements has increased at a much larger ratio. These sums indicate, in ths rough, the increase in the work of the Department of Finance. In 1898 the number of vouchers and pay rolls filed was 71,321; in 1905 it was 120,966."

All the librarlee ask increased appropriations. The New York Public Library wants $452,295.03, an increase of $114,795; Brooklyn asks $406,371, and Queens $66,230.

MUST PAY DONOVAN'S FEE.

Lawyer Again Wins Suit for Commission on Realty Sale.

For the eecond time a jury in the Supreme Court has returned a verdict in favor of Lawyer Richard J. Donovan of 170 Broadway, who eued William R. Wsed and Frederick A. Weed of Potsdam, N. Y., for commissions on the sale of 4,500 acres of Adirondacks land to Abbott Augustus Low, the brother of ex-Mayor Seth Low. The case is one of muoh importance to real estate brokers. The jury found for Mr. Donovan for $4,590.

On the first trial it was shown that Mr. Donovan had acted as broker and had sold for the defendants land situated at Horseshoe Pond. On that occaeion a jury before Justice Marean found for Mr. Donovan. The defendants went to the Appellate Division and there the verdict was unanimously affirmed. The case was finally appealed to the Court of Appeals, and the court ordered a new trial on the ground that Juetice Marean had srred in charging the jury.

Among other things Justice Marean charged that if the broker sowed the seed, which grew and ripened, and thereafter the owner sold the property and reaped the benefits of the seed which the broker had sown, the broker was entitled to be paid for his services. The Court of Appeals held that the proper charge should have been that if the broker was the procuring cause of ths sale, and influenced the eame by his labor, he was entitled to be paid for his service as broksr.

In the last trial, which was in Richmond County, Justice Garretson charged the jury according to the law laid down by ths Court of Appeals, and again the jury returned a verdict in favor of Mr. Donovan as broker.

SOMEBODY'S MIND WANDERS.

Clerical Errors Almost Send Two Men to Insane Asylums.

For ths second time within a few days a man narrowly escaped being committed as an insane person in the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, hscause of a mistake made by some one in the Charities Department. The man was Robert Nelson of East New York, who on Sept. 24 was ordered to be examined as to his mental condition. When Nelson was returned to court yssterday a certificato from the Charities Departmsnt stating that he was insane was prssented.

"I don't understand that," eaid Nelson. "They told me I was all right."

"You seem to be sane," said Magistrate Furlong.

When the Charities Department was called up on the telephone it was found that the wrong blank had been filled out. Nelson was allowed to go. A similar mistake was made a few days ago in the case of a man arraigned in the same court, the error being corrected in time to save him from being committed as an insane person.

JACK TAR GETTING GOOD.

Admiral Evans Says His Men Are Very Sober These Days.

Whether it is the prospect of entertaining the British sailors who are coming with Prince Louis of Battenberg next month, or whether the American sailor is getting better, it is a fact which the officers of the battleships now in port deem worthy of remark that there has been less indulgence in liquor by men on shore leave on this trip than has ever been recorded before.

Rear Admiral Evans announced yesterday that he had never known so little drunkenness among the crews. The liberty parties go ashore all spruced up and return in first-class shape. Of 483 men who were ashore Saturday there was not one who overstayed his leave and only three returned to their ships showing the least sign of liquor.

City Ferryboat and Slip Tested.

The new ferryboat Manhattan and the slip which is to receive the municipal boats of the Staten Island line were tested yesterday. The line is to be opened on Oct. 25. PERKINS SAILS TO BID ON THE PEACE LOAN Represents J. P. Morgan & Co. at Russia's Invitation.

WILL TALK OF TRADE, TOO

Charles R. Flint Also Goes—His Mission Said to be Russian Shipyard Contracts.

George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co. sailed for Europe yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm II., to confer with representatives of the Russian Government in regard to the flotation in New York of a part of the coming Russian loan. Mr. Perkins goes as the representative of his firm, which for a number of years has been Russia's financial agent in New York. It was generally understood yesterday that J. P. Morgan & Co. had sent Mr. Perkins abroad at the direct invitation of the Czar's Government. This invitation was received some time ago, it is believed, and knowledge of this fact presumably accounts for the persistent statements made in Wall Street for many weeks that New York would share in the flotation of the new Russian loan.

Charles R. Flint sailed on the same vessel with Mr. Perkins. According to report, Mr. Flint has a contract for the construction at Russian ports of shipyards under American control for the reconstruction of the Russian Navy, as well as for the upbuilding of the Russian merchant marine. Mr. Flint spent some months in Russia prior to the termination of the war. It was said at that time that he had got valuable contracts, but the matter appears to have been held in abeyance pending the peace negotiations.

Mr. Flint, who is known to have conferred with Mr. Morgan before his departure, and is believed in some quarters to have Mr. Morgan's support in his undertaking. It was said yesterday that Mr. Perkins's trip had direct reference to these contracts. In other quarters, however, this was denied. One suggestion was that in effect the proposed taking of Russian bonds by New York bankers meant nothing more than that Americans would advance to Russia the amount needed to build the proposed shipyards.

Charles M. Schwab some time ago tried to get large contracts from the Russian Government for armor plate to be used in the new Russian Navy. It became known, however, after his return to this country, that the contract which he did get called only for $1,000,000 worth of armor plate. If, however, the rebuilding of the navy is to be actually under the control of Americans, it seems likely that eventually a very large amount of American armor plate will be sent to Russia.

Immediately upon his arrival in Europe Mr. Perkins will go to St. Petersburg, to take up negotiations with representatives of the Russian Government.

The fact that the matter has progressed far enough to make it advisable for J. P. Morgan & Co. to send one of its members abroad indicates clearly that there is full expectation of New York's sharing with Paris, and possibly with Berlin and other Continental cities, the task of floating the very large loan that Russia is said to be contemplating. It was said on good authority yesterday that so far no definite terms had been agreed upon between the Russian financial advisers and the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. Even the amount which is likely to be offered for subscription in New York is said not to have been fixed so far.

Recent dispatches from abroad have named widely varying amounts as the probable total of the loan. Sums as high as $360,000,000 have been named, although it was declared from abroad recently that the loan was not likely to exceed $200,000,000. The latter amount, however, was considered as the amount that France was likely to be asked to take, rather than the full amount of the loan. That such intention on the part of the Russian authorities exists is shown by the fact that New York bankers have been requested to participate in the negotiations.

From statements made yesterday by representatives of Russian banking interests, it is probable that the request made to J. P. Morgan & Co., as the representatives of New York banking interests, to participate in the loan, was prompted in part by other considerations than purely financial ones. Russian good feeling for America, which became somewhat strained during the Japanese war, received powerful stimulus as a result of the peace negotiations and the friendly reception accorded to the Russian envoys. The removal of imposts against certain classes of American goods imported into Russia was a tangible evidence of the desire of the Russian Government to further cement the friendship of the United States and to express good will toward American interests. The flotation here of a part of the loan would still further advance the friendly relations of the two countries. Thus political considerations are considered an important factor in the decision of the Russian Government to invite American participation in Russia's peace loan.

Mr. Perkins's mission to Russia, it was said on equally good authority, is, moreover, not purely a financial one. In addition to taking up the question of the loan, he is expected to confer with the various departments of the Russian Government in regard to the commercial relations of this country with Russia. Among the important undertakings in the direction of increasing the commerce between the two countries that have been discussed recently is the establishment of a fully equipped line of steamers between American and Russian ports.

Since the removal of the discriminating duties against American products the orders received from Russia for certain lines of American goods have largely increased. Representatives of important Russian interests said yesterday that all the indications pointed to a larger increase in the commercial relations of the two countries. To further these interests is one of the objects of Mr. Perkins's visit.

International bankers, in discussing the likelihood of New York's subscribing to a large amount of Russian bonds, pointed yesterday to the probability that the flotation of Russian bonds in this market would result in large shipments of gold to Europe. The recent gold import movement has not been favored by the course of foreign exchange and the need of remitting to Europe for a large block of foreign bonds would almost inevitably cause heavy gold exports. The flotation of a Russian loan in this market, however, will in all probability not be undertaken immediately. It is more probable that weeks will elapse before the negotiations for placing the loan are definitely concluded.

For the time being interest rates are high not only in New York, but in London as well, and to a less extent on the Continent. It is probable that the actual flotation of the loan will be postponed until money conditions improve. The favorable reception of the loan would thus be more positively assured.

The European markets have for a long time anticipated the sale of bonds by Russia. The Continental banks, and more particularly the Bank of France, have strengthened their gold reserve heavily during the last year, and large sums have been held in waiting to be used for the peace loan.

Before sailing yesterday Mr. Perkins communicated with Charles E. Hughes, counsel to the Insurance Investigating Committee, who assured him that there was no impropriety in his absenting himself at this time.

Mr. Perkins was accompanied to the steamer by J. P. Morgan, E. H. Gary, and H. C. Frick.

TO BUILD RUSSIA'S NAVY.

Americans Get Leases of Baltic and Black Sea Wharves.

COPENHAGEN, Wednesday, Oct. 11.—The Politiken's St. Petersburg correspondent says that American capitalists have secured the leases of a number of Russian shipbuilding wharves on the Baltic and Black Seas.

The concession, the paper adds, will be for a few years only, and is for the purpose of building Russian warships, the work to be done almost exclusively by American engineers and workmen under the formal supervision of Russian officials.

TAFT'S STATUS ON CANAL JOB.

He Asked President to Make It Clear —No Trouble with Shonts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The report that Secretary Taft and Mr. Shonts, the head of the Panama Canal Commission, were at odds was denied at the War Department to-day. The two worked in entire harmony up to the time that the Secretary left for the Philippines, and they had a complete understanding as to details of the work for the interval until Mr. Taft's return.

The Secretary dealt with Engineer Wallace's sudden resignation as a matter in which he had absolute control. In fact, he took the part of Mr. Shonts, between whom and Mr. Wallace there had been little co-operation.

The story now is that Mr. Shonts during the Summer had ignored the War Department, gone directly to the President with every question of advantage, and transacted a large amount of important business of which there is no record in the War Department. It has been said, in effect, that Mr. Shonts was trying to carry the whole canal organization under his hat, leaving out Taft, his superior.

Though Mr. Shonts receives $30,000 a year, while the Secretary, as a member of the Cabinet, gets but $8,000, that is no criterion of rank. The Secretary, acting for the President, is the superior of the head of the Canal Commission.

When the Secretary and the President talked the matter over the other night this point of responsibility was brought up by the Secretary. It was agreed finally that Secretary Taft should be absolute in his control of canal matters.

RISKS LIFE TO SAVE CHILD.

Nurse Seizes Runaway's Bridle—Faints When Danger Is Passed.

Miss Anna Molloy, a graduate nurse of the Lebanon Hospital, was standing at the corner of Webster and Tremont Avenues, in the Bronx, early yesterday evening, when three little children while trying to cross the street, were in danger of being run over and killed by a team of horses that came tearing along dragging behind them a heavy lumber truck with a drunken driver.

The two older children saw their danger and had presence of mind enough to run back to the curb. The youngest child was too frightened to move.

There was only a short distance between the terrified child and the horses when Miss Molloy sprang into the street and caught the bridle of the nearest animal. She succeeded in swerving the horses from their course far enough to save the child, but was dragged along for almost half a block.

She returned to the spot where the child was lying, picked it up in her arms, handed it to Policeman Gordon a block away, and then fainted.

ESTATE TO HERRON CHILDREN

Mrs. Rand, Professor's Mother-in-Law, Leaves Big Trust Fund.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, Oct. 10.—The will of Mrs. E. D. Rand, mother of Mrs. George Herron, who died in Italy two months ago, was filed to-day, disposing of an estate estimated at $1,500,000. Mrs. Herron receives about $200,000 and Mrs. Rand's brothers $15,000 each.

The remainder is to be held in trust for the Herron children, their shares to be paid as they attain the age of 28 years. Meanwhile this money is to be invested and the net income to be divided, one-half to maintenance of religious educational work and one-half to accumulate for the grandchildren.

SCULPTOR DESTROYS HIS CATHEDRAL ANGELS

Wouldn't See Them Wrangled About and Carted Off.

HE PUT HIS SOUL INTO THEM

And When Some One Criticised Their Sex It Roused His Artist Spirit; Therefore He Smashed 'Em.

There will be no wrangling over the question whether the statues representing the Angel of the Annunciation and of the Resurrection at the entrance to the Belmont Chapel of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on Morningside Heights, shall be men or women. Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor who conceived and executed those two immense statues as beautiful women, went up to the Cathedral very early on Monday morning and broke to pieces the two figures he had taken most interest in since he took charge of the sculpture work of the church.

"I felt like a murderer," he said last night, "but that was the only thing to do under the circumstances. They belonged to me in the sense that they could not be sold for other purposes; they did not belong to me in the sense that I could not take them away from the Cathedral."

"I had put the best that was in me into them; I had taken particular interest in them, doing a great deal of the work, outside of modeling, which ordinarily would have been done by others. I didn't want an express man to haul them away to be stored somewhere. I didn't want any one to touch them except myself. So I simply broke them to pieces myself, and I should hate to tell you how I felt when I did it.

"I brought a piece or two here to keep. Here are the faces of the two angels, and here is the hand of one. I shall keep them. No, there is no truth in the story that the rest of the forty angel figures will be changed to women. It is absurd of any one to talk of 'altering' a figure from a woman to that of a man."

"You will model the figures which the Building Committee requires to represent the Angel of Resurrection and of the Annunciation?" Mr. Borglum was asked.

"Oh, yes, I am under contract to do that work for the Cathedral. The word came that the angels must be men, and men they shall be."

"Have you any idea yet how the two figures should be modeled?"

"No, I am up against it. I can't think the man idea into those angels, especially into the Angel of the Annunciation. It seems to me that it is repugnant to every gentlemanly sense to conceive of a man performing that rôle. The idea is such a delicate one that I made the figure of even the woman shrink back after she had told the Virgin, as if it was almost too sacred a thing for her to put into words.

"I have examined more than 200 statues of these two angels, and the idea of masculinity I can find in none of them. My two figures were modeled and executed, and no one had anything to say. It remained for some out-of-town man to stray through the Cathedral and discover sex where no one else had seen it. And he was a clergyman.

"The committee has advanced no idea as to what the figures shall embody except that they shall be men. I have two scholars searching Biblical literature for suggestions.

"I have almost a bushel of clippings about this affair. You would be surprised to see some of the letters I get. I have just received a letter from a sincere but misguided man out West, who offers, in all the seriousness of a kindly heart, his young son as a model for the Angel of Annunciation. The son is only 19 years old, but he weighs 200 pounds. He would therefore be imposing enough. He is now a clerk, and a rather worldly young man, but the father feels that he would come on and pose if pressed. Think of that Annunciator!

"I have made the angels as sexless as possible. It is bad art to let much of the form be seen in such figures. The breasts should not be noticeable; the draping should come close around the neck and arms, and even the feet. And yet, in the angel idea there is something pure and spiritual and clearly beautiful which is more compatible with woman than with man. And so artists, unanimously, so far as I know, while repressing the sex, have inevitably given to angels the face, the form, and the indefinable atmosphere of woman."

Mr. Borglum may model the two angels as men to square with the criticism of some churchmen and to fit the names Gabriel and Michael, which, his opponents hold, must be masculine. But those who uphold his ideas don't believe that they can be much more than mechanical figures.

There was much discussion as to the entire forty figures that have so far been modeled by and under the direction of Mr. Borglum, but evidently the Building Committee considered that the changing of the two angels of Annunciation and Resurrection would be concession enough to the man idea.

Mr. Borglum indicates that he will prepare a paper on angels generally, and the Cathedral episode in particular, which he will publish in some art journal.

RETIRES AFTER SCANDAL.

George Morton Leaves Place as M., K. and T. Passenger Agent.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—Announcement was made at the Missouri, Kansas and Texas general offices of the retirement of George Morton as General Passenger and Ticket Agent. He is succeeded by W. S. St. George, who has been General Eastern Agent for eleven years. C. C. Hopper, Mr. St. George's assistant, will assume charge of the New York office.

Morton's retirement has been whispered about ever since the Sprague shooting escapade, three weeks ago. The shooting was the culmination of the trouble which caused Mr. Sprague to get a divorce last Spring. In the petition Morton was named.

The filing of the suit was the social sensation of the day, for until that time Mrs. Sprague had been one of the social leaders of St. Louis.

MRS. F. B. ESLER A BANKRUPT.

She Owes $17,900 to Eighty-three Creditors and Has Only $250.

Mrs. Rebecca L. Esler, wife of Vice President Frederick B. Esler of the Union Surety and Guaranty Company, a near neighbor of William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., at Great Neck, L. I., filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday with Charles A. Tipling, referee in bankruptcy for the Long Island District. She says she owes $17,936.58, and names eighty-three creditors in business in Paris, London, Newport, New York City, Arden, N. Y.; Tuxedo Park, Jersey City, and Great Neck, Long Island.

The list of creditors shows that Mrs. Esler owes for gowns, millinery, stationery, books, drugs, jewels, groceries, milk, meat, fruits, vegetables, theatre tickets, confections, furniture, plumbing, and professional services.

In her petition Mrs. Esler swears that she has no bank account or interest in any lands, stocks, or bonds; her life is not insured, and all she lays claim to is clothing and furniture, which is exempt by law, and is valued at $250.

PRINCE EITEL ENGAGED.

Announcement at Gluecksburg—Saxe-Coburg's Duke to Wed To-day.

GLUECKSBURG, Schleswig-Holstein, Oct. 10.—The engagement of Prince Eitel Frederick, second son of Emperor William, to the Duchess Sophia Charlotte, eldest daughter of the reigning Grand Duke of Oldenburg, is announced.

This little town is in gala array, for the marriage to-morrow of Prince Charles Edward, Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, a nephew of King Edward, and Princess Victoria Adelaide, eldest daughter of Duke Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein, and niece of Empress Augusta Victoria.

The Emperor and Empress arrived this morning, and all the imperial Princes are here, except Crown Prince Frederick William. Prince Arthur of Connaught, who will represent the British Court, and many Princes and members of the high nobility from all parts of Germany have arrived.

The marriage is unusually popular with the German people, and will entirely remove the suspicions that have obtained against the Duke as an English Prince, while the union of the Duke with a niece of the Empress will meet all the political requirements of the case.

Persons behind the scenes say that it is entirely a love match.

A CHALLENGE BY SCOTTY.

Says He Can Travel Quicker Than Harriman—Has Got a Lot More Gold.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 10.—Walter Scott, the "Croesus of Death Valley," arrived in Los Angeles to-day from his mine and forthwith telegraphed to a San Francisco paper a formal challenge to E. H. Harriman for a race in special trains across the continent for a wager of $85,000. "Scotty" decided to challenge Mr. Harriman as soon as he learned that the latter intended to smash the transcontinental record. The challenge will be presented to Mr. Harriman when he arrives in San Francisco from Yokohama.

The distance from Los Angeles to Chicago is 2,265 miles, and from San Francisco to Chicago is 2,318 miles. "Scotty" says he will allow Mr. Harriman one minute for each mile traveled by him over the number traveled by Scott. "Scotty" wants to make the run from Los Angeles to Chicago over the Santa Fé in thirty-eight hours.

That Scott has money to back his wager and will make another record-breaking trip whether Mr. Harriman accepts the offer or not is not doubted in Los Angeles. The miner arrived in Barstow a few days ago from his mysterious mine with two burros loaded down with gold. When he arrived in Los Angeles today he again began to dispose of his wealth in the manner which has made him famous throughout the West.

KILLED SISTER IN PLAY.

Boy Aimed His Father's Shotgun at Little Mary Garrett.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTPORT, L. I., Oct. 10.—Mary, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Garrett of Water Mill, was shot and instantly killed at her home in that village this afternoon by Thomas, her seven-year-old brother, while playing "Indian."

Her father, who is an enthusiastic sportsman, had neglected to remove the cartridges from his shotgun after returning from a hunting trip and had allowed the gun to stand in the corner of the kitchen. About 3 o'clock, when the parents were in an adjoining room, Thomas said to his sister, "Let's play Indian." He took the gun, aimed it at his little palmate, and pulled the trigger. The little girl was instantly killed. Thomas is terribly distressed by the consequences of his act.

$101,000 CASH STOLEN FROM ADAMS EXPRESS

Package Taken from Pittsburg Offices—Trusted Clerk Gone.

HIS WIFE STARTED INQUIRY

Cunliffe's Failure to Return Home Worried Her—Money All in $100 Bills or Smaller Denominations.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 10.—A package containing $101,000 in cash was stolen yesterday from the general offices of the Adams Express Company in this city. Edward George Cunliffe, money clerk of the company, and one of its trusted employes, is missing, and the police of every city in the country have been asked to arrest him on the charge of stealing the money.

The cash was delivered to the company late yesterday afternoon. The package containing the money was made up of $80,000 in $100 bills, $10,000 in $50 bills, and the remainder of the money was in $5, $10, and $20 bills.

It was learned to-night that a part of the money had been shipped by the Bank of Pittsburg, and the remainder by the Farmers' National Bank of this city. From the same source it was learned that the money was consigned to a bank in Cincinnati, but the name of the bank cannot be ascertained.

Cunliffe, who received the money after banking hours yesterday afternoon, left his office at the usual time, about 6 o'clock in the evening. He stopped in the hallway of the building and chatted with several of the other employes before he started for his home. When he reached there he said nothing to his wife, but went direct to his room, where he changed his clothes, putting on a new Winter suit. He ate his supper, and then said that he was going out for the evening. He kissed his four children an affectionate good-bye and left the house. That was the last seen of him.

When he did not report for duty this morning nothing was thought of the matter, but when his wife a few hours later called up the office of the company and asked if he was there the suspicion of the company was aroused. A hurried examination was made of his books, and it was found that his accounts were $5 short. It was fully an hour afterward that a telegram was received from Cincinnati announcing the fact that the package containing the money had not been received there, and asking why it had not been sent. A further examination of Cunliffe's books was made, and it was found that the money which had been intrusted to his care had never been forwarded.

Detective agencies were at once notified, and a search was started for Cunliffe. Fourteen hours had elapsed from the time that he had left his home in the West End until the company was convinced that he was guilty of the theft. There are night trains on both the Pittsburg and Lake Erie and the Pennsylvania Roads for Buffalo, and it is believed by the officers that he boarded one of these trains, with the hope of reaching the Canadian border before his crime was discovered.

At the little home of the Cunliffe family, in the West End, the members of the family of the missing man are almost heartbroken. Cunliffe, according to the neighbors, was a most devoted husband and father. He was absolutely free from bad habits of any kind, and all of his time, when not at his office, was devoted to his wife and children. While he was not a regular member of any church, he almost invariably attended some church every Sunday. He did not drink, and was never known to have gambled. His wife was so ill to-night over the affair that she was in charge of friends.

Cunliffe came to this city in March, 1904, from Hartford, Conn., where all of his relatives live, and where he was held in the greatest esteem. Prior to his connection with the Adams Express Company, he was employed by the American Express Company in Hartford for a number of years, and came to Pittsburg with good recommendations from them.

The company issued the following description of the missing clerk:

"Edward George Cunliffe is 35 years of age, looks to be 40; 5 feet 7 inches tall; weight 170 pounds; medium build; dark brown hair, heavily mixed with gray; wears a heavy, short-cropped mustache, dark, and partly mixed with gray; could raise a very heavy beard; has blue eyes. When last seen he wore dark blue, double-breasted sack suit, a black derby hat, turned collar, and a black bow tie. He wears a silver ring with an acorn design. He is an inveterate cigarette smoker, and the second finger of his right hand is badly discolored with nicotine. Cunliffe is afflicted with what is known as the 'cigarette cough.'"

ATTACKS ROOSEVELT POLICY.

Dean Rogers of Yale Talks on Tendency to Centralization.

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—Henry Wade Rogers, Dean of the Yale Law, was the chief speaker to-night at a mass meeting held in Faneuil Hall under the auspices of the Anti-Imperialist League. Gen. Miles, Charles Francis Adams, Winslow Warren, and Erving Winslow occupied platform seats.

Dean Rogers spoke on "The Powers of the President," attacking the principal steps of Mr. Roosevelt's Administration for their tendency toward centralization. In this manner he criticised the coal strike settlement, the power delegated by Congress in the Philippines, the canal régime, the Santo Domingo protocol, and the "Executive order" pension plan.

HYDE OUT OF UNION PACIFIC.

P. A. Valentine Replaces Him in Directorate at Annual Election.

SALT LAKE, Oct. 10.—James H. Hyde of New York was dropped from the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad at the stockholders' annual meeting to-day. P. A. Valentine of Chicago was elected in his place. All other members of the former board were re-elected.

There were voted at the meeting 1,963,241 shares of stock, nearly 75 per cent. of the total holdings. There was no opposition to the Harriman interests.

At the Union Pacific Land Company's annual meeting the former Board of Directors was re-elected, with the exception that R. S. Lovett succeeds Legrand Young of Salt Lake.

COURT CANNOT AWAIT ROOT.

Federal Supreme Bench Denies Request for Secretary's Convenience.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—That the Supreme Court of the United States cannot stop in due course of business, even to give ear to the Secretary of State, was announced to-day in the case of E. H. Wimbish vs. Henry Jamison. Alexander Akerman, representing Jamison, asked postponement for a month, saying that Mr. Root had been employed as counsel, but his duties as Secretary of State were such that he could not give his immediate attention.

"Greatly pleased though the court woud be to hear Mr. Root," said the Chief Justice, "the business must go on." It was then decided to proceed without Mr. Root. The case, known as the Georgia Chain Gang case, involves the State law authorizing the Recorder of Macon to sentence violators of city ordinances to labor on the public works.

VIVISECTION BY WOMEN.

Female Students Enter the Class in Chicago University.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Eight women students have entered a large class in vivisection, which will be taught this quarter at the University of Chicago. They will experiment on dogs, for which they pay 50 cents each; cats, for which they pay 25 cents, and, as one of the instructors said, on "anything else they can get hold of."

This course will be conducted notwithstanding continuous protests made all over the country by individuals and humane institutions. As in the past, the instruction will be given in the physiology building. The instructors will be Drs. A. J. Carlson and Albert Woelfel of the Rush Medical School.

The class is obliged to go to the laboratory in two sections. That makes a double quantity of animals necessary.

ELECTRICITY FOR THE ERIE.

Equipment Will Begin with Suburban Lines, Says President Underwood.

NEWARK, Oct. 10.—"Electricity will play a great part in the future development of railroads," said President Underwood of the Erie to-day. "It now takes five engines to get a freight train over the fifteen miles of road to the top of the mountains between Susquehanna and Deposit. There will be a great saving in operating expenses when the Summit electrical plant is ready.

"A committee is considering the electrical equipment of the line. At first this equipment will be in suburban territory. It has been demonstrated that electrical service is all right there. Arrangements are being made for the installation of the most modern and efficient railway signal service in the market."

ACTOR KILLED ON STAGE.

Real Bullet Used with Fatal Effect Before Oregon Audience.

Special to The New York Times.

ASTORIA, Ore., Oct. 10.—Herbert Breed, a well-known actor whose home is in Newark, N. J., was shot in the Grand Opera House to-night while playing the part of the villain in "Michael Strogoff."

The revolvers were examined as usual before show began, and there appeared to be no bullets in the shells. Frank Laughton, the leading man, fired the shot which was supposed to kill the villain, and it really did.

Laughton will be charged with manslaughter.

FAVOR A SEA-LEVEL CANAL.

Reported Opinion of the Majority of the Engineers.

PANAMA, Oct. 10.—Major Gen. George W. Davis, Chairman of the Board of Consulting Engineers, in an interview to-day, said he had noticed that much progress had been made in canal affairs. He found the situation very satisfactory and thought the sanitary measures enforced were bound to make both the canal zone and the terminal cities as healthy as it was possible for cities in the tropics to be.

The American engineers refused to make any statement, saying that they had not had time to digest all the information obtained here. It is reported, however, that the discussions at the last session of the board showed that a majority, including the European engineers, favor a sea-level canal.

MRS. DAVIDSON ASKS DIVORCE.

Wife of Baltimore's ex-Mayor Sues After a Reconciliation.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.—Robert C. Davidson, formerly Mayor of Baltimore, who left the city last May, accompanied by a woman who had been his nurse, was sued by his wife to-day for absolute divorce. Gertrude Schmidt and "others unknown" are named as co-respondents. The name is not that of the nurse.

The Davidsons were married in 1873, and had lived together until last May. Davidson is in his fifty-fifth year. He formerly was President of the Baltimore Trust and Guarantee Company and reputed to be worth between $200,000 and $300,000. He returned to Baltimore late in the Summer, and he and his wife became reconciled. Of late he has passed much time in New York.

Mrs. Davidson asks alimony, declaring that Davidson has a large estate.

WORLD TOUR FOR FRANCIS.

St. Louis Fair President May Thank Emperors, Kings, &c.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—The Board of Directors of the World's Fair decided this afternoon to send President Francis around the world to thank the Kings, Emperors, and other rulers whose countries took part in the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

The decision was reached at a meeting of the board in the Noonday Club rooms. President Francis began by presiding at the meeting. After routine business had been finished, Samuel Kennard got the floor. President Francis recognised him, and Kennard began reading. He became very complimentary, and President Francis became very red.

In a little while it got too warm for President Francis, and, calling Corwin H. Spencer, Third Vice President, to the chair, he seized his soft hat and bolted from the room.

"The resolution was a surprise to me," said Francis to-night. "I did not expect it, and haven't had a chance to determine whether to go or not."

LIFE INSURANCE JUST PHILANTHROPY

Not to Make Money for Policy-Holders, McCurdy Says.

$90,000 TO THE REPUBLICANS

Was the Mutual's Aid in Last Three Campaigns—Mr. Short, Now Dead, Knew All About It.

"I claim that life insurance is a philanthropic enterprise, and that the estimation in which the life insurance companies have been held in late years is a wrong one entirely. The fact that they have been held to be money-making affairs for the sake of the policy holder and the annual return to him in his dividends has obscured the whole object of a mutual life insurance company—what it is intended for, what it does."

President Richard A. McCurdy of the Mutual Life thus expressed his ideas on the general purposes of the business of mutual companies at yesterday's hearing in the insurance investigation before the Armstrong committee. At another point in his testimony he became even more specific, saying that the Mutual Life "was organized on the theory that it was a great, beneficent, missionary institution," and that every policy holder was under an obligation to recognize the fact that he was not taking a policy of life insurance "solely for his own benefit, but is participating in a great movement for the benefit of humanity at large."

Counsel Charles E. Hughes of the investigating committee appeared to be very much interested in this expression of President McCurdy's views on the business of the Mutual Life. Accepting for the purposes of argument the missionary theory of life insurance, he devoted a great deal of his attention in the examination of Mr. McCurdy, which lasted through the afternoon session, to the question of the salaries of the missionaries. Particularly was Mr. Hughes interested in knowing President McCurdy's views on the subject of his own salary of $150,000 a year, and in bringing out the attitude that the Mutual's President may have taken for the final increase in 1901 from $100,000 a year to the present figures.

Mr. McCurdy expressed distaste at explaining why the Mutual Trustees decided that his services in that year had become worth an additional $50,000. So, James M. Beok, who was representing the company at the hearing, volunteered a statement of the growth of the assets of the Mutual from $108,000,000, when Mr. McCurdy took office in 1885, to $440,000,000 at the end of 1904. He ended a long speech on this subject by the declaration that the Mutual Life was now "the pride of the country." Mr. Hughes, however, was disposed to seek from Mr. McCurdy personally some light on the subject, and the Mutual's President, after he had testified to the facts brought out by Mr. Beck, summed up by, saying that he accepted the increase from $100,000 to $150,000 on the theory that it expressed the "appreciation" which the Trustees had of his services to the Mutual Life.

Campaign Payments, $90,000.

Campaign payments, footing up $90,000, by the Mutual to the Republican National Committee in the last three Presidential elections came to light yesterday in the testimony of Dr. Walter R. Gillett and Robert H. Granniss, Vice Presidents of he company, and of Robert Oliphant, Chairman of the Mutual's Expense Committee. Mr. Oliphant also said that quarterly payments of $25,000 each for "confidential legal expenses" had been made by him to the late E. L. Short, the Mutual's solicitor, from 1903, when Mr. Oliphant became Chairman of the Expense Committee, down to the time of Mr. Short's death a few months ago.

Mr. Oliphant took no detailed account of these expenditures from Mr. Short, explaining that they had been made by the authorization of the "executive," who, in this instance, he specified as Dr. Gillett and Mr. Granniss, but these two appeared to be quite as unable as Mr. Oliphant to go into the details of the "confidential legal service" payments. They said that such matters were entirely in the charge of Mr. Short, who, as Mr. Granniss remarked, is "unfortunately now dead." President McCurdy himself testified that he had no more particular knowledge of these matters than the witnesses who had preceded.

Mr. Hughes hit the trail yesterday of A. C. Fields, the venerable head of the Mutual supply department, who had also figured as a part of the mysterious Andrew Hamilton Eugene Wood-Moe Dinkelspiel combination, and sought some information concerning payments by the Mutual for advertising, printing, and stationery. These payments have run largely in excess of those reported by other companies. The two Vice Presidents of the Mutual were unable to give him any assistance, saying that these matters were in the hands of Mr. Fields, who apparently had quite as free rein as did the late Mr. Short. Whereupon Mr. Hughes demanded that the company produce Mr. Fields under its offer conveyed to the committee in writing to submit any of its officers for examination without the formality of subpoena. James M. Beck replied:

Must Subpoena Fields.

"If you want Mr. Fields you can subpoena him. Mr. Fields is ill, as we can prove by expert testimony, and we don't feel that we are under any obligation to bring him here in such a condition."

Earlier in the day a representative of the committee had notified the company of the committee's desire to have Mr. Fields testify. The result was similar. It appeared, however, from the testimony that for the last two or three years Lysander Lawrence, the stationer, who has handled a large part of the Mutual's printing and supply business, has performed Mr. Fields's duties.

District Attorney Jerome was an interested attendant at the afternoon session yesterday and heard nearly all of President McCurdy's testimony. Another listener in the early part of the day was Sir John Lend, member of the British Parliament for Dundee, Scotland.

"I dont' know," he said, when asked for his views on the investigation, "whether such evils as have been discovered here exist among the English companies. When I sailed from England early in September there was no whisper of corruption, but I have heard that this inquiry of yours is attracting such attention as to cause Englishmen to see whether their own insurance interests are in danger."

President McCurdy was a skillful witness, and proved one of the most difficult propositions that Mr. Hughes has been up against since the insurance hearings began. Throughout his examination he maintained an apparent desire to speak with perfect frankness about the affairs of the company and received pointed questions of a personal nature with a degree of tolerant good humor that would have disarmed a less persistent inquirer. There were several passages at arms between Mr. McCurdy and the committee's counsel, with Mr. Beck interrupting the proceedings at intervals, that drew from an audience which filled the council chamber at the City Hall bursts of laughter and applause so spontaneous that even Chairman Armstrong of the committee, a stickler for the proprieties, was loath to suppress them.

What McCurdy Couldn't Tell.

Mr. McCurdy's testimony, however, like that of his son, Robert H. McCurdy, was notable for the negative answers that he made about some affairs of the company. Among other things Mr. McCurdy said:

That he wasn't conversant with the affairs of the Raymond & Co. contract.

That he had not ascertained in detail the expense to the Mutual at which the business of the metropolitan agency had been carried on, aside from the general report submitted to the trustees at their annual meeting.

That he was not aware that C. H. Raymond & Co. were receiving a higher commission than other general agents of the Mutual or than other general agents of other companies.

That he had not examined the question of rates for agents of late years except at the stated periods when reports were made to him.

That he did not know what profits different agents of the Mutual might be making.

That he had never taken any steps to ascertain whether some of the agents were making too much money, although he had a general impression that such was the case under the commission system which the Mutual is now supplanting with a salaried agent system.

That he never asked his son, Robert H. McCurdy, in the years in which Robert H. was a member of Charles H. Raymond & Co., what his share of the profits of that business were.

That his son had never told him what his share of the profits of Raymond & Co. were.

That he had never inquired what the profits of his son-in-law, Dr. Thebault, were from the business of Raymond & Co., and didn't have any idea of the size of those profits.

That he had never known what Dr. Thebault's proportional interests were in the Raymond & Co. business.

That he had not given particular attention to agency matters for many years.

That he had never discussed in detail the relation between the expenses of new business and the loading of the premiums set apart for that purpose, this being a matter for the actuary.

That he had never requested an increase of salary in his connection with the company.

That he did not know how E. L. Short dispensed the money paid him for "confidential legal expenses."

That he did not know how the payments of the Mutual to the several Republican campaign funds had been made or who got the money.

Mr. McCurdy's Testimony.

By far the most interesting part of President McCurdy's testimony was that which had to do with the amount of compensation he received from the Mutual for his services. This drew from him the expression of his views as to a mutual company. The subject came up after he had said that he had not given special attention to the agency department or to such actuarial matters as were not brought to him specifically by the actuary of the company.

"Have you given special attention to the matter of salaries?" Mr. Hughes asked.

"Not particularly of late years," replied President McCurdy, while the audience laughed.

Mr. Hughes wanted to know what steps were taken when in 1901 the salary had been increased from $100,000 to $150,000. Mr. McCurdy replied that the increase had been suggested by the Committee on Salaries.

"Did you request such an increase?" demanded Mr. Hughes.

"I did not," was the reply. "I never requested an increase of my salary in my life."

Mr. Hughes brought down the house again by asking:

"Did the committee formally bring to your attention or did some individual member ask whether you would be willing to have your salary increased?"

Mr. McCurdy was not a bit disgruntled as he replied:

"To the best of my recollection, the Committee on Salaries were in session, or had met, and I was asked to come into the room. I went into the room and some other salaries were discussed, and when the question came to my own salary I was requested to leave the room, and I did leave the room, and when I returned the gentlemen asked me what I thought about my own salary. I told them the matter was entirely in their hands, to do with as they saw fit. There was a discussion, which took place with regard to it, and they fixed my salary at $150,000. I felt highly complimented and honored and thanked them for it.

Right to Salary Increase.

Q.—Did you think that you had any right to take that salary? A.—If I did not I should not be sitting here.

Q.—What grounds were advanced for the increase? A.—On what grounds—was it that?

Q.—Yes. A.—I don't want to sound my own praises, Mr. Hughes. I would much rather other people would do that for me. I took it as an indication of appreciation put upon my services by the Salaries Committee, who were the mouthpiece of the Finance Committee and Trustees generally, or they would not have done it.

Q.—You would have continued to render your services at $100,000? A.—I would have continued to render my services, no matter what they paid me.

Q.—Did you interpose any remonstrance against the increase? A.—I certainly did not. I was not called upon to do so.

Q.—Do you know any President of any other insurance company that receives as much? A.—I felt all the more complimented by the fact that I believed that there was no other life insurance President that got so much.

Q.—Did you think you had a right to take that money from the policy holders of the Mutual Life Insurance Company as a matter of compliment? A.—I said I felt highly complimented, but I did not say I took it as a matter of compliment, but I took it as a recognition of what I believed the Trustees valued my services at, as a recognition on the part of the Committee on Salaries, who were the mouthpiece of the board.

Q.—Had your services increased—that is, the time which you gave to the company or the character of the services? Have they changed? A.—I think all such services are cumulative in their nature, and they must be until physical or mental infirmity overtakes one. The result of past effort is a fair thing to be considered. Acquired familiarity, experience, and thrift—all these things are fair consideration, but you cannot tell where an increase in a man's efficiency or knowledge begins, or just where it stops, but there must be a point in each case.

Not Self-Perpetuating.

Assemblyman Rogers of the committee then took up the questioning and asked about the appointment of the Committee on Salaries. President McCurdy said it was appointed by the Finance Committee from its own membership, the latter, of course, acting as a representative of the board. Mr. Hughes thereupon jumped to the matter of proxy held by the management. He asked whether the fact that the Trustees of the Mutual were elected by virtue of the 25,000 proxies that the management has held continuously for a number of years meant in effect that the management had power to constitute the Board of Trustees as it wished, and was therefore virtually self-perpetuated. Mr. McCurdy replied that as he considered it the continued possession of proxies was an indication that the policy holders had sufficient confidence in the management, not only to pay their money to it, but to give it power to represent them in the annual elections. He said that, considering the vast territory covered by the policy holders of a company like the Mutual, he saw no other way to hold elections.

Mr. McCurdy went on to explain his idea that the management has not absolute power over the board. He said that but nine out of the thirty-six members are elected at any one time, so that if any serious question existed in the minds of the policy holders as to the wisdom of the acts of the management, they would have opportunity to discontinue their proxies and demand a change.

Mr. Hughes then asked about the increase in 1902 of the salary of Vice President Grannis to its present figure of $50,000 a year. President McCurdy said that he did not remember the circumstances, and did not know whether he had suggested the increase. He added, however, that he believed Mr. Grannis was worth all he got, and more. Mr. Hughes asked what considerations prompted in 1903 the creation of a second First Vice President, to which Dr. Gillet was appointed when Robert H. McCurdy was transferred from the foreign department to the office of General Manager. The witness replied that it was in general the growth of the company, and that Dr. Gillett was in the natural order of promotion, as was Robert H. McCurdy for the office of General Manager.

Mr. Beck at this point interrupted, to ask permission to read upon the minutes the record of the growth of the society as explaining the successive increases in the President's salary. Mr. Hughes said that he had no objection, but that if this growth was deemed a justification for the increases he would like to have Mr. McCurdy say so. To this President McCurdy replied:

"I have said, Mr. Hughes, I would prefer that somebody else should say for me what a becoming modesty inclines me not to say myself. If Mr. Beck has got a lot of statistics there, which I didn't know he had, which bear on that subject, I should much rather he would produce that than myself. It is rather distasteful to me.

"I object to the word 'justification,' because I do not consider any justification is necessary; but at all events, as you put me in that position, I am willing to state what, as I say, I would have preferred that you might have brought out from some other witness."

He then added:

At the time that I succeeded to the Presidency of the company my predecessor was 81 years of age. I think that he was universally recognized in his prime as head and front of life insurance officials in this country. But he could not help getting old. The condition of the company at the end of 1883, I think, or 1884 was that it had about $103,000,000 of assets and $3,000,000 of what was called surplus in those days. During the previous ten years the position of the company, it was well known to insurance experts at the time, although we did not publish it any more than we could help, but it was practically stationary, if not retrograde.

During the previous ten years the surplus one year had been diminished by $800,000, another year it diminished about $75,000. And another year it increased about $25,000, and so it went. It was doing less business than either of its big competitors, as they then were, and its expense account was high, for the reason then that the diminished production had increased the standing charges. I may call it expense account.

In many respects, as I say, the company was practically stationary, and I conceived it to be my duty, with the support and conference of the Board of Trustees, to do what the life insurance company is chartered to do—do business, and to build up the company again into the position it had formerly occupied as the leading life insurance company of the world, and not allow it to drift into the position it was rapidly drifting into when I said in one of my first addresses to the Board of Trustees: "If things went on in that way very long the only claims to distinction the Mutual Life Insurance Company would have would be that it was the oldest American company."

With that premise I read from the list which Mr. Beck had handed me:

The Increase in Assets.

"In the year 1885 the assets of the company were one hundred and eight thousand four hundred-odd dollars. They increased the next year, which was the beginning of my administraion, to $113,000,000, the next year to $118,000,000, to $125,000,000, to $135,000,000, to $146,000,000, to $158,000,000, to $157,000,000, to $184,000,000, to $202,000,000, to $219,000,000, to $234,000,000, to $253,000,000, to $277,000,000, to $301,000,000, to $325,000,000, to $352,000,000, to $382,000,000, to $401,000,000, to $440,000,000, at the end of 1904, and they are now, by the July statement of the company, about $457,000,000, or a gain in twenty years in the assets of the company of $322,000,000.

During the eighteen years up to 1901, when that increase in salaries was made, the company had increased its assets $242,000,000. Without going through, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hughes, the details of this, in the year 1885, the total income of the company was $20,214,000, and at the end of 1904 it was $81,200,000, or a gain in the twenty years of $60,000,000 of income.

The total disbursements meanwhile increased $60,750,000, and, mind you, that includes dividends and payments to policy holders by death claims and everything, as well as expenses—an increase from $17,359,000 to $51,382,000, or a gain in twenty years of about thirty-four million dollars, which is made up by payments to policy holders, less the current expenses of the company.

The excess of the total income over the total disbursements of the company in the year 1885, and then again of the total income over the total disbursements of the company, was $2,855,000. Last year the gain of the total income over the total disbursements was $29,620,253, or a gain in twenty years of $26,000,000 a year. The payments to the policy holders—that means benefits distributed through the country at large by this Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York for the year 1884 were $14,402,000; in 1904 they were $34,484,000, or more than nearly three times as much, or twenty millions more than they were twenty years ago.

As I told you, the company was practically stationary at that time. New business at that time was $46,548,000 down to the year 1884. In 1904 the new business transacted and paid for—and I want to draw a distinction right here: That does not mean business written, as it is called, policies issued and charged to an agent and returned after the end of the year, taken or not taken as the case may be; but this means policies actually written, actually issued, accepted by the insured and the first premium paid in full in cash. That is the way out statements were made and have been for many years. We do not issue any statements which show simply the business written, at all, but the policies actually issued and paid for by the payment of the full first premium in cash in 1904 were $231,580,000—a gain in twenty years of $184,959,000.

The insurance in force on the books of the company in 1885 was $368,000,000. That was the insurance in force. It increased from year to year down to 1895, when the insurance in force at that time was $898,000,000, but at that time we began, as I say, the substitution of the plan of only reporting policies actually accepted and paid for in cash. The whole premium previous to that formed the record of the business written, but new business written which would be in excess of the business paid for was $825,000,000, as against $368,000,000.

In 1904 the insurance in force was $1,547,611,660, or a gain in insurance in force within the twenty years of $1,178,659,325.

Salary Question Again.

When Mr. McCurdy was done Mr. Beck got permission to make one more suggestion to the witness as to salary. He asked this:

"Isn't it a fact the Mutual Life Insurance Company is not only the largest insurance company in the world, but in addition to that its assets are larger than the Bank of France, the Bank of England, and the Bank of Germany combined?"

"I believe that to be a fact," said President McCurdy.

Committeeman Rogers at this poin said: said:

"I understand, Mr. McCurdy, that the point which counsel seeks to make is this, that the increase in salary is warranted by the increase in assets."

Mr. Beck replied for Mr. McCurdy:

"Increase in assets and growth of the business and increased responsibility. Now, allow me to give an illustration of my point. Suppose a little steel mill is on the Allegheny River, and there is a President of that steel mill, which we will say is valued at $1,000,000. It then goes into the United States Steel Corporation, with a capitalization of $1,450,000,000, and the President of the little mill becomes the President of the greater company. Would it be contended for one moment by this committee that the President of the United States Steel Corporation, whose salary was reputed to be $500,000 and a bonus to boot—I refer to Mr. Schwab's salary—is it intended that his salary should not be more than the salary of the President of the little mill? When you have made that comparison you have made the comparison of the company as it was when Mr. McCurdy became President, and as it is to-day, the pride of this country."

Committeeman Rogers took up the inquiry again, remarking:

"I am following the contention that the assets justify the increase. In 1885 the assets were approximately $108,000,000. In 1901, which was the year the salary was increased to $150,000, the assets were $350,000,000; in other words, they were increased about three times.

"Now the payments to policy holders, which seems to me also a very good criterion in 1885, in round numbers were $14,500,000, and in 1901 about $28,000,000, the increase being something over twice as much. The President's salary, however, has been increased from $30,000, as I understand it, to $150,000—in other words, five times, so that, isn't your proportion somewhat too large as far as the President's salary is concerned?"

Cost to the Policy Holders.

Again it was Mr. Beck who answered. He said:

"If you appeal to me, Mr. Rogers, I say that a man who is responsible to 600,000 policy holders for 450-odd million dollars deserves a larger compensation than a President who is responsible for $100,000,000. Moreover, the actual amount paid by each policy holder of the Mutual Life to Mr. McCurdy's salary for this vast responsibility, a responsibility in a financial sense that probably is not equaled in the world, is less than 20 cents."

Mr. Hughes now asked:

"How much would it be if his salary was half a million? It would hardly be more than 21 cents, would it?"

There was a laugh at this, and Senator Tully remarked:

"Mr. Beck, as an abstract proposition, do you think the services of any man as a President of a life insurance company worth $100,000?"

"I am delighted you ask that question," replied Mr. Beck, "and I claim the indulgence of the committee for a few moments while I answer."

But Chairman Armstrong interrupted him.

"Don't think, Mr. Beck, that that question gives you a standing or an opportunity for any lengthy remarks."

Beck Compliments Hughes.

Mr. Beck was not daunted.

"I am not going to make any remarks," he declared. "I am going to answer the question I want to say, in the first place, there are thirty law firms in this city that make more than $150,000 with no such responsibility, and if Mr. Hughes gets all his legal deserts, he ought to be one of the favored thirty. In the next place, I say there are many Stock Exchange houses who make as much as $150,000."

"They are not salaries," Mr. Rogers interrupted.

"They are not salaries," repeated Mr. Beck, "but they are on the commission basis."

There was a little lull after this. Then Chairman Armstrong said:

"Your first two metaphors, the steel mill and the lawyers' compensation, seem exceedingly poorly chosen."

Again the laugh was on Mr. Beck, but he kept at it, saying:

"They were separated by an interval of time; that there should be any connection between the two, I respectfully deny. But it is a fact—and I remember Dr. Johnson's famous remark that we ought to avoid cant—but it is a fact that in this great city there are many men who make far more compensation with far less responsibility and far less work than the President of this institution. What is more, I venture to say, as the General Manager said when he was on the stand, that the greatness of this company is due to the fact that it has always held out large rewards for large achievements. I think his words were most happily chosen, and they express the law and the prophets in this matter—especially the profits."

Senator Armstrong at last closed the dialogue by telling Mr. Hughes that he had the floor again, and the examination continued.

Q.—Now, without reference to any relation that may exist between these facts you have mentioned and the amount of salary that could properly be paid, it is entirely proper that there should appear upon the records the growth of your company as indicated in the many ways which you have mentioned; and it is proper that all the aspects of that growth should be well understood. Now, in the first place, when your assets increase that increase is from the moneys which have been paid to you by policy holders, or the investment at a profit of such moneys, is it not? A.—No.

Q.—What is it? A.—It is the money that is paid to give the benefit of life insurance to them and to every other future applicant for insurance that shall make application to the company so long as its energies continue to be exercised in that direction.

What Insurance Is For.

Mr. McCurdy continued thus:

"It is an entire misconception of the function of a life insurance company to consider it as a company organized for the benefit of making money, or of declaring dividends to the person who pays the premium to the company. The object of what is called a mutual company—it is not a mutual company mainly because it can elect a certain number of men Directors, and every policy holder has a right to cast a vote in person for a Director, or to send a proxy—that is not what makes a mutual company—it is not only the participation in the results of the business for this year, but it is carrying on the work which was in contemplation of the founders of the mutual system in this country. It was not so in England, for in England life insurance was originally a money-making scheme; it was an investment scheme; it was proprietary, and the men that put their money into that expected to get a dividend on their investment, and they, little by little, perhaps, admitted the policy holders to a participation in what were in that case the profits of business to be divided among them from time to time.

"But the Mutual Life Insurance Company was organized upon the theory of the men who introduced it at that time that it was a great beneficent missionary institution, to extend the benefits of life insurance as far as possible within the limits of safety and as far as practicable into every town and hamlet of this country. Europe was not thought of at that time. It was a mutual company to extend the business of life insurance. Profits were not thought of, were not dreamed of. That is what the company was organized to do, and that is what I was put there to do when I was elected President of the company, to extend the benefits of life insurance to every person who could be brought in, and if you choose to put it so, whether at a temporary or a permanent expense to a man already insured in the company made little difference. It was not the object to declare a dividend to a man; it was not the object that he should carry a policy of $2,500 or $3,000 and pay the premium of $19.28, or whatever it might be, and then at the end of the year get $7 and go home and spend it for cigars and billiards. The object was to insure as many men as possible and to pay them at the time of their death and not during their lifetime one penny.

No Idea of Profit.

"Dividends were not thought of excepting as they were reversionary, and to a certain extent what you call profit was not thought of, nor the element of expense was not thought of, because it was not conceived by those men in the early days. They thought it was a mutual association for mutual benefit to bring not only myself in that I might get a policy on my life and my wife and children might get it, but that in carrying out this beneficent idea I should induce my friend, my neighbor, and everybody else, or that an agent should be called upon to do it, and to get in everybody, and if it did necessitate an advance on my payments for a time or even an advance in premiums it did not matter. The object was based upon the contention that every man ought to carry life insurance, that every man ought to carry life insurance for the benefit of his family, the community, the world, and civilization. That was the object of it, and that is why I say when you introduce the word 'profit' in the foundation of the Mutual Life Insurance Company the idea of profit was entirely absent.

"The charter of the Mutual Life Insurance Company provided that when $500,000 insurance was subscribed and the premiums paid then it should commence business without a dollar of capital or anything but that which was paid in by the premiums of those early promoters. They did not take it to make profit of it. I doubt whether one of them ever had any idea of what the result of it would be. They did it from the pure spirit of philanthropy and benevolence to start a company which they believed would be a missionary enterprise, so to speak.

"That was the object of it. The charter of the Mutual Life Insurance Company provided that no premium ever paid into the company should ever be returned to anybody except in the form of reversionary insurance with the policy when it matured at the death of the insured, provided that any person who ceased to pay his premiums to the company—utterly in defiance of the present idea of the inherent right of policy holders to any part of their reserve of any kind—it was not recognized by those early people who founded the Mutual Life Insurance Company—it provided that if a man ceased to pay his premium the whole money previously paid should be forfeited to the company and added to those policy holders who persisted in remaining members of the company.

Missionaries' Salaries.

Mr. McCurdy stopped for the time, saying that he had not intended going on at such length, so Mr. Hughes went back to the question of salaries.

"Treating it as a missionary enterprise," said he, "the question goes back to the salary of the missionaries." But the witness led him off into another discussion as to the manner in which the growth or prosperity of an insurance company is to be measured, whether by the gross increase in assets or relative gain in the increase of assets to liabilities. And Mr. Hughes asked this question:

"So that when you wish to get at an index to the real prosperity of the company you must have a gain and loss exhibit of just to what extent at the end of the year you are ahead net of the point which you had reached at the end of the year before; that is right, isn't it?"

"Not necessarily so," replied Mr. McCurdy. "We have got to take into consideration what the company was chartered for and the amount of business that it is doing. The amount of new business very largely indicates prosperity, which is another name for the success of the company, and even if we should do a very large new business and should encroach somewhat for the time being, or should encroach somewhat on the surplus of the company, that is no indication that the company is doing a bad business, simply an indication it is doing what it was chartered to do, extending its business and extending its benefits and prospering in that sense of the word."

The Philanthropic Plan.

"Of course the philanthropy which you have in mind must have—" said Mr. Hughes.

Mr. McCurdy interrupted.

"Philanthropy," he repeated. "I claim it is a philanthropic enterprise, and that the estimation in which the life insurance companies have been held of late years has been a wrong one entirely, and that they have been held to be money-making affairs for the sake of the policy holder and the annual return to him in his dividends has obscured the whole object of a mutual life insurance company, what it was intended for, what it does."

Q.—That is a very interesting line, Mr. McCurdy. A.—Well, that is my belief.

Q.—Do I understand that you regard yourself as charged primarily with the duty of extending insurance, although it may be extended at the expense of the policy holder, and it would be more profitable for them to have it curtailed? A.—I do; that is the view I take of a life insurance company, of a mutual life insurance company; and that every person who goes in insured goes in insured on that basis, and with that obligation; that the object of that company is to diffuse itself as widely as possible, and that it is an obligation that every person ought to understand when he takes a policy of life insurance that he is not doing it solely for his own benefit, but he is participating in a great movement for the benefit of humanity at large and for every other person who comes in and takes a policy in that company, and in that way joins the great brotherhood. It is the basis of the fraternal orders, as I believe they are called, of eleemosynary and other insurance, that the life insurance company is an eleemosynary institution to a very large extent. I have always believed that all my life and I believe it to-day.

Q.—You understand of course that whatever philanthropy there may be in your undertaking it must have an economic basis? A.—Yes, but in a great many philanthropies there is no economic basis.

Q.—No doubt; but in the insurance philanthropy it is essential that there should be an economic basis? A.—Yes.

Q.—You don't propose to give insurance away, do you? A.—No, although some people say we do; we don't do it if we can help ourselves.

Q.—You don't propose, for example, to extend the benefits of insurance over the Orient at the danger of your company, at the expense of American policy holders? A.—No, I think that would be extremely injurious.

Q.—Don't you know that it is necessary every time you issue a policy in any country to have a secure basis for the payment of whatever that contract may call for? A.—Oh, yes undoubtedly.

Q.—Don't you know that that basis will soon be rendered insecure if the expenses of your company exceed what is allotted to the carrying on of the business? A.—If the company is going down hill and losing money, and expenses are attaining an undue relation to the other conditions of the company, of course it is no doubt about it—it is going to ruin—but when to-day or to-morrow something may turn up and make a change in the mortality rate, which you have probably seen, where all these diagrams show the varying experiences of year by year, and all that sort of thing, if you are going to be secured every time the mortality rate goes up above the average, why you wouldn't do much life insurance.

McCurdy Was Hampered.

Mr. Hughes started another laugh by asking whether the philanthropic proposition had figured largely in the circulars that the insurance company had issued to induce people to insure. Mr. McCurdy said he thought it had, "inferentially," and that the early literature of the company all bore that instruction. Mr. Hughes asked about the literature for the past ten years, and the witness replied that the end and object of life insurance had in recent years been very much obscured by "an entirely improper view that it was to make money for the individual, and not an institution in which all should participate for the common good rather than selfish good of the individual."

"How has it happened," asked Mr. Hughes, "that this has been obscured while you, as President of your company, had full opportunity to make it clear?"

"Because," said Mr. McCurdy, and he hesitated a moment, "I have done the best I could under the circumstances."

"What are the circumstances," inquired Mr. Hughes, "which have interfered with your efforts?"

"Circumstances of a very stiff competition from very strong and active, ingenious competitors."

"Do you mean," counsel persisted, "that it would not do to have your views on that subject too well known?"

Mr. McCurdy raised his hand in protest.

"Oh, well," he said, "now—now—now."

"What do you mean by stiff competition?" Mr. Hughes continued.

"I mean to say that the other fellows are doing just as much to beat me as I am to beat them, but don't let us get into points like that."

Mr. Hughes agreed, and came back to the question of salaries, asking whether in the interest of the policy holders Mr. McCurdy would draw any line as to the salaries paid. The witness replied that there could be no line drawn as to salaries, except the appraisal put on the services of the executive officers by the Trustees, and remarked:

"You do not get executive officers of a life insurance company or leaders of the bar by the yard or by the bushel; they are entitled to what they are worth, what they prove themselves to be worth."

Mr. McCurdy went on to say that salaries in the Mutual were fixed by the sub-committee on salaries of the Committee on Finance, and that they did not come before the board by reason of a practice which had existed from the days of his predecessor whereby the salaries were fixed in committee just before the annual meeting and handed down to the cashier. In the earlier days, he added, the list was made public and was productive of so much dissension and jealousy—and at one time actual disorder among the clerks—that the then President of the Mutual gave orders that the cashier should not disclose what the salaries were.

"Among the principal officers," said Mr. McCurdy, "there is a feeling delicacy and self-respect which prevents prying into their affairs, so that the fact is absolutely that unless through some accidental circumstance very few of the chief officers of the Mutual Life Insurance Company know what the salaries of the other officers are."

Mr. Hughes wanted to know whether the Committee on Salaries consulted with Mr. McCurdy when they made any changes.

"Yes, generally, but not of late years," Mr. McCurdy replied. "I infer—but I don't want to lead you into by-ways, Mr. Hughes—I am a layman and have long been out of the habit of concentrating my mind, perhaps I wander around and talk too much, but the fact is about four years ago—I believe it is—the great increase in the number of clerical force became a burden upon the Finance Committee. They could not properly attend to the fixing of salaries of every clerk in the office and scarcely the executive officers. They wanted to be relieved, as Trustees, from solicitation to look after this man's salary and that man's salary, this man's nephew and that man's uncle, and all that sort of thing, and the number grew so you can readily see where there are five hundred clerks that not even the President knows by sight—one half of them even—he can know very little about the quality or value of the services except as reported by the heads of the departments, but it had grown so cumbersome and there were so many of them that the importunities to which the Trustees were subjected, whether they were on the Finance Committee or not, and all the executive officers were subjected to it, because when there are fifty clerks in an office, why there would be only fifty men to try to pull your leg, but when there are five hundred men trying to do it, it is quite a different proposition."

Mr. McCurdy went on to explain that he had devised a system of classification whereby each clerkship should have a certain salary attached to it irrespective of who occupied the desk. Mr. Hughes insisted that what he wanted to get at was the question of executive salary, but his witness replied that this was entirely a matter for the Committee on Salaries to pass on.

McCurdy on Raymond Firm.

Mr. Hughes examined Mr. McCurdy in considerable detail concerning the contracts between the Mutual Life and Charles H. Raymond & Co., and in so doing went back into the early history of the relations between Mr. McCurdy and Mr. Raymond. It appeared, as has already been printed in THE TIMES, that in the early '70's Mr. McCurdy had been a Trustee of the Widows and Orphans' Benefit Insurance Company, of which Mr. Raymond was President, following in that office Lucius Robinson, ex-Governor of the State.

"I organized it," said President McCurdy, "and subsequently when the company was wound up I assisted at the interment—I suppose you would put it in that way."

Mr. McCurdy said that there was no direct connection between the Widows and Orphans' and the Mutual Life. Mr. Hughes passed for the time the sale of the stock of the Widows and Orphans' Company to the Reserve Mutual Protective Life Company, which afterward involved Mr. McCurdy in litigation. He asked about the circumstances under which Mr. Raymond became general agent of the Mutual inter-metropolitan district. Mr. McCurdy told how his brother-in-law, Mr. Little, who had previously been general agent of the Mutual Life here, took Mr. Raymond into partnership with him, as has already been told, and how Robert H. McCurdy, his son, and Louis A. Thébaud had successively become members of the firm.

Mr. Hughes then took up the bylaws of the Mutual and read the provision giving to the President the power to terminate contracts with agents and to suspend or remove them. Mr. McCurdy said that he had not been aware that they placed contracts with the general agents under his control. They had all been made without any definite authority from him.

The Cost of Agencies.

Q.—Have you at any time taken occasion to ascertain at what expense to the company the business of the metropolitan agency was conducted? A.—That has appeared in the quarterly, the semi-annual, and annual reports submitted to the Directors at their meeting, and has been substantially at the same rate of expense that the other business of the company cost us.

Q.—Well, do you mean by that to suggest that any other general agent of your company has had as favorable terms as C. H. Raymond & Co.? A.—Yes, Sir, I do.

Q.—What other general agent has had the same rate of commissions? A.—I cannot specify them, because the agency management has not been, in a great many years, under my charge, but I know, as a matter of general knowledge, that different contracts, or rather different rates of compensation are paid, and have been paid to different agents all over the country, contingent upon, in some cases, the amount of business produced by them, governed partly in other cases by the statistics which some of our people get out for the purpose of enabling us to fix rates of compensation; statistics with regard to—oh, density and sparseness of population, and amount of wealth per capita, and all that sort of thing, so that the rate of compensation paid to any general agent would not have any definite relation at any time to that of any other general agency, with the exception that one might be more and one might be less, according to circumstances.

Q.—Are you not aware that C. H. Raymond & Co. had been receiving a higher rate of compensation than any other general agent of your company? A.—No, I am not.

Mr. Hughes asked whether the witness could name an insurance company that paid its general agents in New York as high a rate of commission as the Mutual paid to Mr. Raymond. Mr. McCurdy said he couldn't because he didn't know the rate of commissions allowed by the other large companies which compete with the Mutual Life and had not had the agency department under his supervision since he became President twenty years ago.

Mr. Hughes then asked what in detail Mr. McCurdy had done under the power conferred upon him by the by-laws in supervising and insuring an efficiency of the agency department of the Mutual. Mr. McCurdy replied:

"I think in order to arrive at a clear understanding of what my official duties are, and what the obligations are that rest upon me, I ought to go back a little and explain somewhat the situation of the Mutual Life Insurance Company in its office and administrative affairs, so that if I am under a responsibility it may be clearly shown; otherwise if I am not charged with it, no improper surmises may be had.

"I have in my hand the thirty-fifth annual report of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, printed in the year 1878. Frederick S. Winston at that time was the President of the company. In this annual report of the trustees to the policy holders there is this statement referring to the company:

It transacts its business under one corporate title and one executive head. If the amount of funds which it controls and manages were distributed among fifty different corporations with capitals of from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 apiece, each of such companies would be deemed a powerful financial institution; but the company, in fact, as at present administered, consists of several semi-independent organizations under one executive management.

For the information of such as may desire an account of the routine business the following details are furnished:

The financial department exercises functions of a loan and trust company with the care and management, at that time, of $58,000,000.

The department of mathematics is administered by the actuary and two principal assistants, and is charged with the duty of [" thus and so," Mr. McCurdy said.]

In ordinary cases it is governed by general rules, but in the calculation and distribution of dividends it acts with the members of the Committee on Insurance, [" and so on."]

"Now the law department is under the responsible charge of the company's solicitor.

"In the fortieth annual report of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York in 1883, Mr. Frederick B. Winston being President, it is said:

As the business has expanded it has been found necessary in order to secure efficiency and economy to send to several departments so much of the business as properly belongs to each. These departments are substantially as follows: The executive department, the insurance department, the investment department, the law department, the mathematical department, the medical department, the actuarial department, and the supply department.

The allotment of the details of the company's business to appropriate departments has proved of very great value, and then there is here substantially the repetition of the description of the functions exercised by the different departments to which I called attention in the report of a few years before.

Now that was the organization of the company as I found it when I succeeded to the Presidency.

It was not a company of any one-man power, as has been said elsewhere, at any rate, if not here. It had been an organization of the different functions exercised in the administration of the company into almost automatic bodies, acting within the sphere of general supervision, harmoniously, each one conducting its appropriate share of the business as it saw fit, provided it did not clash with the charter of the company or the general rules laid down for the administration of those departments. It was substantially—I will not say substantially—perhaps that is too strong a word—but it was in some respects analogous to the Government of the United States of America with its different States, different officials, different Governors, performing its own local functions within its own territorial limits, yet tied together by and through the functions of the National Government.

Why He Hesitates.

I say this—if you will excuse the length to which I have given my remarks—that when I seem to hesitate in answering questions as to what I did here and there and what my responsibilities and duties were, you may realize the fact that I am not and never have been charged with any specific duties or responsibilities for any particular department, that the previous administration of the company, the President of the company, who had been President for thirty-odd years, as stated in his report to the policy holders, had founded a system of management conducive to the welfare of the company, had carried it out and established it some years before I succeeded to the Presidency. That has been followed since.

Mr. Hughes at this point returned to his previous question, asking what Mr. McCurdy had done to secure the efficiency and economy of the agency department of the company. Mr. McCurdy replied:

"I have been in the discharge of my duties as President of the company at its office practically every working day for five days in the week at least, from 9:30 in the morning until 3:45 in the afternoon, and I have devoted all my energies, both intellectual and physical, to the service of whatever—or to the performance of whatever duty was demanded of me at the moment; as it came one after the other I have given it my best attention."

Q.—Have you examined into the rates of commission paid to general agents? A.—No, not to any great extent, excepting as these things have been brought before me at the close of the quarterly period or the end of the year.

Q.—Have you examined into the profits made by the general agents? A.—I have not.

Looked Up Agent's Profits.

Q.—Have you taken any steps to ascertain whether the general agents were making more money than they should have made? A.—That has been my conviction with regard to all of them for a great many years, and I have been seriously at work for a number of years to change that relation of profit, as you choose to call it, to the business of the company; but as to the amount of profit, excepting from general observation, general impression, that any agency might make out of the company, that is practically a closed book to every officer of the company.

Q.—Why so? A.—Because the private books of an agency firm which has a contract for the distribution of goods from any manufacturer or commission agent are nobody's business except their own. They didn't belong to the company; they are the private partnership books of the agency, and it is only by inference or deduction from a variety of things that one even gets an idea of what the probable profits of a particular general agency may be.

Q.—Were you desirous of having that idea? A.—I have been, distinctly.

Q.—Did you ever ask your son, Robert H. McCurdy, what the profits of C. H. Raymond & Co. were? A.—I never did.

Q.—Did he ever tell you? A.—He never did.

Q.—Did it ever occur to you that you were in a position to find out whether C. H. Raymond & Co. were making more money than could properly be paid to a general agency in the City of New York? A.—I didn't believe anything of the kind.

Q.—But you had no data upon which to reach a conclusion, had you? A.—Nothing but what I have said, general observation and knowledge of the business.

Q.—Then, why do you say that you do not believe anything of the sort; how could you have a belief if you had none of the facts? A.—Oh, I have the general knowledge, I suppose, of an intelligent man, and have the right to form a general opinion without the knowledge of specific facts, which are not within my purview.

Q.—I find from the statement that has been furnished here that the net receipts of C. H. Raymond & Co. in 1896, after paying subagents and the expenses of their business, amounted to $198,000 and in 1897 to $189,000 and in 1898 to $195,000, and in 1899 to $228,000. Do you regard it as proper that a general agency of the Mutual Life Insurance Company in the City of New York should be able to make net $200,000 in the course of a year? A.—Is that your question?

Simply Paid by Percentages.

Q.—Yes. A.—It makes not the slightest difference to the company whether one general agent in the City of New York made $200,000 a year, or twenty general agents in the City of New York made $1,000 a year; that would be the result of doing the same amount of business. They were paid for by a percentage of the business they got, and it was eminently—it was simply a question, in the first place, of the amount of business that they turned in to the company, for which they were paid. If they had not done the business they would not get the profits. In the second place, it was a question of what, like any other merchant, his business cost him—the question of what he paid for clerk hire, or what he paid for getting his business, all of which might vary, according to the sagacity, the general economy, and general knowledge of the man himself. For the company to pay up to that amount of commissions for that amount of business was eminently proper, and it did not make a particle of difference whom they paid it to.

Mr. Hughes reminded Mr. McCurdy that the profits of the general agent constitute the difference between the gross commission he receives from the company on the business done and the commissions he is obliged to pay to his sub-agents, plus his office expenses. Then he asked again whether Mr. McCurdy thought a general agent for New York ought to make as much as $200,000 a year, but the Mutual's President stuck to his former answer, saying that the details came under the charge of the general manager. The general manager of the Mutual is Robert H. McCurdy, who has already testified that he did not inquire into the profits of Raymond & Co., or into those which his brother-in-law, Dr. Thébaud, made through his connection with the firm.

No Right to Ask Thebaud.

President McCurdy had answered that the circumstances of his son's connection with the Raymond firm were too remote to admit of recollection at this time. He was then asked why he didn't find out how much his son-in-law was making from the firm. He said he didn't have any right to inquire.

Q.—Why not? A.—I have no more right—I have no more legal right to ask a firm of the general agents of the Mutual Life Insurance Company what their net profits are than I have the right to ask you what your profits are.

Q.—Don't you think when the question of the renewal of the contract with a firm of which your son-in-law is a member comes up you ought to ascertain whether the rate of commission is higher than it should be? A.—As I told you, I haven't been in charge of that part of the business for twenty years.

Q.—Well, the matter of which you could have taken charge in a moment? A.—Provided I had nothing else to do.

Q.—It is a matter as to which you felt deeply, did you not, this matter of the expense to which the company was put in securing new business? A.—I have always been endeavoring to reduce the expenses of the company to proper limits.

Q.—Do you know any more important question before insurance companies to-day than that of reducing the expense of the management? A.—I think it is a very desirable thing to do, and I think it is one that all life insurance companies are trying to do.

Q.—And do you know the larger part of the expense is the expense of doing business? A.—I presume it is.

Q.—And you know the larger part of getting business is the expense paid to agents? A.—I presume it is.

By Committeeman Rogers—Does not the company require agents to account to it for all premiums collected? A.—Certainly.

Q.—And in that account don't they state the amount of commission which they deduct under their contract? A.—Undoubtedly.

Q.—Then how do you justify your statement that as an officer of the company it was no part of your business and you had no right to inquire what the commission, either gross or net, that they received amounted to? A.—Why, because—suppose we allow them, we will say, 20 per cent. for the purpose of illustration. When they come to us with a hundred dollars collected they credit themselves with $20. That is all there is in that. They don't tell us what they have done with that $20; that is a matter for them to settle and we have no interest in it. We simply pay them the rate agreed upon.

Q.—You distinguish between the gross and the net? A.—Absolutely; we do not know what their business is costing us and we have no right to inquire; it is none of our business.

Q.—Now, then, as the custodian and guardian of the welfare of the policy holders is it not only your duty but your paramount duty to inquire whether policy holders are being charged excessively or whether the agents are deriving too much profit from that business? A.—The first one, yes. And it has been my endeavor to inquire whether the agents are being paid too much; but whether they are deriving too much profit or not it is not my duty to find out, and I do not know, except by general observation that comes to everybody, observation from which he may make up his mind that the business is costing him too much; and when he makes up his mind that his business is costing him too much then he has to go to work and take up the entire question of the outstanding contracts, the length of time they have to run, the cost to the company to reconstitute the business upon some other and more economical plan.

Mr. McCurdy went on to say that the effort to get the company on a more economical basis had extended over twenty years of his administration, and that it was only two years ago that he was able to notify C. H. Raymond, for instance, that at the end of this year the company would take over the business itself.

Q.—Do you have any idea as to when new contracts have been made with the firm of which your son-in-law was a member? A.—Not the slightest.

Q.—You never knew of any new arrangement that was to be made? A.—Not the slightest.

Q.—Did you ever have any interviews at all with Mr. Thébaud with regard to the course of that agency business? A.—I did not—not with regard to the cost of it; not with regard to the financial part of it, no. I may have asked him from time to time how the business was turning out, and things of that kind; how it was going on; those things would become apparent from the quarterly statement at the end of the year.

Q.—Have you ever known of what Mr. Thébaud's interest was in C. H. Raymond & Co.? A.—I never have.

Q.—Have you ever known how his interest in C. H. Raymond & Co. has varied—? A.—I never have.

Q.—Or increased? A.—I never have.

Q.—It appears here in evidence that last year Mr. Thebaud's interest netted him in cash $147,000—was that a surprise to you? A.—It has been a surprise to me to know the facts, because I didn't know anything about it, one way or the other.

Q.—Did you have a notion of it? A.—Never had any notion of it.

Q.—You had reason to observe, had you not, that Mr. Thébaud was making a great deal of money? A.—Not especially.

Q.—You observed the natural evidences of prosperity in his case? A.—I had no doubt of it.

Q.—Great prosperity, it appeared to be, did it not? A.—No.

Q.—Did you feel any special responsibility to the policy holders of your company by reason of the fact that he was your son-in-law? A.—Not more than I would if he had been somebody else's son-in-law.

Q.—Did you feel any sensitiveness with reference to that, and desire to ascertain that his contract should be particularly free from criticism, or the contract of his firm, I mean? A.—So long as Mr. Thebaud's firm was rendering good service to the Mutual Life Insurance Company, so long as it was pro rata for the business done and not excessively compensated. I have not been lying awake for twenty years or more to think of any one particular subject in that company. I feel a sense of responsibility, an obligation to my Board of Trustees and the policy holders of the company everywhere to do my duty by them as well as I know how every hour of my life, and one subject after another comes up for me, and to every one I endeavor to give the same performance of duty and the same sense of obligation.

Q.—I want to know how you justify letting C. H. Raymond & Co. get $200,000 a year? That is what I want to get at? A.—Then I answer that, as I said before, if C. H. Raymond & Co. under the established contracts with the company they had, and which were not excessive for the amount of business produced, happened to make that amount of money it did not make any difference to the company whether it was divided by two general agents or forty.

Q.—You say they were not excessive? A.—Yes.

Q.—And that is the whole point? A.—Yes.

Mr. Hughes obtained from the witness a statement that the rates paid were not more than were necessary to retain the agents of the company in its service.

"Did Charles H. Raymond ever threaten to leave you and go to another company?" he asked.

"I do not think that Charles H. Raymond would leave me for any consideration in the world," was the reply.

"Did Robert H. McCurdy ever threaten to leave you and go to another company?"

"The same answer will apply. I don't think he would ever leave me for anything in the world."

"Did Mr. Thébaud ever threaten to leave you and go to another company?"

"I give you the same answer."

"Has the competition of any other company had any effect upon the rates allowed to C. H. Raymond & Co.?"

"Oh," objected Mr. McCurdy, "you are wandering into all sorts of fine distinctions and analyses, Mr. Hughes. I cannot match you in fencing wits, and I do not want to try. I cannot testify in answer to all of these hypothetical questions, that the conditions may or may not be the way you put them; especially does this answer apply as to things with which I have had nothing to do and to which I have not given any particular attention for the past twenty years. It is really putting me in a position of attempting to match my wits against yours, and that conflict I respectfully withdraw from.

Q.—And I, too. Now, let's get at something painfully concrete, and not at all hypothetical. It appears that C. H. Raymond & Co. or the members of that firm had not expressed a desire to leave your company, and you were able to have the advantage of their services on the payment of reasonable compensation. Was there, in fact, in that case, any competition on the part of any other company which determined the rate of commission paid to them? A.—Why, not to get away their services from us, but to take away the services of their agents, through whom they procure the business. They have hundreds of agents.

Competition of Sub-Agents.

Q.—In other words, the competition to which you refer was sub-agents, and therefore you must pay C. H. Raymond & Co. enough in order that they could hold their sub-agents? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—That is the point? A.—Undoubtedly.

Q.—Not that there was a competition by which C. H. Raymond & Co. themselves would leave you? A.—Not at all; not the slightest.

Q.—Let's look at the competition and its effect with reference to sub-agents of C. H. Raymond & Co. After they have met that competition; after they have paid whatever rates were necessary to acquire an increased business; after they have met all the expenses of their office, they net for themselves $200,000 per year. Now, please address yourself to that question and tell me what basis there is for giving them a rate of commission which would enable them to meet all competition existing and net $200,000 a year. A.—Because substantially the conditions of the business throughout the United States demanded practically a certain rate; it varied slightly owing to local conditions here and there, and the general experience of the company was such that it was required to pay it.

Q.—Do you know that C. H. Raymond & Co. had special rates? A.—No.

Q.—That has never been brought to your attention? A.—No.

Q.—Are you under the impression that all other general agents of your company are getting as good rates as C. H. Raymond & Co.? A.—Practically, all things considered, as I understand it.

Q.—What is involved in that "all things considered"? A.—I mean to say, as I understand it, the General Manager having charge of the contracts with the agencies makes different contracts with different general agents, dependent upon conditions which he is supposed to be practically familiar with, either in Chicago or Boston or New York, and it depends upon his own judgment in making those contracts that they may vary more or less in various places. I think it is quite possible. I haven't seen one of those contracts, as I say, in ten years.

Q.—Now, once more, what were the conditions in the City of New York which required you to give a rate of commission to C. H. Raymond & Co. by which they could meet all competition and pay all expenses and net $200,000 a year? A.—You had better ask the General Manager.

Q.—As an insurance man, do you know of any such conditions? A.—Well, my dear Sir, I have tried to explain to you that my duties are of a very general character.

Q.—That may be the explanation, but the fact of your knowledge remains; you do or you do not know? A.—I don't know of the conditions which exist with regard to the agency business in New York or anywhere else; I have never tried to, because it never came within the obligation upon me that I should do it in the discharge of my official duties.

Next Mr. Hughes picked up the Insurance Blue Book and asked:

"I see that in your gain and loss exhibit of last year your percentage of insurance expenses to the loading upon premiums to meet such expenses was 109.34 per cent. Are you able to state whether the insurance expenses had exceeded the loading upon premiums in prior years?"

"I am not," Mr. McCurdy replied. "Better ask the actuary about it."

"You don't know anything about it?"

"No," was the reply.

"Take a period of ten years back. Do you know how frequently, if at all, the expense of doing your business has exceeded the loading upon the premiums to meet it?"

"No."

Q.—But is not that a very important subject of executive inquiry? A.—Naturally within the jurisdiction of the agency department. I have had my attention once or twice drawn to that subject because of its being discussed in insurance periodicals and things of that kind, and the actuary has assured me there was nothing in the fact of a temporary increase of the expenses over the loadings on the policies that was in any way dangerous to the success of the company or improper.

Q.—You would recognize the high importance of the fact that that should be temporary? A.—Oh, that is a matter you had better, as I say, better ask Mr. McClintock, the actuary, about all those questions; I am a layman in that, as I am in the law.

"But," Mr. Hughes persisted, "you have been for a great many years President of the company and in the insurance business for nearly fifty years, and I would like to have you state just what the consequence would be if a mutual life insurance company in its expenses for a period of years exceeded substantially the loading upon the premiums to meet such expenses?"

"Oh, I cannot imagine what might happen if a great many other things did happen," said the Mutual's President. "I think, with all due respect, Mr. Hughes, these questions are so thoroughly of an academic character that when you go into them I ought to have a right of suggesting that you talk with an expert on the question and not with a layman. I have never pretended to be an actuary."

Q.—You recognize the fact that the Mutual Life Insurance Company could not permanently continue to spend money in excess of the loading upon its premiums? A.—Well, I should think it would be very unwise to.

Q.—And therefore very important for you, as the President, to know whether this matter is a temporary one or not? A.—It would be important for me as President of the company to take the advice and the opinion of my actuary on that subject, and if my actuary assured me that the conditions justified it, to place my reliance upon that expert opinion, which has been furnished to me by my Board of Trustees as my adviser and assistant in all such matters, and be guided by it, as I should be. I have never overruled one of the heads of an executive department in my life.

Q.—Has he never pointed that out to you? A.—He never has.

Political Contributions.

When Mr. Hughes got down to his examination of President McCurdy in the matter of political contributions the results were about as indefinite as in the case of the agency contracts. Mr. McCurdy said that he had no personal knowledge in the matter, but did not doubt that in the campaign of 1896 a substantial contribution was made to the Republican Party. This he believed to be the first contribution ever made by the Mutual for such a purpose. Similar contributions, he had reason to believe, were made in 1900 and 1904, but his knowledge about them was only indirect and obtained through Dr. Gillett or one of the other executive officers.

"I know it was the feeling of all my trustees and the members of the Finance Committee, and the undoubted action of the Mutual Life Insurance Company in conforming to the action of the other life interests was because they felt they would be menaced and would be injured by the plan of the free silver doctrine or the 16 to 1 business."

This statement was made specifically with reference to the contribution for the 1896 and 1900 campaigns, but applied in a general way to the one in 1904. Mr. Hughes went on to ask the witness whether it was possible for such contributions to be made without their causes and authorization coming specifically under the attention of the President.

"I would have to have my eye on the cashier's window every hour of the day," said President McCurdy, "if I were to stay there and watch that no special appropriation or payment slipped through. I rely upon the honest men by whom I am surrounded, and their judgment and their honest opinion. I believe every one of them are honest, and I know that the action of the officers of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York reflects in all cases the judgment of the Finance Committee of that company, and the principal, the influential Trustees who pay special attention to the business of the company.

Q.—Then do I understand if one of the Vice Presidents of your company wanted to give $10,000 in some State campaign in a different, distant State, and he thought from his personal standpoint that it was a good thing to do he could do it, and it would never be brought to your attention? A.—I want to say this, that the administration of the Mutual Life Insurance Company is practically the joint administration of four or five men—that is about all there are in any corporation who take enough interest and have the requisite leisure and knowledge of the business to look in every day and participate in the management. In every corporation the real management is carried on by a small number of either appointed members of a committee, officially appointed or self-constituted advisers of the President and of the officials who come there and talk about things every day. Now the—there has been from the origin of my administration, and before that, a rule of unanimity. I have referred a great deal to my predecessor, because I had a great deal better refer to my predecessor, who was a very able man, than I would do myself, and I take, I run to, cover if you choose to put it so, under the mantle of a very great man in this business. He took the position that every vote and every action of the Finance Committee would have to be unanimous. If it was not unanimous it was immediately withdrawn, and that ended it. That rule in the Finance Committee permeated the action of practically every member of the Board of Trustees, and it came to be adopted as a rule of the other committees, and I have never known in the twenty years that I have been President of that company the question settled either in the Board of Trustees or in any committee upon a vote by names or even by number. Now, the result is the feeling of entire confidence on the part of the members of the Finance Committee—the active men in the management of the company—with regard to the executive officers. They know perfectly well that the rule which governs them governs also the executive officers, and not one of them would advise an executive officer, and would do in the administration of the affairs of that company a thing they were not sure would have the consent of every other one of the Trustees or members of the committee, and that all of the executive officers are bound by the same obligation.

Q.—To whom was the contribution in the campaign of 1904 paid? A.—That I don't know.

Q.—You don't know anything about that? A.—No, I don't know anything about that.

This question of political payments had first been brought up in the testimony of Robert Oliphant, who is Chairman of the Expense Committee in the Mutual Life. He said that the function of the committee was practically to approve bills that are referred to it by the executive and ordered to be paid. As Chairman of the committee, he had from time to time drawn money from the Mutual on his voucher for "legal expenses." Mr. Hughes wanted to know in what cases money was so drawn, and Mr. Oliphant said: "Well, Mr. Hughes, as I understand the situation, large corporations have to maintain what you might call a confidential legal fund for the payment of services in legal matters."

He said that the Mutual had maintained such a fund since before the time when he became Chairman of the Finance Committee, and that the money under it was paid either upon the order of one of the First Vice Presidents of the company or upon that of the General Solicitor. Mr. Oliphant did not know when the money was expended, to whom it was paid, or the character of the service performed in consideration of it. He said that the vouchers usually had the approval of Dr. Gillett, but sometimes it was that of Mr. Granniss, and he did not know why the custom was maintained.

Mr. Hughes wanted to know if the witness did not understand that he was responsible to the policy holders for the proper disbursement for money drawn on his order, and Mr. Oliphant replied that he "had not gone into that very deeply." He said also that he did not take any vouchers for these payments. Mr. Hughes then went over the list of the $25,000 quarterly payments for "confidential legal services" from 1903, when Mr. Oliphant became Chairman of the committee, down to the present time, developing the fact that these payments were not formally discussed in the committee meetings.

Republican Campaign Money.

Q.—Now, I would be glad, Mr. Oliphant, not only because it is proper that you should have the opportunity, but in order that we may be enlightened, so far as possible, for you to state as precisely as you can recall what at any time has been said to you by any officer of the company as to the purposes for which these moneys were used. A.—I understood that these moneys went through the legal department for purposes that I have stated.

Q.—I would like to have you state those again and as definitely as you can, and as fully as you can; that is, giving your understanding of it as an officer, or, rather, Trustee or Chairman of committee? A.—Well, that it was a confidential fund for—or a fund for confidential legal services.

Q.—That is all you can say? A.—That is all I can say. I might add that I have heard that the—there were contributions made to the National Committee, and if they were I suppose they came out of that fund, and it was looked upon as legal services.

Q.—Why do you suppose they came out of that fund? A.—Because I have heard—I understood that they had been given and there is nothing to show that they came from anywhere else.

Q.—Who informed you that they had been given? A.—I think Dr. Gillett said that there had been contributions given to protect the policy holders against the impending legislation—financial legislation.

Q.—Against what financial legislation? A.—Well, the Democratic platform.

Q.—To what time did he refer? A.—I don't know, Sir.

Q.—Was this with reference to the last campaign? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—When did you have your conversation with him? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Well, have you frequently talked with him about this? A.—I don't see him very often. I am a pretty busy man. I get through with my work and I go back to my own business.

Q.—So that the business of the committee on expenditures, as practically conducted, is to see if the vouchers before them have the signatures of one of the Vice Presidents and the check of the man in charge of the department? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—That is all they do? A.—Principally.

Q.—Do they ever do anything more than that? A.—Once in a while we ask the cause of a charge in different directions.

Q.—Why? A.—When we think it is a little large.

Q.—Can you recall such a case? A.—Not at the moment.

Q.—But you didn't ask such an explanation in connection with these matters that have been brought to your attention, $25,000 each? A.—I asked if they were all right and proper and absolutely necessary to the protection of the policy holders' interests in different parts of this country, and I was assured they were.

"We Have to."

Q.—The point I have in mind is this, Mr. Oliphant: These by-laws read very well, and we all appreciate the standing of the members of the Board of Trustees. I want to know whether it is a fact that if one of the Vice Presidents tells you a thing is all right, that you, as a member of the committee, simply adopt it and ask no further question, although you know nothing of the matter yourself? A.—We have to.

Mr. Oliphant was excused at this point and Vice President Granniss was called to the stand. Mr. Hughes asked him about the contribution of $2,500 to the Republican Congressional fund last Fall, which had already been brought out in the testimony of other witnesses. Mr. Granniss said he didn't see the voucher made, but presumed it was charged to law expenses, as that would have been the usual course. He was a little indefinite about what other contributions had been made by the company, saying that Dr. Gillett dealt with such matters and that President McCurdy was familiar with the general circumstances. Mr. Hughes then wanted to know what conditions existed in the Fall of 1904 that menaced the interests of the policy holders to the extent of demanding a $2,500 contribution to the Republican fund.

"We were menaced by a revival of the free silver theory," Mr. Granniss replied.

"What, in 1904?"

"Yes, yes; in 1904."

"That is news to me," said Mr. Hughes, "but I will be glad to have you state more in detail how you were menaced last Fall by a revival of the free-silver theory."

"That question," said Mr. Granniss, "did come up in my conversation with Mr. Babcock at the time that the contribution was made."

"And the size of your contribution indicated the remoteness of the danger?" Mr. Hughes put in.

Mr. Granniss answered him by another question.

"You mean to imply that if the danger was greater the contribution would have been greater?"

"That was what came into my mind," said Mr. Hughes. "Is that a proper implication?"

A Matter of Taste.

"That is a matter of taste," rejoined Mr. Granniss. "It is a purely hypothetical question."

Q.—Well, had you had a discussion with President McCurdy as to the danger of the revival of the free silver danger before this contribution was made? A.—I cannot recall any such discussion. The officers and Trustees usually discuss matters of that kind, and we act accordingly.

Q.—Then I suppose other contributions that have been made have been a subject of discussion among the executive officers and members of the Finance Committee? A.—Without a doubt.

Q.—And in that way must have been brought to your attention? A.—Yes.

Q.—Before that you did actually make the payments yourself? A.—Exactly.

Q.—Now, will you kindly tell us, Mr. Granniss, all about it—just what has been done, the policy of it, why it has been done, and all that you recall upon that subject? A.—I believe you proposed to examine Mr. McCurdy?

Q.—Yes. A.—Well, I think you had better have him make that statement, then, himself.

Q.—Very good, as long as we have the facts I do not care who states them; but as you are on the stand, Mr. Granniss, I think you should give your own statement, as you yourself, as an officer of this company, are responsible for the conduct of its affairs. A.—I consider that we were justified when we considered the best interests of the policy holders in making such contribution.

Q.—Well, what was the justification? A.—The justification was the free silver menace.

Q.—You are referring now to last Fall? A.—To last Fall and previous contributions.

Q.—Have all of your contributions been dictated by the fear of the free silver menace? A.—Mainly.

Q.—What else led to that? A.—I do not know of any other cause that led up to that.

Not in the Minutes.

Mr. Grannis was asked what discussion of these contributions was had between the executive officers of the company before they were made. He replied that the matters came up in the Finance Committee, but were not entered on the minutes. He did not know how the money was gone or how vouchered, except that Dr. Gillett and the late Mr. Short had charge of it. When one of the vouchers for the $25,000 payments through Robert Oliphant was shown to him, with the name "Grannis" at the bottom, he said that he didn't remember what it was for at the time, but presumed he must have had its purpose explained to him. Mr. Grannis said that he never heard of a payment of $5,000 to a campaign fund in the State of Washington. Mr. Hughes then asked him what instructions, if any, he had ever given to Mr. Thummell, who handles matters of legislation for the Mutual in a large part of the country. Mr. Grannis said that he and Mr. Thummell had talked over specific cases, but that he didn't remember what the subjects of discussion might have been.

Q.—Dou you recall any case within the last five years in which it has been necessary for your company to give attention to legislation in any State? A.—No particular case.

Q.—Your mind is entirely blank upon that subject? A.—Not entirely blank.

Q.—Well, will you kindly state what there may be in it? [Laughter.] A.—You mean my mind?

Q.—Yes, on that subject. A.—Out of respect to you I will not mention it, Sir. [Laughter.]

Q.—Well, I understood that you said that you did have something in your memory on this—A.—I told you that—

Q.—I am anxious to find out. A.—I passed on each case as it comes up. I don't recall now what particular instructions were given.

Questions asked to the extent to which Mr. Thummell and Mr. Short were allowed to draw upon the Mutual for "confidential legal" moneys, Mr. Granniss passed up to Dr. Gillett, saying that he didn't know anything about it.

"Suppose," said Mr. Hughes, "you, as an officer of the company, desired to gain such information, where would you go?"

"I would consult with Mr. Short," said the witness.

"That is impossible, because he is dead," rejoined Mr. Hughes.

"Unfortunately, he is," said the witness, without a smile.

Mr. Granniss added that there was a Mr. Allen in the law department who might be able to throw some additional light on these matters in case any executive officer was anxious to obtain it.

The Oliphant Payments.

Dr. Walter R. Gillett, the other one of the Mutual's First Vice Presidents, was then called to the stand and was examined briefly upon the contract which he made with Raymond & Co. just before he was promoted from the office of General Manager in 1903. He said he made it entirely on his own initiative, and had done the same with the prior contracts with Raymond & Co., not consulting President McCurdy at all.

Mr. Hughes then ran over a memorandum of the vouchers for the various Robert Oliphant payments under the following dates:

Jan. 28, 1904, $25,000; July 26, 1904, $25,000; Aug. 22, 1904, $25,000; Nov. 1, 1904, $25,000; Jan. 11, 1905, $25,000.

All of these except the first, which was made upon the Granniss voucher, were initialed "W. R. G." They covered the various payments to Robert Oliphant, to which be had testified with the exception of those in 1903.

Taking up the voucher of Jan. 11 of this year, Mr. Hughes asked if Dr. Gillett knew what the money was to be used for. He said he did not.

Q.—Did anybody tell you what it was to be used for? A.—Only in a general way—that it was necessary for the legal expenses of the company.

Q.—Why wasn't the money obtained in the ordinary way upon the solicitor's voucher? A.—Because, as you perhaps know, in all corporate interests there are certain transactions that are done in a confidential way, and these moneys were used in that way.

Q.—Would it be any less confidential to have the solicitor sign the voucher than to get the cash on the solicitor's request? A.—Well, that was not the method—that is all I can say.

Q.—Well, what did you do to ascertain what the confidential purposes were? A.—I did nothing. I simply wanted to know if they were necessary and signed the voucher.

Q.—What person asked you for that $25,000—with reference to the voucher of Jan. 11, 1905? A.—I can't recall that—I think it was the general solicitor, but I cannot recall it.

Q.—You mean Mr. Short? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Was he there at that time? A.—I think he was, but I cannot recall that.

Q.—You mean to say that you would turn over to the general solicitor in a year $100,000, apart from all amounts which went for the support of the department in the payment of counsel in the regular way, upon his warrant, without having any idea for what purposes the moneys were to be used? A.—I know the amounts were to be used for necessary legal expenses. I took his word for it and acted upon his authority as a responsible dispenser of these funds.

Q.—You say you knew the purposes; what did you know about the purposes? A.—I said he knew the purposes; I didn't say I knew the purposes.

Q.—You didn't know anything about them? A.—I presumed they were legal.

"Then, do I understand," demanded Mr. Hughes, "that in the management of your company the general solicitor can get $25,000 any time he wants it without any statement of what the moneys are to be used for, and independently of its regular requisition?"

"Not at all," said Dr. Gillett, "we always confer on these matters. We don't always confer all together, but all these funds are talked over and used as required. I presume Mr. Short must have talked it over with me, or with Mr. Grannis or with Mr. McCurdy, perhaps, but I don't recall now specifically."

"Do you remember what he told you on such occasions?"

"I was told that the money was to be used for legal expenses."

"Any discussion further than that?"

"No, Sir."

Mr. Hughes then called the witness' attention that the Mutual had reported a total of $394,000 for expenses in 1904, as against $172,000 for the New York Life, and $204,000 for the Equitable Life.

He wanted to know why this amount was so much larger than in the other companies, but Dr. Gillett said that he could not explain it except to say that probably specific cases had arisen which demanded the expenditure. So far as Dr. Gillett knew, none of the money thus spent went for the purpose of influencing legislation.

Mr. Hughes then brought out that the payment to the Republican National campaign fund in 1904 was $40,000 to the best of Dr. Gillett's memory, that a $35,000 payment had been made in 1900, and a payment of $15,000 in 1896. Dr. Gillett explained the payments on the usual free silver theory, and added that the company had considered in 1904 that the St. Louis platform was a menace, and "Parker the same as Bryan." He said he didn't know what ones of the Trustees were consulted about these payments, but he fancied that Mr. Juilliard, Mr. Henderson, and Mr. Baker of the Finance Committee, in addition to Mr. Oliphant of the Expenditures Committee, must have been aware of what was being done.

Mr. Hughes finally came down to the question of what responsibility Dr. Gillett recognized for these payments and for the payments through Mr. Oliphant quarterly to Mr. Short.

"We considered Mr. Short a responsible officer," he replied; "none more so, and we recognized his requisitions for money as being just and proper on all occasions."

As to A. C. Fields.

Then Mr. Hughes asked how long Mr. Fields had been with the company, and when it had been agreed between himself and the witness that the Fields in question was A. C. Fields, the head of the supply department, Dr. Gillett said that he had been there a great many years at a salary of $10,000. But Mr. Fields had been in bad health for the last few years and his duties had been discharged by Mr. Lawrence. So Mr. Hughes went on to the question of Mr. Lawrence's activity, and it developed that his stationer's store in the Liberty Street corner of the Mutual's main building adjoined the offices of the supply department.

Dr. Gillett was not very definite in his information about the handling of the Mutual's expenditure for supplies and kindred purposes. He did not know whether it was the custom to advertise for bids, but he presumed that bids were made on advertising and supply contracts. Mr. Hughes was disposed to go into greater detail in connection with the matter of advertising expenditure, which was reported at $320,000 in the last annual report, but again he ran up against the fact that this was in the hands of Mr. Fields, who apparently had pretty free rein. So Mr. Hughes said that he would like to have Mr. Fields go on the stand, and met with the refusal of the company to produce him unless by subpoena that has already been noted.

Mr. Hughes also went over with Dr. Gillett the expenses of the company exclusive of commissions for a series of years past, as they appeared in the general ledger and showed changes in certain items as follows:

Advertising—1898, $229,605.80; 1899, $251,751.84; 1903, $333,088.21; 1904, $329,797.02.

Traveling expenses—1898, $270,518.21; 1990, $325,364.09; 1904, $243,828.11.

Stationery and printing—1898, $473,523.84; 1900, $325,364.09; 1904, $601,101.31.

In the year 1903, two new items appear, one of $74,994.90 for luncheons, and another of $156,440.24 for office furniture. The latter had increased to $152,077.48 by 1904. Mr. Gillett explained that that was in the supervision of the real estate department. The item for luncheons was explained by the fact that the Mutual was in the habit of furnishing luncheon for all its clerical force. The increase in the total expenses over the period ran as follows: 1898, $4,381,620.42; 1900, $5,085,762.70; 1902, $5,478,939.21; 1904, $5,199,530.25.

The committee adjourned at 5 o'clock.

TO AWAIT OUR INQUIRY.

Western Officials Against Action Now in Insurance Matters.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—A dispatch to The Tribune from Springfield, Ill., quotes Gov. Deneen thus:

"At present the Illinois authorities have not the slightest idea of interfering with the insurance investigation now in progress in New York. I do not see at present how any State except New York profitably can take a hand in this investigation. The investigation now in progress is manifestly so searching and so fair that I believe any counter-investigation by our insurance office naturally would do more harm than good. In view of the fact that solvency is not at all in question, I believe we can best safeguard the interests of the hundreds of thousands of policy holders in Illinois by waiting until the conclusion of the legislative inquiry in New York."

ST. PAUL, Oct. 10.—State Insurance Commissioner O'Brien favors Federal supervision of all big corporations, including insurance companies, but he does not want the State right to control such companies abridged.

"I speak for Federal and State supervision such as now controls the liquor traffic," said Mr. O'Brien to-day. "A Federal license covers any section of the country, yet it is subservient to the laws of every State. The same could apply in insurance.

"I am opposed to any hasty action in the life companies now being investigated. I believe they are all solvent and the money invested should not be jeopardized. The New York investigating committee is doing good work and other States should keep their fingers off until that investigation is completed. Then legislation necessary to wipe out any of the evils shown can be enacted, and it should be general and as uniform as possible."

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 10.—State Insurance Superintendent Luling said to-day that his department would take no action against the New York Life and the Equitable Life until the insurance investigation in New York is finished.

RAMSEY LOSES POINTS IN FIRST WABASH TEST

Promises Legal Fight on Protests Over Gould Proxies.

CUMULATIVE BALLOT USED

Both Sides Inspect Every Proxy and Many Protests Are Filed—Meeting of the Rivals.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Oct. 10.—Joseph Ramsey, Jr., was the loser in the all-day contest with George J. Gould, which was adjourned late to-night until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning. The tellers in charge of elections at the annual meeting of the Wabash Railroad Company ruled against Ramsey and for Gould in regard to proxies on about $1,000,000 worth of bonds to which both had set up a claim.

This was the day devoted to the caucus of the bondholders on the ticket for the six Directors of the road whom they are allowed to elect. The stockholders will meet to-morrow to elect six other Directors, and these twelve men together have the choice of the thirteenth. Ramsey's standing as regards the holdings of stock have not been disclosed yet.

The night session was forced by the Gould men after the entire day had been devoted to calling the roll of bondholders. The meeting reassembled at 8:30 o'clock and without any preliminaries Judge Doyle, counsel for Ramsey, took up the cases of the many protested proxies.

Where the issues were on a question simply of irregularities some cases were decided in favor of Ramsey, but all votes which were protested on the ground that they represented the holdings of the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain systems, competing lines, and those objected to on the ground of fraudulent possession, were decided in favor of Gould.

The immense block of the Mercantile Trust Company went to Gould, and Ramsey's counsel gave notice that the protest would be carried to court.

The real fight of the evening was on the question of the use of $150,000 worth of bonds voted by Gould under a proxy as coming from Randolph & Co. Ramsey showed by affidavit that the bonds were owned by H. R. Hoyt, and assigned to J. W. Henning. Henning loaned a part of them to Randolph & Co. on Aug. 21, and the balance on Sept. 1. They were all returned to Henning on Sept. 12. Henning then gave his proxy to Ramsey.

DECISIONS FOR GOULD.

In the meantime Randolph & Co. had given a proxy to Gould. The Inspectors threw out Ramsey's claim and sustained Gould. It was on such evidence principally that the $1,000,000 worth of bonds were thrown out. The action of the Inspectors caused no surprise.

Proxies in a block of $212,000 bonds held by James R. Keene also were claimed by both Ramsey and Gould.

After Judge Doyle had presented his last claim the motion for adjournment was made. The Gould forces wanted the matter settled to-night, fearing that Ramsey would get in more affidavits. When assured that all he had, or expected, had been filed, the Gould forces conceded an adjournment.

As the men were walking away, Mr. Gould was asked if he would make a statement.

"You had better speak to my attorney, if you please," he replied. "He is the man to talk."

Winslow Pierce, the attorney, said:

"I am very tired. Please wait till to-morrow, and I will try and do something for you."

The result of the meeting now in progress will not settle the fight if Ramsey adheres to the programme declared to-day by his counsel, Judge Doyle:

"The protest I now make against the votes represented by the Farmers' Loan and Trust and the Mercantile Trust Company," he declared, "I shall repeat to-morrow in the caucus of the stockholders. And I now serve notice that the result of any election in which these votes are counted will be hereafter contested in the courts."

Winslow S. Pierce, counsel for Mr. Gould, turned to the transfer clerk and asked: "These bonds are properly entered on the books, are they not, and the trust companies appear as the parties controlling them?"

"Yes, Sir," was the reply.

"Then count them for Mr. Gould," he said.

It was shortly after 7 o'clock to-night when the roll call of the debentures was finished. The Gould interests insisted that the meeting be resumed after supper. Judge Doyle protested bitterly, and finally asked that the question be put to a vote. This was done, and by an overwhelming majority it was decided to hold the night session.

Gould has the upper hand in so far as the Presidency is concerned, but it is very doubtful whether the Gould forces will have undisputed control of the Wabash.

RAMSEY'S PLAN TO GET ON BOARD.

Ramsey's plan is to vote his entire bond holdings under the cumulative plan. That is, instead of voting his bonds for six members, he will concentrate the entire number of votes on one member of the six chosen by debenture holders, probably himself. The Gould forces conceded to Ramsey the right to so vote the stock issue, but emphatically denied that right to the bonds, asserting that the vote of the bonds was held strictly to the specifications in the bond issue. The bonds held by Ramsey do not specify that they may be voted on the cumulative plan.

The contest began about 9 o'clock this morning, when the Gould and Ramsey interests met at the offices of Smith & Beckwith, Toledo attorneys of the Wabash Road. The Gould party reached the offices first. It included Winslow S. Pierce of New York, private counsel for Gould; Clarence Browne of Toledo, Alexander Smith, E. B. Prior, and President Delano.

Ramsey came in, accompanied by his brother, Newton T. Ramsey; C. T. Lewis, John T. Doyle, attorneys, and some other friends. Ramsey greeted the Gould party with a nod, and then began greeting each member of the party individually, shaking hands.

HARRIMAN JOINS GOULD.

Not until the name of E. H. Harriman was reached, however, was the sensation of the day sprung. Harriman was credited with fifty votes on as many bonds. It was supposed that Ramsey had control of these votes. When the name was answered Gould's attorney, with a smile, handed out a proxy for forty-eight votes, while all Ramsey had was two.

On more than one occasion it was found that both sides held proxies from the same bond owner. The telegraph was often resorted to for instructions.

There was a rustling of observers as the "Gs" were reached. It was shown that Edwin Gould held five shares of stock, Frank Gould forty shares, Howard Gould three, George J. Gould three, Jay Gould, (son of George,) 1,325, and Mrs. Gould, wife of George J., 15. This made an aggregate of 1,386 debenture bonds of the Wabash held by the Gould family, or $1,386,000 worth.

On one occasion Mr. Gould, speaking loudly to Mr. Ramsey at the far end of the table, asked concerning a disputed proxy:

"What shall we do about this, Mr. Ramsey?"

Ramsey never moved a muscle or made reply. The question was repeated, but no reply came from Mr. Ramsey.

TRUSTEES MEET TO-DAY.

Six Vacancies to be Filled in the Equitable's Board.

George F. Parker, Secretary of the Trustees of the majority stock of the Equitable Life, gave out the following statement yesterday in announcement of the meeting of the Trustees, which will be held to-day:

"The next meeting of the Equitable Trustees will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 11. The principal business will be the filling of the six vacancies now existing in the board, and any others that may occur before that date. Consideration will also be given, at an early day, as to the filling of the 1905 class of Directors to succeed those now in office. Of the thirteen of these, two places are now vacant, four are filled by old members, and seven are held by Directors chosen upon the recommendation of the Trustees at their meetings in June and July of the present year.

"In spite of his absence in New Hampshire and Massachusetts, Mr. Cleveland has given much time during the Summer to his duties as Trustee, and it is expected that, after the resumption of official activity, he will come in from Princeton occasionally in order to give close personal attention to the work of the Trustees, which is certain to demand a great deal of his time, especially during the remaining months of the present year."

VERMONT CAN'T ACT.

State Commission Finds It Can't Stop Insurance Business.

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Oct. 10.—Secretary of State F. G. Fleetwood and State Treasurer J. C. Bacon, Insurance Commissioners of Vermont, met here this evening to discuss the question of stopping the Equitable Life Assurance Society, the New York Life, and the Mutual Life from doing business in this State. The Commissioners were met by J. A. De Boer, President of the National Life Insurance Company; Congressman D. J. Foster, Collector of Customs Olin Merrill, and others, and were in conference until a late hour.

It was found that the Commissioners had no power to act in this matter. It was decided by the conferences to ask the Republican Party to make the regulation of insurance a plank in the State platform and to carry the matter before the next session of the Legislature to regulate more thoroughly the life insurance business in Vermont. The meeting was held in response to requests from many representative citizens, and the discovery that the commission cannot act seems likely to cause widespread disappointment.

EGGERS RAIDS OVER DOOLEY.

Secret Spring in Gambling House Wall Discloses a Roulette Wheel.

Detectives of Acting Captain Eggers's staff raided an alleged gambling place in West Twenty-fifth Street last night over the head of Capt. Dooley of the Tenderloin. It consisted of six rooms on the second floor of a flat building. They broke in two doors and found themselves in a handsomely furnished place.

They seized 5,000 poker chips and a faro layout, and noticed a table that had evidently held a roulette wheel. The wheel was nowhere in sight, but one of the detectives happened to step on a secret spring in the floor, when a door opened in the wall, and in the hiding place was the missing wheel. Two men were arrested and locked up in the Mulberry Street Station.

ACCEPT the vital principles. You may devise what method you will, yet the product will be true to the principles.

Such is the condition which establishes ours as the most distinctive ready-for-service suits in all the world.

The method is ours; the principles are those to which the to-order tailorman subscribes himself.

They demand this: that every garment be cut individually and tailored to express character and that element of style which has its source in the finer phases of the craft.

Perhaps it is that to which we owe this condition; only about one per cent of our garments demand more than a slight alteration.

The post-season single-breasted models which your to-order tailor will tell you are exclusive with him, are ready for your service:

Sack Suits: Long Coat, slightly defining the waist and upper body, with generous lapels and without vents.

Sack Suits: Form Defining Coat, with slightly rounded edge, peaked lapels and pockets welted instead of with flaps.

Sack Suits: For those who prefer the vents, we have a form defining model with long hooked centre or side vents.

These, together with eight other distinctive and more or less conventional models of single and double-breasted sack suits, give us the right to term our series complete. Fifteen to Forty Dollars.

TO PROTECT POLICY HOLDERS.

Bar Association Hears and Refers a Resolution of Inquiry.

A stated meeting of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York was held in the association's headquarters, 42 West Forty-fourth Street, last night. Joseph H. Choate was scheduled to deliver an address, but he notified Secretary Brownell last Friday that he had not had an opportunity to prepare one. Mr. Choate was not present.

The Hon. Ponambalam Ramanathan, Solicitor General of Ceylon, was present. He wore a suit of gray cloth and a white turban. He did not address the meeting. Mr. Ramanathan will remain in this country for several months and will be the guest of many learned societies. Upon his return to Ceylon he will open a college for higher education.

A resolution to amend the by-law relating to the election of the association's officers was defeated.

A resolution relating to the insurance laws of the State was offered and referred to the standing Committee on Amendments. It read:

"What legislation, if any, is desirable to prevent the hardships of holders of life insurance policies under the existing laws of this State?"

A resolution was also offered and referred to the committee in regard to the desirability of adopting a new system of marriages in this State.

Twenty-four candidates were elected to membership. The next stated meeting will be held on Dec. 12.

GRAND JURY TO ASK M'ADOO.

Will Question Him, Schmittberger, Dooley, and Gallagher About Raids.

Police Commissioner McAdoo, Inspector Schmittberger, and Police Capts. Dooley and Gallagher will be called before the Grand Jury early next week to inform that body in regard to all the circumstances leading up to and connected with the recent raiding of the Bon Ton Club, in the Tenderloin Precinct, and the arrests at four hotels in the West Forty-seventh Street Precinct. The object of the Grand Jury is to learn whether or not the police exceeded their authority in those cases.

The plan to start this investigation originated with the members of the Grand Jury. Its foreman, Gen. Daniel D. Wiley, has been principally instrumental in urging such action on his colleagues, and it was a resolution introduced by him that expressed the desire of the entire body to take up the matter. Assistant District Attorney Perkins, whose duty it is to assist the jurors and to draw indictments, said yesterday that he expected the police investigation to be taken up next Monday.

While so far everybody officially connected with the proposed investigation has declared that it would not go beyond the particular incidents already mentioned, there is an unmistakable inclination on the part of the Grand Jury to inquire into police affairs in general, so far as they relate to the enforcement of the laws against poolrooms, disorderly houses, and other resorts.

Will Demand Gain and Loss Figures.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 10.—State Insurance Commissioner Host said to-day that at least fifteen States, chiefly in the Middle West, will hereafter demand annual gain and loss exhibits of life insurance companies. According to Commissioner Host, the companies last year withheld $14,000,000 that should have gone to policy holders.

A POINT FOR THE PACKERS.

Indictment Cannot Be Eked Out by a Bill of Particulars.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Federal Judge J. Otis Humphrey intimated to-day that the indictment now standing against the meat packers would have to be found sufficient upon its own merits and could not be eked out by a bill of particulars.

Attorney Moritz Rosenthal, in supporting a demurrer to the indictment, declared to-day that the indictment did not sufficiently set up the charges alleged against the defendants. He asserted that a man should know what the prosecution intended to prove against him and should know it in time to prepare a defense.

"How about a bill of particulars?" said Assistant Attorney General Pagin.

"That comes afterward, but I am glad of a suggestion that we might have one. If that is the case I change my views," answered Mr. Rosenthal.

"The indictment must be sufficient in itself and cannot be eked out by a bill of particulars," said the court.

"Well, I do not attempt to promise one for the District Attorney. I am not speaking for him," hastily answered the Assistant Attorney General.

FOOD.

THE ARMY RATION

A Good Suggestion from an Old Soldier.

The government has been experimenting for some years seeking a condensed food to be used by soldiers in case of emergency when the army shall cut loose from its base of supplies and cast off its wagon trains and the troops shall carry their rations for a number of days in their haversacks. While some progress has been made the problem has not yet been solved.

A veteran from the Civil War, writing from New England, says in this connection:

"I have been using Grape-Nuts food for some time, and my liking for it increases with use. I find it extremely palatable, and not only digestible, but an aid to the digestion of other food which used to give me trouble.

"What has particularly struck me is the fact that a very small quantity of it is sufficient for an entire meal—that I really need no other food. It is my custom to begin my breakfast with two heaping tablespoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with cream. By the time I have eaten that I find that my appetite has been completely satisfied. I feel the comfortable sensation of one who has breakfasted wisely and well, and while I sometimes eat a little of other things, I do it more as a matter of habit than anything else. I find that I can go till noon on the two tablespoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream alone, and what is also an important consideration, without any uncomfortable sense of fullness such as I usually feel when I eat my old-style breakfast. Especially is this so if I drink a cup of good, hot Postum Coffee with the meal, for I must confess the old kind of coffee fills me full of gas and discomfort for some hours after I drink it.

"Now it has occurred to me that Grape-Nuts food ought to be added to the army ration for the reason that it furnishes so much satisfying, nourishing food in such small bulk. A soldier with a package of Grape-Nuts in his haversack would have a food supply adequate for several days of marching and fighting. It wouldn't take up much room, and the weight is nothing."

"There's a reason."

THREAT OF ISOLATION FRIGHTENS THE KAISER

Belief That an Anglo-Russian Rapprochement Is Near.

FRENCH WOULD WELCOME IT

Czar, Balked in the Far East, May Be Allowed to Get a Good Slice of the Sultan's Empire.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—If certain information from a well-informed quarter be accurate it would appear that the German Emperor is even more concerned over the prospect of an Anglo-Russian rapprochement than he was at the conclusion of the Anglo-French entente.

The wish may be father to the thought, but no little confidence is felt here in the success the partisans of better relations between England and Russia are making in both countries. The French desire to see their Russian allies and their English friends come to an agreement on questions of mutual concern. What they are anxious for is that they themselves, at the same time as Russia and England, should be left in peace to attend to their own business without perpetual interference from Berlin.

According to competent opinion there is room for such an agreement from the moment Russia, accepting accomplished facts in the Far East, seeks compensation for the abandonment of her Asiatic dreams in the resupmption of her traditional policy in the Near East. In that quarter of the world, thanks to Russia's Far Eastern adventure, the influence of Pan-Slavism has been almost succeeded by Pan-Germanism, which constitutes an infinitely more immediate and greater danger for most other nations.

The question is daily becoming more acute whether it would not be to the interest of the majority that a large share of the Turk's inheritance, including Asia Minor, should go to Russia.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 10.—At the Foreign Office to-day I was informed that, while no expression of opinion could be made in regard to the Paris Matin's statement of the events at the time of M. Delcassé's resignation, there was "some truth" in the story.

At the same time it was said that Germany hoped to establish such relations with France as would insure the settlement of all colonial disputes between the two countries. Such an arrangement would, it was asserted, be better than any formal alliance or any such "back-door alliance" as M. Delcassé endeavored to make with Great Britain.

It was declared that there was no truth in the report that Germany was seeking a formal alliance with France and Russia, but it was added that an understanding between the three powers was very desirable.

FINNISH ASSASSIN ESCAPES.

Hohenthal Cuts the Bars of His Cell and Then Uses a Rope Ladder.

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 10.—The Supreme Court, sitting at Abo yesterday, rejected the appeal of Hohenthal, the murderer, of Soisalon Solninen, against the sentence of imprisonment for life, imposed on him, and by midnight Hohenthal had effected a dramatic escape from prison, his flight being discovered at 6 o'clock this morning.

Hohenthal escaped by cutting the half-inch bars of his cell and dropping from a second-story window. A rope ladder was found by which he had surmounted a twenty-foot wall and dropped into a well-lighted street.

No further trace of the fugitive has been found.

Yesterday Hohenthal was visited by a man who is now supposed to have secreted in the cell the implements by the aid of which Hohenthal escaped. The police are diligently searching for this man.

Procurator General Soininen, a Finn, who was accused by his fellow countrymen of having been bought by the Russian Government, was shot and killed last Feb. 6, at his residence at Helsingfors by Karl Leonard Hohenthal.

The assassin was formerly a student at the Helsingfors University. He is 28 years old, and is said to have been a close friend of Eugen Schaumann, who assassinated Count Bobrikoff, the Governor General of Finland, in June, 1904.

Hohenthal lived a roving life after he left college, and is supposed to have formed revolutionary ties in St. Petersburg. The assassination of Soininen was carried out in a very clever manner, the murderer wearing a uniform which was so like that of a Russian navel officer that he was enabled to obtain admittance to the residence of the Procurator General without any difficulty. The card which he presented bore the name of Alexander Gadd, a well-known Finn serving in the Russian Navy.

PENNY POSTAGE FEASIBLE.

London Newspapers Hope Mr. Roosevelt Will Take the Initiative.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES. [Copyright, 1905.]

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The comment in the evening newspapers on the plea for universal penny postage published in to-day's Times is distinctly and ardently sympathetic. No doubt is expressed of the practicability of the scheme, and on all sides it is urged that the reduction of the present excessive rate of foreign postage is simply a step requiring a little courage on the part of the Post Office authorities.

The fact that penny postage throughout the British Empire is working satisfactorily is cited as absolute proof of the feasibility of extending the system all over the world. It seems to be believed here that there is a fair prospect of penny postage being established moderately soon between the United States and England, and it is not doubted that if that should come to pass the other nations of the world would speedily fall into line, but even penny postage between England and America, it is said, would be a great boon to millions of people in each country.

It really looks as though this country were ready to accept a proposition for penny postage from America, and the hope is expressed here that President Roosevelt will take some step that will result eventually in bringing the desired arrangement into being.

MOSCOW STRIKE SPREADS, MAY BECOME GENERAL

Workmen in the Industrial Quarter Join It.

NO CARS RUNNING IN THE CITY

Newspapers Will Not Be Published—Revolutionists Plan a Great Demonstration to Last Two Days.

MOSCOW, Oct. 10.—The workmen of the majority of the factories here, especially in the great industrial quarter of Zamoskvoretch, which is across the river from the rest of the city, joined the strike of printers and bakers to-day. The movement threatens to become general, though it is opposed by a strong minority of the workmen.

The streets are comparatively tranquil. Several times to-day there were processions of striking workmen in which red flags were carried, and the police were forced to disperse the crowds, but aside from an affray at the Liebrecht furniture factory, in which an officer and a policeman were shot and wounded, no bloodshed has been reported. Crowds of roughs started to break the windows in the Tverskoi Boulevard, the centre of the previous disorders, which has been reopened to traffic, but they fled on the approach of the police.

The workmen generally are demanding an eight-hour day and a large increase in wages. Among their demands is one for the abolition of religious lectures by priests in the factories and the substitution of lectures on economic and political subjects.

No newspapers will appear to-morrow. The employes of the electric street railroads by a secret ballot voted to continue the strike, and as a consequence no cars are running.

The revolutionists are said to be making plans for great demonstrations on Oct. 12 and Oct. 13, which, it is feared, will lead to bloodshed.

Agitators are openly preaching a revolution and inciting the workmen, many of whom are well armed with revolvers, to attack the Cossacks.

CZAR EXTOLS WITTE.

Imperial Rescript Also Admits Japan's Victories in the War.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 10.—Further imperial thanks are given to Count Witte in a rescript published to-day, which is a considerable blow to the intrigues against him. It reads:

"Count Sergei Julevich:

"In my unceasing zeal for the welfare of Russia I accepted the friendly offer of the President of the United States for a meeting of Russo-Japanese plenipotentiarics in order to put an end to all the sorrows and terrible consequences of the long-continued war entailing so many sacrifices on both sides. My choice fell on you to go to the United States as my plenipotentiary, and in case the Japanese proposals were acceptable, to enter into pourparlers to terminate the war on the conditions indicated by me.

"During the negotiations for the final arrangement of peace you have most brilliantly and successfully performed your task, acting firmly as a worthy representative of Russia. Insisting on the impossibility of accepting conditions wounding the patriotism or conscience of the Russian people and impairing the interests of your country, you have obtained rightful concessions, rejecting, through with all due acknowledgment of the successes of the enemy, the payment in any form whatever of the expenses of a war not commenced by Russia and only consenting to return to Japan the southern part of the island belonging to her up to 1875. Thus an all-advantageous peace was obtained.

"Highly appreciating the ability and statesmanlike experience you have shown and as a grateful recognition of your great and highly important services to the Fatherland, I grant you the rank of Count of the Russian Empire.

"I remain ever your well-disposed and highly grateful NICHOLAS."

TOKIO NOW CHEERFUL.

British Ships Due at Yokohama To-day —Compliments to Americans.

TOKIO, Oct. 10.—The British squadron commanded by Vice Admiral Sir Gerard Noel left Kobe early this morning for Yokohama, where it is due to-morrow. The vessels steamed out in single line formation, headed by six torpedo boat destroyers. There was a display of day fireworks as the squadron passed Wada Point. A number of Japanese warships also left Kobe for Yokohama at about the same time. The long line of warships made a grand sight.

Admiral Noel will return to Kobe after the reception of the visiting officers at Tokio, and later will visit Osaka with a portion of his squadron.

The Chairman of the Municipal Council of Tokio and several other officials will go to Yokohama to meet Admiral Noel. Three special trains will run between Tokio and Yokohama during the official stay of the British squadron at the latter place.

The officers of the United States battleship Wisconsin and cruiser Cincinnati, now at Yokohama, will be invited to attend all the functions arranged in honor of the British officers.

The abrogation of martial law has had the effect of removing to a great extent the business depression in this city, and the public is now feeling in a more suitable mood to extend the heartiest kind of a reception to the British fleet.

A forecast announcing a continuance of the bright Autumn weather is helping to increase the buoyancy of the public spirit.

The garden party given to-day by Count Inouye, Secretary of the Home Department, at his residence here, to E. H. Harriman and his party, was a great success. Mr. Harriman and his friends are apparently thoroughly enjoying themselves. They especially admired the Count's fine collection of antique Japanese art objects.

Miss Alice Roosevelt passed through Tokio to-day on her way to Yokohama, escorted by Master of Ceremonies Nagasksi Saigo specially detailed from the Imperial Household Department to accompany her. She will sail from Yokohama for San Francisco on Oct. 13.

CASTRO IS NOW SORRY.

Wants to Make It Up with M. Taigny—France Demands an Apology.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Since President Castro's return to Caracas from Los Toques he has made repeated advances to M. Taigny, the French Chargé d'Affaires, for the purpose of resuming friendly intercourse, apparently intending to ignore his previous offensive action in refusing to deal with the Government of France through M. Taigny.

The latter, acting on instructions from Paris, declines to meet the advances or resume intercourse with the Venezuelan Government until Venezuela complies with the French request that Castro withdraw the offensive action. The situation is thus reversed, M. Taigny now refusing to deal with President Castro, instead of the Venezuelan President refusing to deal with M. Taigny.

In the meantime President Castro has made efforts to adjust matters directly with the French Cable Company without the co-operation of M. Taigny, but this has been counteracted by the definite understanding arrived at between the Government and the company to the effect that no action shall be taken except through the French Legation at Caracas.

The officials here do not regard the situation as critical or pressing, and therefore are content to await the result of the conference of Ambassador Jusserand with the authorities at Washington, which are designed to determine the most effective means of dealing with the question.

The Old McLaughlin Machine Men Prominent in This Year's Nominations.

The nominations made by the Aldermanic Conventions in Brooklyn last night bear the complexion of the old McLaughlin ring. In many cases the names are the same as those appearing on the tickets of the old-time McLaughlin régime.

The exception to the old-time heelers of McLaughlin, nominated last night, is George E. Eveson, a physician well known for his charitable work. His nomination was insisted upon by James E. Bouck, leader of the Forty-eighth Assembly District.

Those nominated last night with the numbers of their Assembly Districts are:

MAY BE A BANDIT'S TRICK.

Belief That the Ear Sent to Monastir Was Not Cut from Mr. Wills.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Much anxiety is felt here regarding the fate of Mr. Wills, the Englishman recently employed by the Turkish Tobacco Revenue Department, who has been captured by brigands, and one of whose ears is said to have been received at the British Consulate at Monastir, with a letter saying that Wills would be murdered unless the brigands received $5,000 not later than Oct. 14.

Mr. Wills, who is about 27 years old, disappeared last July. He is a son of an engineer, who for many years has been engaged in work in Turkey, and a brother of Percy Wills, the British Consular agent at Ismid, Asia Minor. He served as a volunteer in the British Army during the Boer war, and was returned invalided, afterward securing a position in the Turkish Tobacco Revenue Department. He is of an adventurous disposition, and is known to have strong revolutionary tendencies.

The Foreign Office to-day received information regarding the latest developments in the case. It is stated that Robert W. Graves, the British Consul General at Salonika, left for Monastir on Oct. 6, in connection, it is believed, with the receipt of the severed ear.

The officials here and persons closely connected with the Macedonian movement are inclined to believe that the ear does not belong to Wills, but was sent with the idea that the ransom demanded would be promptly paid.

J. T. McCaddon Remanded.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Joseph T. McCaddon, the American showman who was arrested on the charge of fraudulent bankruptcy at Southampton on Sept. 30, was remanded at Bow Street Police Court to-day until Oct. 13, at the request of his counsel, who are awaiting papers connected with the case.

BARS WIFE FROM FUNERAL.

Harry D. Hopkins Turns Her from His Mother's Bier.

There was an unpleasant scene at the funeral yesterday of Mrs. Jessie Hopkins, who was shot on Saturday in her flat at 46 Johnson Street, Brooklyn, by her husband, Denton H. Hopkins. The dead woman's son barred his young wife from his mother's bier when she appeared as a mourner. Leaving the house, young Mrs. Hopkins watched what was going on from the elevated railroad station near by.

The funeral services were brief and were attended by only a few relatives and friends of the dead woman. The son, Harry D. Hopkins, was the chief mourner. Just before the services began, his wife, from whom he is separated, appeared at the house with her mother. As they reached the door leading into the Hopkins apartment, Harry Hopkins barred their way.

Detective Tucker of the Adams Street Station, who was with the women, explained that young Mrs. Hopkins was there merely out of respect to the memory of her mother-in-law, but Hopkins declared that he did not care to have her present at the servicee. Mrs. Hopkins and her mother then left the house. They mounted the stairway of the elevated station, and from there watched the mourners leave the house and drive away to Greenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Hopkins said she had visited her father-in-law in Raymond Street Jail. He had been kind to her, she said, and she intended going to the jail to tell him about the funeral of his wife.

GALLAGHER BROUGHT TO BOOK

Commissioner McAdoo Calls the Transfer His Strongest Weapon.

Police Commissioner McAdoo has asked Capt. Gallagher, late of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, for a report as to whether interviews printed in yesterday's morning papers, in which the Captain was quoted as criticising the Commissioner's action in transferring him to Brooklyn, are correct. Speaking on the subject yesterday Mr. McAdoo said:

"The transfer is the strongest weapon in the hands of the Commissioner for efficiency on the police force, and he has to be trusted to use it impartially and with good judgment, and only for service and police reasons. If Capt. Gallagher is correctly reported in the newspapers I feel more than justified in taking the action I have in the present case."

The Commissioner says he will transfer Sergt. Edward J. Harrington and Roundsman George Busby from the West Forty-seventh Street Station, but has not yet decided where he will send them.

SCOUNDRELS, CRY MAGYARS.

Rescript Proroguing Parliament Denounced—Ministers Absent.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 10.—Parliament was prorogued to-day by royal rescript until Dec. 19. Shouts of "Scoundrels!" and similar epithets, mingled with queries of "Where is the Constitution?" greeted the reading of the rescript, but no Cabinet Ministers were present to take note of the insults hurled at them.

Count Julius Andrassy denounced the Ministers and read a comprehensive protest against the Government's procedure.

Count Stephen Tieza, the ex-Premier, followed with a brief speech explaining that he refused to continue the debate, which he considered inadmissible after Parliament had been prorogued. Then, with his colleagues, the Count left the hall.

A Socialist Deputy proposed that the rescript be disregarded and the debate continued, but this was ignored. Count Andrassy's resolution was adopted practically unanimously, and the House adjourned.

In the House of Magnates a motion proposed by Baron Ponay vigorously protesting against the repeated prorogations of Parliament was rejected after a debate of several hours, but the motion of Baron Boothy, expressing regret that the King-Emperor had again decided to prorogue the Diet and hoping for a solution of the present difficulties was unanimously adopted.

According to Dr. Shaw, the percentage is not greater than in many other cities he has visited. In one school here the percentage was 75, the lowest he found anywhere.

FEW ARRESTS.

First Day Mistakes of the Morgan Deputies Earn Them a Lecture.

There was less interference yesterday by Supt. Morgan's deputies with voters trying to register than on the first day of registration. In Manhattan only four arrests were made up to the time the registration places closed last night, against twice that number on Monday.

This was due to a sudden change of front on the part of Mr. Morgan, brought about by the many mistakes made by his men the day before.

Early in the day there was a long conference between Supt. Morgan and Attorney General Mayer, who afterward made a statement in which he said that the practice of indiscriminate arrests wherever there was doubt regarding a man's right to register would not be tolerated in the future. After that the deputies received instructions to call up Mr. Morgan in all cases before ordering an arrest.

It was very quiet at the office of the Superintendent of Elections. The principal complaints received were from the Fifteenth Assembly District, where names had been stricken from the rolls. These persons came to Mr. Morgan to protest, saying they had been made the victims of persons interested in the Plunkitt-McManus fight, who had voted on their names at the primaries, and that they had their first intimation of their names being stricken from the lists when they went to register.

Morris I. Glusker, a wholesale grocer at 45 Ludlow Street, who was arrested on Monday while attempting to register, was discharged yesterday, in the Essex Market Court, the Morgan deputies admitting that they had made a mistake.

Lewis J. Arnend of 550 West 149th Street was arrested last night in the registration place at 1,793 Amsterdam Avenue, on a charge of illegal registration preferred by a Morgan deputy. At the Amsterdam Avenue Station he said that for ten years he had voted from that address, where he owned the house. The Sergeant telephoned to Mr. Morgan's office, and after a while Deputy Supt. Stevenson sent word that a mistake had been made. Mr. Arnend was released at once, not pleased.

FIRE INSURERS FOR JEROME.

Says He'll Either Be Making a Noise or Tinkering Clocks Next Week.

When District Attorney Jerome was asked last night to give his view of his prospects of indorsement by the Tammany and Republican conventions, he said:

"All I have to say is that by this time next week we will either be filling the air with loud cries or working on clocks at Lakeville."

At Mr. Jerome's headquarters last night there was given out an indorsement of his candidacy from all of the fire insurance companies of New York, ninety-eight in all. The indorsement was signed by every fire insurance company doing business in the city.

A BROADSIDE FOR M'CARREN.

Cochrane Says His Day of Reckoning Will Overwhelm Him.

Characterizing Senator McCarren as "a poltroon, a liar, and a coward," Henry F. Cochrane, the leader-elect of the Seventeenth Assembly District in Brooklyn, issued a statement yesterday afternoon in which he said that while he intended to support the Democratic city ticket, he would oppose the election of the men whose nominations were dictated by McCarren. This, in part, is what Mr. Cochrane had to say:

"I propose to support the city ticket. I believe that I am absolved from supporting the county ticket in view of the platform and resolutions adopted by the City Convention which in effect read out of the party all those who were connected with the gas scandal. This man, McCarren, is the chief offender. After months of investigation and expert probing, the combined wisdom of the investigators produced a gas bill which was acceptable to every one, until the hand of the despoiler became opportune, and, ignoring all that the investigation had disclosed, and at the mere request of the President of the gas company, defeated the bill.

"I found in the course of my canvass in the recent contest in my Assembly district that it was this man's public record that we had to contend with. No appeal could win votes when it became known that we were identified with McCarren. If those who underwent the same experience that I did will tell the truth, every man will say that every shopkeeper and every owner of a small house was against this man.

"This is a Christian community. Its love of virtue and modesty has been its marked characteristic. When this man McCarren is found out, which must inevitably happen, everything that is tainted with him, social and political, will feel the overwhelming condemnation of an outraged people."

Mr. Cochrane said much more. He made the fight for Senator McCarren at the primaries and afterward in the caucus McCarren chose Edward Kaufmann as the nominee for County Clerk to succeed himself. It was known that Kaufmann had fought Cochrane in the primaries, but his name was offered to McCarren by Charles F. Murphy.

IN THE ASSEMBLY.

Democratic candidates for the Assembly were nominated last night at conventions held in each of the thirty-five districts of Manhattan and the Bronx. Sixteen members of the present Assembly were renominated, and in the Sixth and Fourteenth Districts members of previous Assemblies were brought forward again and placed in nomination. They were James Oliver of Paradise Park and Jacob Fritz, respectively.

Of those renominated, Leslie J. Tompkins of the Fifth District is prominent. Mr. Tompkins, who took a leading part in reform legislation last year, has the indorsement of the Citizens' Union in this old-time Republican district.

In the Eighteenth Edward H. La Fetra was renominated. Charles F. Murphy lives in this district, and is the Tammany district leader, as well as the leader of the general organization.

In the Twenty-ninth Tammany nominated William Mason Smith, the candidate of the Citizens' Union. In the Thirty-fourth William J. Ellis was nominated for the fourth time.

TO FILL NEW COURT PLACES.

Two Republicans Named in Brooklyn —Row at One Convention.

Conventions were held in Brooklyn last night by the Republicans to nominate candidates for Municipal Court Justices in the two newly made districts. In the Sixth District, which comprises the southern section of the borough, Lucien S. Bayliss was nominated after a fierce competition with John H. Kemble, Alvin R. Johnson, and George S. Fielder. In the first ballot Kemble led Bayliss by several votes. In the third ballot Fielder's vote swung to Bayliss and he was declared the nominee. Then there was a row. The delegates shook their fists in one another's faces, and the police were called in to clear the hall, at Fulton and Nevins Streets.

In the Seventh District, which is in East New York, William Watson was nominated without opposition. This convention was held in Breitkopf's Hall, Fulton Street and Jamaica Avenue.

LASSO OUT FOR MOSS TO RUN FOR MAYOR

If He Doesn't Duck Quick Halpin Will Get Him.

ELSBERG HAS BEGGED OFF

And a Weary Committee on Vacancies Can Only Hope to be Credited with Good Intentions.

Oh, it was pitiful!
In a whole cityful
No one would run.
Alas! for the rarity
Of Christian charity
Under the sun.
(With apologies to Hood.)

All yesterday the Republican Committee on Vacancies sought a candidate for Mayor, only to return to the Fifth Avenue Hotel at nightfall footsore, weary, and with little hope.

From one member it was learned that they saw Frank Moss, and that they had hopes of lassoing him to-day. Mr. Moss was the inquisitor for the Mazet committee, and has been more or less prominent in reform movements since that time. He was an able assistant to the late Capt. Goddard in his war on policy. If Mr. Moss does not get frightened and take to the woods when he learns that the committee is gunning for him he may be captured. His last chance of escape is said to be the possibility that bigger game may cross the committee's path while they are searching for him. No bigger game was reported on the borizon last night.

Mr. Moss was seen last night and asked if the Republican nomination for Mayor had been offered to him. He said the tender of the nomination had not been made. Asked if he would accept the nomination if it were offered to him, Mr. Moss replied that he would cross that bridge when he came to it.

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, showed yesterday that his sympathies had been aroused by the plight of the Republican managers, and he made them what he termed "a handsome offer."

"If the Republican leaders are unable to find a candidate for Mayor," said Mr. Murphy, "Tammany will help them out. We'll lend 'em Hearst."

When Mr. Murphy's offer was communicated to some of the members of the Republican Committee on Vacancies the comment was: "That man Murphy certainly has a mean disposition."

William Leary also came to the front with a suggestion to the Committee on Vacancies. Said he:

"Why not nominate Louis Stern? He is the President of the Republican Club, an all around good man, and, best of all, he is in Paris now, and his declination could not reach here in time to prevent his name from going on the ticket."

There was renewed talk of Senator Elsberg. It was recalled that it was he who succeeded in putting through the Senate, after the most arduous and persistent effort, the Mayor's four-year term bill.

The news that the responsibility for that great piece of political sagacity rested upon the shoulders of Elsberg spread like wildfire among the politicians, and there were loud cries that Elsberg must be the—that is to say, was entitled to the honor of the Republican nomination, and should not be deprived of it. It would be the height of ingratitude, it was said, if he should be passed over.

When the Senator came into the Fifth Avenue Hotel he was besieged by an importunate assemblage of his fellow-Republicans, who informed him that, having just learned of the great service he had done in getting through the four-year-term bill, they were for him first, last, and all the time.

Snator Elsberg appeared to be deeply touched by the demand, but in a voice broken with emotion he informed his fellow-Republicans that he could not accept it under a false pretense.

"The man who drew up the Four-Year-Term bill and had it sent to Albany," said the Senator, "was Seth Low. It was entirely his conception. Far be it from me to deprive any man of his just credit."

When this information imparted by Senator Elsberg was communicated to Col. Michael J. Daly, he remarked with evidence of deep feeling:

"Will the political ghost of that man pursue us into the last ditch?"

The Colonel is a moody man at times.

It was learned yesterday from high authority among the Republicans that despite the desperate character of the situation in which the party organization finds itself, it will not turn to either Hearst or John Ford. Senator Alfred R. Page is as good a guess as any.

Chairman Halpin was at the Republican headquarters, 1 Madison Avenue, yesterday afternoon. He made a brave effort to be cheerful until some one suggested to him that he ought to insist on Gen. Horace Porter taking the nomination.

"Ought to insist!" he exclaimed. As the song has it, "It wasn't so much the thing he said as the nawsty way he said it."

"I have no announcement to make about a candidate," said Chairman Halpin when asked about the situation. "I don't know when the Committee on Vacancies will meet. We have until Oct. 21 to file nominations, but we will not wait that long before selecting our candidate."

Asked if there was any likelihood that the Republican Convention would be reconvened for the purpose of making new nominations for Mayor and Controller, Mr. Halpin said there was none. The Committee on Vacancies, he said, would fill the gaps in the ticket.

James L. Wells, the Republican candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, sat in his office yesterday bemoaning the lonesomeness of his political life. The Republican Notification Committee dropped in on him, informed him of his nomination, and tried to cheer him up.

"They put me on deck without my consent," said Mr. Wells when seen later, "and now I find myself all alone. It isn't a comfortable situation. I am a sociable man, and I like company. Every day lost in making up the ticket subtracts from its chances of success."

"Do you think the Republican ticket still has a chance of success?"

"Well, strange things happen in politics. I have seen a ticket win that seemed to have no chance at the beginning. This is a big city, more than 4,000,000 people, and you can't tell what 4,000,000 people think of the situation. Nor can you tell what they will think on election day. Oh, yes, we have a chance—that is if they will hurry up and fill out the ticket."

"Will you suggest a few names for Mayor and Controller to the Committee on Vacancies?"

"No, that is their business. But I do hope they will hurry up. It is not good for a man to be alone in domestic life or on a political ticket."

Louis F. Payn, Columbia County's elder statesman, put in an appearance at State Headquarters in the Fifth Avenue and had a few pointed remarks to make about the local situation which did not add to the cheer of the Republicans there assembled. Mr. Payn inquired if the Republicans had yet found a Mayoralty candidate. Some one said that Senator Elsberg was having a boom for the nomination.

"Got a boom, has he?" said the Marshal. "'Pears to me he would be a heap sight more comfortable with typhoid fever."

Mr. Payn was asked what he thought of nominating a man before securing his consent.

"It's always best to find out what he is going to say," answered the Sage of Chatham. "Up our way if we demand that a man run he's got to do it or be content to travel at a mighty slow pace thereafter."

Mr. Payn was reminded that on his former visit he had predicted the election of Mayor McClellan, and was asked if he would venture an estimate of Mr. McClellan's majority.

"I have only one pencil, and I don't want to wear it out," he replied.

After the members of the Republican Committee on Vacancies had had a good dinner last evening and rested up a bit after their hunt, they were inclined to take a more cheerful view of the situation. One who apparently voiced the sentiments of the rest said:

"After all, I am of the opinion that we have helped rather than hurt ourselves by the nomination of Mr. Hughes. I believe that the public will see in our nomination of him an earnest of our good intentions and that the candidate whom we finally select will get the benefit of that impression."

Somebody made a wholly irrelevant remark about the use of good intentions as a paving material, but it did not seem to awaken the committee from its pleasant dream.

Mr. Halpin will go to Newburg to-day to attend the wedding of State Chairman Odell's son. When he returns this evening some information about new candidates to fill the vacancies on the Republican ticket may be expected.

Nevins to Oppose Leslie J. Tompkins.

The Republicans of the Fifth Assembly District nominated A. P. Nevins last night for member of Assembly. He will be opposed by Leslie J. Tompkins, renominated by the Democrats The fight will be one of the most interesting in the county. The Citizens' Union holds the balance of power in the district, and its candidate has usually won. Tompkins has the Union's indorsement this year.

HEARST AGREES TO BE CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR

His Name Will Head Municipal Ownership League's Ticket.

JOHN FORD FOR CONTROLLER

J. G. Phelps Stokes Will Be Nominated for President of the Board of Aldermen.

William Randolph Hearst will accept the nomination for Mayor, tendered to him by the Municipal Ownership forces. His willingness to run was made known last night at a meeting of the Municipal Ownership Committee of Seventeen, held at 280 Broadway, the announcement creating much enthusiasm. Later a letter which Mr. Hearst sent to Judge Samuel Seabury, Chairman of the Municipal Ownership Notification Committee, was made public.

At the meeting of the Committee of Seventeen the other nominees for the city ticket were agreed upon. Ex-Senator John Ford is to be the nominee for Controller and J. G. Phelps Stokes the nominee for President of the Board of Aldermen. There will be another meeting of the Committee of Seventeen to-night at the Astor House for the purpose of agreeing upon the platform to be presented to the Municipal Ownership Convention to be held to-morrow night.

The letter of Mr. Hearst to Judge Seabury agreeing to accept the Municipal Ownership Party's nomination for Mayor follows:

Mr. Hearst's Letter.

My Dear Judge Seabury:

I thank you for the honor which you confer upon me, and for the confidence expressed by your committee and those whom you represent.

I have felt absolutely unable and unwilling to accept the nomination you have offered me, but I have at length decided to defer to your wishes and not to shirk a task that presents itself to me as a public duty.

The situation in this city is so grave and the condition of the public in the face of organized boodlism is apparently so helpless that no man has a right to consider anything else, least of all his private affairs or personal inclination.

The one thing to be considered is the necessity of giving to the people an opportunity to vote for some man of whom it may at least be said that he would, if elected, represent those that voted for him, and not any boss or corporation or selfish private interest.

If your convention believes that I am such a man I shall accept the nomination. It is intolerable, in view of the recent exposures of the Gas Trust and the insurance frauds, that the interests of the citizens should be allowed to go by default.

The Gas Trust robs the city and all the citizens, and yet it is proposed to re-elect the man who signed the Remsen bill, to make the monopoly of the trust permanent and unassailable.

The amazing life insurance revelations prove that the policy holders are robbed, and show in detail how corporations bribe the bosses of both parties in return for corrupt legislation and license to evade the law. The machinery of government in this city is in the control of a boss whose fortune is based on contracts awarded by corporations in return for special favors and illegal privileges.

The Subway, which was owned and built by the city, has been given away, and is managed in utter disregard of the health and comfort of the public, the welfare of business men, or the rights of employes.

An organization for plunder has planned to secure and exploit all new subways and all other remaining franchises, and has arranged a political combination to make it impossible for the people to protect themselves.

And bad as the situation is to-day, it is as nothing to the four years' riot of corruption that would follow an apparent indorsement of such dishonesty at the polls.

Such a prospect is a menace to the prosperity as well as to the good name of the city, and is a threat against the rights and the material welfare of all the people.

Under these circumstances a man asked by his fellow-citizens to represent their interests and the honor of the city has no right to refuse. WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Rumor of Republican Support.

There was some talk yesterday that the Republicans would indorse the candidacy of Mr. Hearst if he concluded to run, but the Republican leaders denied having any such intention. The formal nomination of Mr. Hearst and those who are to be his colleagues on the municipal ownership ticket will be made at the municipal ownership convention to be held to-morrow night.

William R. Hearst, the candidate of the Municipal Ownership Party for Mayor, is the editor of The New York American. Mr. Hearst was a candidate for the Presidency in the Democratic National Convention which nominated Alton B. Parker.

Ex-Senator John Ford, the nominee of the Municipal Ownership forces for Controller, was born in Orleans County on July 28, 1862. He spent his youth as a farm laborer. Later he went to work in a stone quarry at Medina. It was while he was engaged in work as a stone mason that he determined to obtain a college education. He at once began studying to that end, still keeping up his work in the quarry. Within fifteen months he had mastered sufficient Latin, Greek, and mathematics to enable him to enter college.

After leaving college Mr. Ford became the editor of The Economist. He published the "Pocket Encyclopedia of Protection" in that period. Later he became an editorial writer on The New York Press. In 1893 he gave up newspaper work to study law.

In 1895 he was elected State Senator in the Nineteenth District, receiving a handsome majority over Louis W. Schultze. Mr. Ford's service in the Senate was distinguished. He was the author of the bill providing for the representation of the State of New York at the Paris Exposition and also of the mechanic's lien law. His most noted achievement was his introduction and passage of the present franchise tax law, a measure through which the City of New York has already received $25,000,000 in revenue from the corporations, and the revenue from which is certain to increase yearly.

At the session of the Legislature last Winter and at the session of the previous year, ex-Senator Ford was one of the foremost champions of the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill. The Elsberg bill provides for the municipal ownership of all future subways constructed by the city.

J. G. Phelps Stokes is a young millionaire who first came into prominence through his activity and philanthropy in connection with settlement work on the east side. Recently he married Miss Rose Pastor, a young cigarmaker of humble parentage, whom he met in connection with his settlement work. Their marriage caused something of a sensation in the social world.

Mr. Stokes has been an ardent advocate of the doctrine of municipal ownership. He was the Chairman of the Municipal Ownership mass meeting in Grand Central Palace last week, at which it was decided to offer the nomination for Mayor to Mr. Hearst.

BRYAN ON CITY OWNERSHIP.

He Writes to the Jackson Club That the Cause Will Grow.

The Jackson Club, a Democratic organization at Fordham, held a meeting Monday night to discuss municipal ownership and the operation of public utilities. A letter from William Jennings Bryan, sent from Lincoln, Neb., on Sept. 6 to President J. Fairfax McLaughlin, Jr., of the club, was read. The letter says:

Your favor at hand informing me that the Jackson Club is contemplating a meeting in October to talk over the municipal ownership and operation of public utilities.

I am glad that your club has taken up this subject. It seems to me that the Democratic position on the trust question, namely, that private monopolies are indefensible and intolerable, compels the party to oppose the use of monopoly franchises. Both theory and experience are opposed to the creation of private monopolies when competition is impossible (as it is) in the operations of the big dealers, and the benefits of the monopoly must be enjoyed by the people and not by a favored few, although their advocates, however righteous the movement, must expect misrepresentation and bitter opposition. I am satisfied that the cause of municipal ownership will grow as the people have a chance to investigate it.

Wishing your meeting success, I am very truly yours. W. J. BRYAN.

BUSY CANDIDATE HUNTING.

Republican Aldermen Cruelly Attacked in Their Absence.

President Fornes of the Board of Aldermen had a hard time yesterday trying to get the board in session. For twenty minutes, at intervals, he had the roll called, and then, failing to get a quorum, gave up in disgust.

"Guess everybody is at the baseball game," suggested Alderman Meyers.

"No," replied Alderman Dowling, "the small attendance is because all of the Republicans are scurrying around trying to find some one to run for Mayor."

LOST 20 YEARS' SAVINGS.

Pittsburg Steel Worker Robbed of $650 in Raines Law Hotel.

A characteristic illustration of the nature of the places generally known as Raines law hotels was furnished yesterday in a story told in the Tombs Court by John Wilson, a Scotch iron worker from Pittsburg, when he appeared as complainant against John Malory, whom he charged with robbing him of $650.

"Oh, not much," replied Wilson gloomily when asked what the prisoner had done to him. "He and two others just robbed me of all my savings, that wss all. And I had worked like a slave for that money, worked day and night for twenty years and more in the steel mills down at Pittsburg. Do you know what that means?

"I had had enough of it and was going to do what I had been dreaming of for many a yesr. I was going home to old Scotland, where I was born. And maybe I was going to stay there, and maybe, as well, I was coming back. For they say that he who has once breathed American air cannot live without it. Anyhow, I was going to see the folks and have a rest, and the $650 I had saved up was to pay for it.

"I came here to sail for Scotland, and little did I know what kind of town this is, this metropolis as they call it. I went to a place that they called a hotel. It had a sign, too, with 'Hotel' on it. And if it was not luxurious exactly, I have slept in worse places for all that and euffered no harm. And even if I took a wee nip I took not too much, but my head was as clear as it is now. And right in that place, which was full of people, I was held up by this man here and two others. They had come to know I had the $650 stowed away fine in my etocking leg. And while two held me the third one ripped up the trouser leg and took my bit of money.

"I told the police, and perhaps they did something and perhaps they did not. But Monday last I saw this man on the Bowery, and I told the police officer here, and he got him for me. And now I don't know what to do, but I suppose I have to go back to Pittsburg and begin over again just where I left off."

Malory was held in $1,500 for further examination. The police have hope of finding his two accomplices. The place where Wilson says he was robbed is on the Bowery.

DYING AFTER A CLUBBING.

Victim Collapsed on the Way to Court and Was Arrested Again.

Henry Engelhardt, a clerk, living at 413 Knickerbocker Avenue, Williamsburg, was reported to be dying at his home last night of compression of the brain. He was to have been in the Manhattan Avenue Police Court to answer to a charge of assault lodged by Policeman Herbert Green. Dr. Charles Wuest certified to the court that Engelhardt was critically ill as the result of a clubbing, and could not live.

Engelhardt's brother was in court and declared that the injured man had been clubbed by several policemen and that he could bring forward witnesses to prove it.

On the night of Sept. 27 Engelhardt and several other young men were noisy at Central Avenue and Grove Street, and Policeman Green ordered them to disperse. It was alleged that Engelhardt turned on the policeman, and the latter in self-defense clubbed him. Then Green arrested Engelhardt on a charge of assault, and when the prisoner was arraigned in court on the following day Magistrate O'Reilly noticed that he was suffering from wounds on his head, and released him on bail to appear in court two days later.

On the appointed day, while on his way to court, Engelhardt collapsed, and a policeman who thought he was drunk arrested him. Magistrate O'Reilly discharged Engelhardt and rebuked the policeman for having arrested him.

ELEVATOR MEN ACCUSED.

Madison Avenue Apartment Robbed of $1,000 Worth of Silver.

Andrew Cheatham, 30 years old, of 558 West Thirty-ninth Street, and Willie Simms, 21 years old, of 516 West Fifty-sixth Street, both negro elevator men, employed in the Stratford, an apartment house at 1,070 Madison Avenue, were locked up in the East Eighty-eighth Street Police Station last night, as suspicious persons. They were arrested in connection with the theft of nearly $1,000 worth of silverware from one of the Stratford's tenants.

Adrian D. Herzog, Treasurer for L. Marquette & Co., decorators, of 415 Fifth Avenue, who lives on the ground floor of the Stratford, returned from the theatre with his wife on Monday night at midnight. They did not miss anything before going to bed, but upon getting up yesterday morning discovered that solid table silver valued at from $750 to $1,000 had been stolen.

Mr. Herzog notified the police, and Detectives Wildenaeuer and Regan were detailed to the case. After a few hours' investigation they arrested the two elevator men. In the pocket of one of them, according to the police, a letter postmarked a week ago and addressed to one of the tenants of the house was found. The letter had been partly opened.

PANAMA WILLING TO PAY.

About to Negotiate with Colombia Regarding the Latter's Debt.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—John Barrett, Minister to Colombia, called at the State Department to-day to confer with Secretary Root respecting his participation in the effort about to be made to adjust the foreign indebtedness of Colombia by inducing Panama to assume a proper share of liabilities.

Ever since the separation of Panama and Colombia the State Department has been quietly exerting its good offices with Panama to have that Government divide responsibility with Colombia for the outstanding foreign indebtedness.

Panama having now consented to negotiate on this subject, a meeting has been arranged for next Thursday afternoon at the State Department. Panama will be represented by Señor Obaldia, Colombia by Minister Mendoza, and the United States by Mr. Barrett. Secretary Root will probably place the principals in communication and extend some friendly advice in order to forward the objects of the conference.

It is proposed to divide the debt between the two countries on the basis of population, which plan, if adopted, would allot 10 per cent. of the total debt to Panama.

Books As Gifts.

DOROTHY WORDSWOTH TO COLERIDGE:

"Yes, do you send me a book for my birthday. Not a bargain book, bought from a haberdasher, but a beautiful book, a book to caress—peculiar, distinctive, individual: a book that hath first caught your eye and then pleased your fancy, written by an author with a tender whim, all right out of his heart. We will read it together in the gloaming, and when the gathering dusk doth blur the page, we'll sit with hearts too full for speech and think it over."

NEWBURGER OUT, WILL RUN FOR SUPREME COURT

Tammany Is to Name Him, Ingraham, and Gildersleeve.

DELANY MUST WAIT A YEAR

Wigwam's Candidate for District Attorney Is Still Unsettled, Says Charles F. Murphy.

As a result of the definite settlement of the Tammany judicial ticket, by which Supreme Court Justices Ingraham and Gildersleeve are to be renominated and Judge Joseph E. Newburger named for the third place, Judge Newburger resigned his office as Judge of the Court of General Sessions yesterday. The resignation, to take effect immediately, was sent to the Secretary of State at Albany.

Judge Newburger, who still had five years to serve on the General Sessions bench, had served nine years in the court. His nomination for the third place on the Supreme Court ticket will be made on Thursday night in Tammany Hall. As Supreme Court Justice, should he be elected, his salary will be $17,500, as against $12,000 in General Sessions. His successor there will not take the seat until Jan. 1, and in the meantime Gov. Higgins may appoint to the vacancy, his appointee serving to the close of the current year.

The definite determination to give the third place to Judge Newburger necessarily ends further consideration of Corporation Counsel Delany for the nomination. Mr. Delany, it is understood, was advised that he ought to continue in his present office for another year, as he could be of great use to Mayor McClellan. Next year, it is understood, he will get the nomination to succeed Justice Barrett. The latter will soon resign, and Gov. Higgins will appoint a successor, who in turn will be succeeded by the Justice elected in 1906.

Justice Giegerich also comes up for election next year. As he comes from the same Assembly district as Judge Newburger, it was pointed out that a year's delay would make no difference to Mr. Delany, but it would kill off Judge Newburger. The latter, like Judge Giegerich, has the active backing of City Chamberlain Patrick Keenan, who is the Tammany leader in the Sixteenth Assembly District. Judge Newburger also has the strong support of the Sullivanites.

Charles F. Murphy said yesterday that there was nothing new about selecting a candidate for District Attorney, and that no settlement would be reached, in all probability, until just before the convention to-morrow night. A meeting of the Tammany Executive Committee has been called for 7 o'clock, and the County and Borough Conventions will be held at the Hall at 8. Whether Mr. Jerome will be indorsed or not is as much in doubt as ever.

It was semi-officially made known that Register J. H. J. Ronner will not be renominated to succeed himself, but that Alderman Frank Gass of the Bronx would be named instead.

Fire Commissioner Nicholas J. Hayes has been definitely settled upon for Sheriff. The Sullivan influences, which had been backing Patrick H. Keahon, leader of the Seventh District, for the place, are now bending their efforts to have Keahon named for County Clerk.

DELAYING MATHEWS'S TRIAL.

Col. Gruber Now Says Jerome's Candidacy Prejudices the Trial.

Justice Stover in the Supreme Court yesterday reserved decision on Abraham Gruber's application for a change of venue in the case of Armitage Mathews. Mathews was to have been put on trial yesterday in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court on a charge of conspiring with another lawyer, John H. Wooten, and with David Rothschild, in connection with the management of an estate.

Mr. Gruber told the court that the newspaper comments on the charges against Mathews had made it impossible for him to have a fair trial in New York County. The opposition of the Republican Party to Mr. Jerome's renomination, Mr. Gruber said, also figured in the case, as Mr. Jerome was anxious that Mathews be placed on trial on the eve of the Republican County Convention, which is to be held Friday night.

"I would not treat a dog in such a manner," declared Mr. Gruber. "Is it not an abuse of the great power of the Public Prosecutor?"

Assistant District Attorney Rand, who opposed the motion, said Mr. Gruber was simply sparring for delay.

DYNAMITE ON HIS DOORSTEP.

A Brooklyn Cobbler in Terror of "Black Hand" Enemies.

When Ludovico Digiozella, shoemaker, opened his shop at 308 Marion Street, Brooklyn, early yesterday morning he found that some one had left a present for him on the dooretep in the shape of a two-pound package of dynamite with a fuse attached. If the fuse, which had evidently been lighted, had burned, Digiozella would have been killed.

In the last few weeks the shoemaker has received many threatening letters written in Italian. Each letter contained a demand for money to be placed in a certain spot. He received the last letter Friday, which threatened instant death if the money was not paid at once. The shoemaker was scared too much to notify the police. His customers noticed that he jumped up as if struck by an electric shock each time the door was opened. They asked him what he was so nervous about, but he only shook his head and mopped his face.

Last night he mustered up courage and carried the dynamite to the Ralph Avenue Police Station. When Capt. O'Reilly examined it he found that the top fuse was filled with giant powder, and said that there was enough dynamite to blow up any building in Brooklyn. The police are looking for Digiozella's enemies.

TAFT FOR MILDER FOOTBALL.

Says Any Cadet Who Plays a Brutal Game Will Be Dismissed.

Secretary of War Taft declared himself emphatically on the subject of brutal football yesterday, and said he would cause any West Point student to be dismissed who was found guilty of playing an unnecessarily rough game. The Secretary was standing on the Red Star Line pier when he uttered his views with relation to the game. His family had just returned on the Kroonland from Europe.

Secretary Taft was asked if he had anything to say about President Roosevelt's move to eradicate brutal football contests between the great university elevens.

"I certainly am in complete accord with the President's views," he said. "The President did me the honor of talking over the football matter last week, and were I in Washington last night I should have been at the meeting.

"I have never seen a West Point-Annapolis football match, but if there be any brutality in one I intend to stop it so far as my end of the affair is concerned. I look upon brutal football as a pure assault, and any cadet who attempts to play a brutal game is sure to hear from me."

Hard Job to Reform It, Eliot Says.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 10.—Referring to President Roosevelt's talk with the men representing college football, at the White House yesterday, President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University to-day said:

"The President with characteristic vigor has tackled a hard job. It is hard to bring about a reform through the very men who have long known about the existing evils, and have been largely responsible for their continuance. His only chance is to convince them that the evils have become intolerable."

When President Eliot was asked if he and President Roosevelt had talked on the subject of cleaner football he said they had talked about it at the last commencement, when Mr. Roosevelt was in Cambridge.

FORD HELD IN $5,000 BAIL.

Clerk Who Impersonated Dead Cousin Says He Lived in Constant Fear.

Joseph Ford, the Tax Department clerk who has held his job for nearly two years by impersonating his dead cousin, Frank A. Sliney, was to have been arraigned before Magistrate Mose in the Tombs Court yesterday. The Magistrate said that he had known the man's family for twenty-five years, and felt that he ought to keep out of the case. Ford, therefore, was taken before Justice Wyatt in Special Sessions. He was held in $5,000 bail for further examination.

Ford said yesterday he had never thought he was doing anything illegal, but that he expected to lose his job if discovered. Therefore, he said, his constant fear was that some of his acquaintances should drop into the Tax Department and unwittingly disclose his identity.

Ford said that he had work hard ever since he got the place, and had been taking care of his five daughters. One of these is married, he said, another has kept house for him, two are working, and the youngest, who is seventeen years old, is still at school. The three youngest, he said, never knew he had been in prison.

"I guess they have read about it by this time," he continued, breaking into tears. "And by now they must be all broken up over it. Oh, my poor children!"

He explained that his wife left him when he was discharged from Sing Sing in 1901, telling him that he would have to carry his burdens alone.

"And I did," he added. "For I loved my girls, and they loved me."

It was learned in the District Attorney's office, however, that the disclosure of Ford's double identity first came from one of the members of his own family, and that his violent temper while under the influence of liquor had something to do with it. Ford also told a story yesterday about the killing of a woman which led to his commitment to Sing Sing for nineteen years. His story was contradicted by the records of the evidence at the trial.

Acting District Attorney Nott put himself in communication yesterday with Edward A. Slattery, Collector of Assessments and Arrears in the Tax Department, to find out on whose recommendation Ford obtained a place under the name of Sliney. It was said yesterday that his employment was the direct result of a letter written on his behalf by a Tammany leader. This leader was not Percy Nagle, who is a distant relative of Ford, and is said to have helped him in other ways.

BROOKLYN VETERANS AT OUTS

Union League Club Bars the Corporal Tanner Reception.

The pleasant relations which had existed for years between the Brooklyn Union League Club and U. S. Grant Post, Grand Army of the Republic, are strained as a result of the "turning down" by the club of a reception to Corp. Jamee Tanner, the new head of the Grand Army of the Republic, which the post had planned to hold in the clubhouse. The veterans are indignant over the action of the club, of which several of them are members.

Grant Post had planned a luncheon and reception to Commander in Chief Tanner for Oct. 19, and a committee from the post waited on the Chairman of the club's House Committee. The veterans say they were told that they could have the use of the clubhouse. On Monday night, however, the post's committee was informed that it could have the luncheon at the club, but not the reception, to which it was intended to invite all war veterans in Brooklyn. The club did not care to have its house overrun by a "mob and rabble."

When the committee reported to the post last night there was great indignation and much talk of resignations from the club. The post has arranged to hold the luncheon and reception at the Hotel St. George.

WHOLESALE LOOTING OF CARS

Jersey City Gang Had Hidden $10,000 Worth of Plunder.

From all kinds of hiding places the police of Jersey City have recovered $10,000 worth of the goods taken from the Pennsylvania Railroad's freight cars by an organized gang of car breakers. Policeman Schelbe of the Greenville Police Precinct, whose complicity was accidentally discovered, confessed to Chief of Police Murphy yesterday that he had shared in the plunder. Charles Cartright, Michael McDonald, a brakeman; Horace M. Gregory, and Morris Greenburg, who are also in custody, say that Schelbe helped to break open the looted cars, but that he denies.

The police say they have found some of the plunder in the homes of all the men who are now under arrest. More of it was found in the houses of their neighbors, with whom it had been stored for want of room in their own places. Some was found in vacant lots, and a large quantity of bottled whisky was taken from the bottom of the canal, where it had been lowered till it could be conveniently taken elsewhere. The police believe that there are other hiding places yet to be uncovered. The goods thus far recovered consist of clocks, clothing, cigars, vases, pictures, bric-a-brac, silverware, shoes, whisky, and provisions.

A little Japanese boy played with a little Japanese girl. He was a commoner and she was the daughter of a Samurai. When the little boy returned from college he met a vision by an old altar. It was the little girl full grown. They had to deceive the old nobleman, her father, by exchanging letters in the hollow of a bamboo tree. Their love passages are the daintiest of pastels in prose. The Russo-Japanese war finally gave the hero the opportunity to win his lady-love.

ATHLETICS TURN IN AND WHIP THE GIANTS

3 to 0 the Score of the Second Baseball Championship Game.

PITCHER BENDER THE HERO

Philadelphia Boxman Mows Down New York's Batters to the Great Grief of Their 30,000 Supporters.

Thirty thousand leaden-hearted, sad-eyed baseball enthusiasts slowly filed out of the Polo Grounds late yesterday afternoon. With hearts pulsing with enthusiasm and vocal cords tense, they had gone forth to cheer their legion to conquest. But as the contest proceeded their temper ebbed and their blood cooled until at the last they saw their favorites fairly whipped, outgeneraled and outfought by an invading force of victors whom they yet resolve to conquer, but who promise them sturdy resistance to the bitter end.

For as the laws of baseball know naught of "form" or "past performances," Monday's magnificent victory by the Giants over the champion Athletics of the American League was reversed here yesterday by the identical score of Philadelphia's defeat—3 to 0. The Giants strove hard to repeat their stirring triumph of the day before, but, fight as tenaciously and aggressively as they could, they failed. Philadelphia showed her strength in a manner not to be misinterpreted, and gave New York plainly to understand that the battle for the National championship is to be one of slow inches, and will be fought to the death.

The contest of yesterday was essentially and almost exclusively one between pitchers. Bender, the tall, gaunt, swarthy aboriginal speed incubator, bent himself to his uttermost. New York found him unassailable. McGinnity, squat and compact in contrast, did his best, and, although he held the conquerors to a ridiculously small hitting score, he was lacking at crucial periods and failed to live up to what was demanded of him.

Bender had speed, control, curves, slants, twists, and everything else on the boxman's calendar. New York could do nothing with him. McGinnity had speed and a drop ball. The Athletics apparently favored speed, for as the fast balls were served to them they leaned back with their bats, and when it was required smashed the sphere to points where the best results were to be had. Bender's curves were deceiving. McGann, Mertes, and McGinnity said so after the game, and their evidence is to be accepted. McGann certainly qualifies as a judge, because he struck out thrice out of four times up. Mertes slashed the atmosphere on two occasions, as did the Iron Man, McGinnity.

In all Bender struck out nine men. He allowed three passes, but only four hits. McGinnity struck out only two of the invaders. He allowed no one to walk to first, but gave the Philadelphia batsmen five hits, which, when viewed as a total, look small, but which performed all the evil work required for the occasion. McGinnity lasted eight innings. In their half of the eighth the Athletics batted in a brace of runs. Napoleon McGraw summoned his marshals, viewed the field of conflict, and decided that it was about time for the Prussians to arrive. He substituted Ames as a forlorn hope, but the day was gone; the Giants had been vanquished.

All baseball lovers who could get inside the Polo Grounds went to the game to cheer and to yell. They wanted to make plenty of noise, and preparations to this end were carefully and plentifully made. The necessary vocal strength and paraphernalia for wrecking a nervous system were there, but the opportunity for doing the occasion justice was not.

The 30,000 spectators filled every corner and crack in the grounds. The grand stand was packed until those standing in the rear line were almost forced over the rails. Men and women clamored and climbed for seats. Women walked with utter disregard for conventionalities on the tops of seats and jumped from one bench to another in their struggle for points of vantage. The bleachers were a mass of excited humanity. Men stood, sat, and hung on the roofs of the stands, in the eaves, and even on the top of the fence. Then the crowd spread to the grounds and stood fifty deep in a solid line from the end of the right field bleachers around to the bleachers in left field. The police had their hands full.

Horns, whistles, bells, megaphones, rattles and everything boisterous known to fandom contributed to the noise before the game, and on one or two occasions in the contest, when it looked as though New York had a chance.

The players were on the grounds an hour before play. Most of their time was spent in posing for photographers. Half a dozen men with cameras danced about the grounds snapping everybody in sight. "Rube" Waddell, Philadelphia's eccentric pitcher, was kept particularly busy standing in front of the lenses. Snapshots were taken of all the New York players individually. Manager McGraw was obliged to face the click-shooters a dozen times. The crowd cheered McGraw and everybody else on the team, particularly Pitcher Mathewson, who walked alone from the clubhouse to the home bench. He was greeted with all sorts of compliments.

"Good boy, Matty; you're the king," cried a dozen men in front of the stand. They tried to get to Mathewson to shake his hand, but were pushed back by the hard-hearted police. McGraw was showered with praise.

"You're the boy for us. Go at 'em, Johnnie," the crowd shouted. "McGinnity is in good shape; we ought to win again to-day," he answered, smiling.

The Giants wore their black and white uniforms, spick and span, in contrast to the Athletics, who wore well-seasoned and torn suits of gray with maroon stockings. Connie Mack, however, said that his team cared nothing for display.

"What we want," he told a knot of admirers, "is the business end of the proposition. We want games. I'll put Bender in to-day and, unless I'm greatly mistaken, the prize is ours."

Bender, the Indian, looked on and smiled broadly and good naturedly.

"I'll do my best," he observed.

The band furnished by the New York management struck up "He Climbed So High That He Reached the Sky" when the New Yorks entered the field for the play, and followed that up with "Give My Regards to Broadway." Just before the game started everybody in the audience got up as a token of good luck for the Giants.

"All up!" yelled a basso in the front row of the grand stand. Everybody obeyed, and the Giants looked on, smiled, and waived their hands.

"Now, McGraw, go get 'em," bawled the basso. "You, Mike! You, Dan! You, Roger! You know how to do it. Fix 'em."

The New York team trotted into the field, and the game was on. The first inning rather indicated that the Athletics were not fearful of McGinnity, as they went after him with a vim. As the game proceeded McGinnity showed he was not equal to the occasion. Bender, on the other hand, took hold with confident determination. He grew stronger as play proceeded. New York had men on bases in six innings, and in the ninth, with two out had men on second and third, but on every occasion the required hits were not forthcoming, and at critical stages Bender was at his best. Philadelphia won the game in the third and eighth innings, when they hit the ball consecutively, and when two errors, one by Devlin and the other by Gilbert, contributed largely to the result.

The crowd was keyed to a high pitch when play began. The first ball that McGinnity pitched was a strike, and the fans howled, whistled, stamped, and tooted in delight at the decision of the umpire in calling it a good ball. From then on the crowd just ached to help the Giants out, and were on the alert for an opportunity to rise in their might and yell destruction to the Athletics, but they didn't get a good chance.

Bender's first pitched ball was also a strike. As he stepped into the box, chewing a large wad of gum, he was greeted with pseudo Indian yells from all over the grounds.

"Heap much chief; get 'em, bump, heap good, to-day," yelled a man in the grand stand.

The crowd took up the cry and yelled "Heap much bumps, Bender."

But with racial stolidity the Indian looked straight ahead, and then went to work with a vengeance.

After having a strike called on him, Bresnahan, the first man up for the Giants, caused a volcanic eruption of enthusiasm by whacking the ball to deep left centre and into the crowd for a two-base hit. As the sturdy Roger raced around first base the crowd jumped to its feet and yelled like mad. The noise didn't subside for a full minute. With Bresnahan perched on second, looking at Bender with a smile of satisfaction, the chances for New York seemed rather bright. All sorts of encouragement was thrown at the team. After Browne had been retired the yell continued:

"Go at 'em now. Do it again. Win the game right here in the first inning," cried a horde of excited enthusiasts.

Donlin walked to the plate confidently and conscientiously, but he was found lacking.

"Now, Mike, hit 'er out! Kill it!" the crowd urged.

But Mike didn't connect safely. Then the crowd pinned its faith in McGann.

"Here's your chance, Danny; blow in that run" the crowd yelled.

McGann, however, also failed. The best he could do was to take three mighty lunges at the atmosphere. Then he flung his bat down in disgust.

The Giants Again Fail.

In the second inning the Giants passed another opportunity to score. Dahlen went to first on four wide balls. Devlin, who followed, was begged to do something with the ball. Dahlen stole second, and the crowd yelled like maniacs. Devlin reached first on a pass, and then a double steal was attempted. As the two men darted down the base lines the crowd roared with delight. The racket was terrific, but Schreck was cool and collected. He threw accurately to Lave Cross, who tagged Dahlen at third. The other outs were made in quick order, and New York was retired again without a run.

Philadelphia threw a wet blanket over the fans' enthusiasm in the third when it scored a run, largely on account of an error by Gilbert. Schreck lined the ball past McGann, and the crowd groaned. Bender, with exquisite skill, sacrificed. Schreck was sent to third by another out when Lord swung his club against one of McGinnity's straight balls; the leather went hurtling past Dahlen and letting Schreck race home with the first tally of the game.

New York again missed an opportunity to score in the fourth, when Donlin got his first hit. McGann was told to do something.

"Hit it, Dan; break it in two," the crowd roared.

But McGann again failed, and repeated his performance of mutilating the atmosphere. It was then put up to Mertes.

"Paste it, Sandow!"

Mertes tried his best, but he, too, cut three wide swaths in the air and retired a disgusted man on strikes. Donlin, becoming impatient, resolved to try to steal second. He started, but again Schreck was faultless with his throwing arm, and nailed the runner by six feet.

Again in the seventh New York had a chance to score, but missed the mark. Donlin answered the crowd's vociferous request by driving the ball to deep centre for a double.

"Here's where we tie the score," yelled the crowd, encouraged by Donlin's good stick work.

But the spectators were again doomed to disappointment, and quickly subsided and fell back into their seats, a disgusted lot, when the side was retired without further ado.

Down Again in the Eighth.

In the eighth inning, after Philadelphia had increased her score to three, the crowd, game to the finish, was encouraged by another false start. Devlin started the inning with a clean single.

"Now we'll win," bellowed the fans.

They were wrong. Gilbert might have sacrificed, but instead hit to the outfield and was out. Strang went to the bat for McGinnity, and the crowd shouted:

"Now's your chance, Sammy!"

Strang failed woefully by swinging all around the ball, but not close enough to touch it. He retired, crestfallen, with a strike-out against him. The other two outs were also quickly made.

In the last inning, as the crowd started to leave, the faithful continued to root, and a magnificent opportunity was offered at least to escape a shut-out, but when the pinch came New York failed. As Donlin walked to the plate for his last chance at the ball the crowd applauded wildly.

"Don't quit, Mike. We'll beat 'em yet!" they shouted.

Donlin smashed a fast one to Murphy, who made a conspicuously blundersome fumble. McGann, who followed, was told that he was bound to hit the ball. He was lucky to get to first on balls. With two men on bases and no one out, the crowd gathered courage. A mighty yell went up, and the Giants were spurred on to their best.

"We tie the score; we'll get the game yet," yelled some of the last to quit.

But the Giants again failed. Donlin and McGann were advanced a base each, but could get no further. Bender, with magnificent coolness and equilibrium, uncoiled himself and threw his twisters more calmly than ever. Mertes, Dahlen, and Devlin were retired on easy chances.

When the game was over Connie Mack ran from the players' bench and grasped the Indian pitcher by the hand. Bender smiled with delight and put his arm about his manager's shoulder. The Athletics were a happy lot, but before the group of Philadelphians who came to New York to see the game could surround them they had put themselves behind the stand and were off. The Giants also quickly ran for cover. The crowd attempted to surround them, but they ran quickly to their quarters and disappeared.

The Game in Detail.

The great crowd was rather impatient for the game to begin when McGinnity walked from the players' bench to the pitcher's box. The "Iron Man" got an ovation. Hartsel was ready with his bat, and at 3:02 o'clock the first ball was delivered across the plate. It was called a strike. The second ball, however, seemed to suit "Topsy," and he sent it safely to left field. Lord was more than willing, but the best he could do was to hit to Dahlen, forcing Hartsel. Gilbert threw rather wildly to McGann, or a double play would have been the result. Lord got no further than first, as Davis put up a high fly to Devlin, and Lave Cross was easily disposed of by Dahlen to McGann.

Bresnahan gave much encouragement to the supporters of the champion New Yorks by hitting to the left-field fence for two bases, but Browne's attempt to bunt was very weak, and he sent a fly directly into Bender's hands. As Donlin walked to the plate he was greeted with cries from the bleachers, "A home run, Mike," but he hit up a high ball. It belonged to Murphy, but Monte Cross backed after it and clasped it. McGann was urged hard to do something, but the Captain of the champions struck out.

Two well-taken fly catches, one by Donlin and the other by Browne, the latter running into Gilbert's territory, and Murphy's out by McGinnity to McGann quickly disposed of the Athletics in the second inning. The local men did better, but failed to score. Mertes began by striking out, but Dahlen, after two strikes and three balls had been called, was sent to first on four bad balls. He drew the ball to first several times in an effort to steal, and the suspicious motions of Bender caused McGann to appeal to the umpire. The Philadelphian was not cautioned. Dahlen at last stole second. Devlin waited patiently at the bat, and also reached first on called balls. As was generally expected, the base runners attempted a double steal, but Dahlen was caught at third by a very close margin. Gilbert left Devlin at second by being thrown out by M. Cross to Davis.

The Athletics began their run getting in the third inning. A bad throw by Gilbert contributed materially. Schreck hit in the direction of McGinnity, the ball carroming off McGinnity's hand toward Gilbert. The latter had plenty of time to catch the runner at first, but threw so wildly that McGann was just able to stop the ball with one hand. Bender's sacrifice, which was the only one of the game, advanced Schreck to second, and he reached third on Hartsel's out, Gilbert to McGann. Lord was equal to the emergency, and hit safely between second base and short-stop, and Schreck tallied. The New Yorks went out in one, two, three order. McGinnity struck out, Bresnahan popped up a fly to Davis, and Browne was similarly retired by M. Cross.

Lave Cross was the first batsman for the Americans in the fourth inning. Gilbert disposed of him on a fly. Seybold's fly was caught by Donlin close to the crowd in centre field, and Murphy failed to connect with the ball in three attempts. Donlin set the crowd to waving flags and shouting by hitting safely to right field. It was an encouraging start, but when McGann and Mertes struck out in succession the enthusiasm subsided flat. Dahlen tried the waiting game on the Indian pitcher, but when Donlin saw that the short stop's chance of hitting the ball was slim he made a dash for second. Schreck made a fine throw to M. Cross, and the runner was declared out.

Not a man reached first base on either side in the fifth inning, and only one ball was hit to the outfield. Dahlen threw out both M. Cross and Schreck at first base and McGinnity did the same thing with Bender. Dahlen's fly to centre was caught by Lord; L. Cross disposed of Devlin at first, and Gilbert struck out.

It was another class of plain baseball in the sixth inning, the batsmen going out in regular order and on easy plays.

After L. Cross, Seybold, and Murphy had been retired consecutively in the seventh McGinnity was greeted with cheers and the waving of flags as he walked to the players' bench. Even the members of the band arose from the ground and saluted the "Iron Man."

As Bender stood ready to deliver the ball to Donlin in the seventh inning Indian yells came from all parts of the field. Donlin bunted the first ball, but it was foul. A ball was then called, but the next delivery of Bender was hit to centre field for two bases. The crowd sprang up, and when McGann went to the bat the noise was deafening. The big first baseman for the third time struck out, but shouts of encouragement to the local men did not cease. Mertes sent a rather long fly to right field, and Donlin reached third on the catch, Seybold's relay of the ball to M. Cross being fumbled by the latter. Dahlen ended the suspense by fouling out to Schreck.

The eighth inning proved to be fatal to the New Yorks. With two strikes and three balls called on Monte Cross, a loud-voiced enthusiast shouted from the grand stand "Don't let him get away from you, Joe," and Cross struck out. Schreck made a lucky base hit, the ball striking McGinnity sharply on his pitching hand and rolling away to short stop. Bender's high foul fly was beautifully taken by Browne back of first base, and just at the edge of the crowd. With Schreck on first and two out, Hartsel sent the ball to the left field fence for two bases, and Schreck made for the plate. Mertes made a good throw to Devlin, but the latter threw wildly to Bresnahan, who otherwise would have had an easy out, and the runner was safe. In the meantime Hartsel had reached third, and Lord sent him home by a single to left field.

Devlin started off for the New Yorks in the eighth inning with a safe hit, but Gilbert was caught out in centre field, and Strang, who batted for McGinnity, struck out. A fumble by M. Cross gave Bresnahan first, but Browne was easily thrown out at first. Ames supplanted McGinnity in the ninth inning. He gave the first batsman, L. Cross, a base on balls, and Cross reached third by good base running on Murphy's single to left. M. Cross then struck out, and Schreck was retired at first. A fumble by Murphy placed Donlin at first, and he was advanced by a base on balls to McGann. After Mertes had been retired Dahlen advanced both runners on his out at first, but Devlin finished the game by being thrown out by Murphy to Davis.

ELEVEN FOR HALL OF FAME.

Result of This Year's Election at University Heights.

The tabulation of the balloting for places in the Hall of Fame at University Heights was practically completed yesterday. Two ballots had not been received, but it was thought that these could have but little effect upon the decisions.

The list of statesmen was completed first. There were twenty-six in the list, but only two, John Quincy Adams and James Madison, rose above the necessary 51 votes. In the "Septimi" class there were no winners. Here again 51 votes were necessary. The highest was Daniel Boone, with 35 votes.

John Paul Jones, under the head of "Famous Americans of Foreign Birth," received 53 votes, while under the head of Statesmen, Alexander Hamilton was chosen with 87 votes. Under the subdivision head, Scientists, Louis Agassiz passed with 82 votes. The only woman nominee in the Scientists' class was Maria Mitchell, who was elected, receiving 47 votes.

The tabulation of ballots was completed in the afternoon by the counting of the votes of famous American women, one of whom has already been referred to. Only 87 ballots were cast, eight of the electors having asked to be excused from voting for the women. Chancellor MacCracken would not discuss this refusal.

In the sub-class, Authors, no one was chosen, although many were called. The highest vote was for Louise May Alcott, who received 37. Others on the list were Helen Hunt Jackson, Abigail Adams, and Maria Gowen Brooks.

Two were elected in the sub-division teachers. They were Mary Lyon, founder of the Mount Holyoke Seminary, with 58 votes, and Emma Willard, who founded the Willard School at Troy, with 50. In the sub-division of home and social workers there were thirteen names, but none passed. Nor were there any winners in the Septimi class. Sarah Bache, daughter of Benjamin Franglin and famous for her work among the soldiers during the Revolution, received 7 votes.

Yesterday's names, added to those of Monday, make a choice of eleven names during the election. Another election will be held in 1910.

MR. JUDSON ON POOLS.

Usually They Are Dishonest, He Says, but His Wasn't.

Cyrus Field Judson was again a witness yesterday in the suit by Franklin, Scott & Co. in the Supreme Court against Joseph H. Hoadley and Joseph Leiter. He declared that both Hoadley and Leiter were in the International Power stock pool with him after Dec. 11, 1901, when, the defendants contend, the pool came to an end so far as they were concerned.

In cross-examination, counsel for Mr. Leiter asked the witness if pools were not usually formed to create fictitious values for stocks.

"Well, yes," answered Judson, "but it wasn't so in this case. I honestly believed this stock was worth $250 a share, and dealt in it on its merits. I advised my friends to buy it in this belief."

The defense's case will open to-day.

EX-MAGISTRATE SAW HARLEM RIVER TRAGEDY

Herman Kudlich Says Hahn Begged Him to Save Mrs. Duer.

WAS A MOMENT TOO LATE

She Leaped from the Boat and Drowned Before Help Could Reach Her.

Capt. Wendel of the High Bridge Police Station received a letter from former Magistrate Herman C. Kudlich last evening, which in a measure clears up the case of Mrs. Kate Duer of 182 East Seventy-eighth Street, who was drowned in the Harlem River Monday afternoon. The letter seems to exonerate Charles Hahn, the young man with whom she was rowing and who was afterward arrested.

Suspicion was not aroused against Hahn, who was a friend of Mrs. Duer and a companion of her husband, until Mrs. Duer's mother, Mrs. Mary Messner of 233 East Seventy-fifth Street, heard of the young woman's death. She told Capt. Wendel that her daughter had not lived happily with her husband, and that judging by the threats he had made she believed that he and Hahn had conspired to kill Mrs. Duer.

Hahn and Duer were locked up over night, and yesterday afternoon Assistant District Attorney Chadwick examined a number of witnesses at the High Bridge Station House. Their evidence was principally hearsay, and the parents of the girl reiterated their story about the threats of the husband, but nothing further was learned.

Shortly after the examination Capt. Wendel received this letter:

Oct. 10, 1905.

To Captain of Police, High Bridge Police Station:

Dear Sir: According to article in to-day TIMES, Charles Hahn is under arrest on a technical charge of being a suspicious person. I happened to be on the Harlem River yesterday in a gig (Nassau Boat Club) when the girl was drowned, and reached the spot a fraction of a minute too late. The shouts of the man attracted my attention, and he begged me to save the girl, but by the time I reached the point she was drawn under the bow of the scow by the strong current, and nothing could be done.

The launch spoken of in the article came up a little later. I am under the impression that I saw Hahn and the woman, whom I could not identify, at the "White House," a floating boat house, between Washington and High Bridge, on my way up the river ten or fifteen minutes earlier. Inquiries ought to be made there. Whether he had two oars in the boat or only one, I don't know, as I saw only one, and shouted to him to use it. He did not seem to understand me, and then I shouted to him in German, when he, but too late, picked up one oar. Even then he did not know what to do with it, and drifted down the river shouting until picked up by the launch.

I may add that the man's conduct and action did not, in my opinion, indicate criminal intent, though I think he could have saved her if he had exercised his judgment more, and done less shouting. HERMAN C. KUDLICH.

Capt. Wendell regards the letter as conclusive, and probably will discharge the prisoners.

Vogel Brothers Fall Overcoats.

Medium Length Models.

It's not every artist that can do justice with a pen sketch to a Vogel Brothers garment.

But the one who sketched this caught that indefinable phase of dignity and style of our clothes that's so hard to describe and so easily revealed by these medium length overcoats.

They're portrayed to a dot in this cut alongside, which was drawn direct from the garment, and it shows all the knacks of style these overcoats possess:

Here are some examples:

Luxurious Black Silk-Lined Overcoats at $18.

Medium length box models of black unfinished worsteds, silk lined to edge of lapels. We know no custom tailor who would make such a garment under $25.

MR. SHAW TO THE BANKERS.

Mr. SHAW, according to his own statement, can never again address the American Bankers' Association as Secretary of the Treasury. In that fact rather than in any utterance of his as published yesterday lies any disappointment at what he chose to say. His friends, of course, and even his opponents and critics, if he has any, can but echo his sentiments regarding the high duties and responsibilities of the banking profession. That dividends shall be satisfactory to shareholders is not, the Secretary well says, all that the public has a right to expect of the discharge of bankers' duty to the people at large, as well as to their more direct constituency. The bankers must be condemned for policies which result in public disaster, and must not rely excessively upon assistance from the Treasury Department in hard places created by their own acts. We agree. We even extend the saying to the Treasury administration. All that the Secretary says it is right to expect of bankers it is even more justifiable to expect of the National financial executive. He has no duty to shareholders to cloud his vision and hamper his acts. Nothing prevents his applying the teachings of experience to the exigencies of the moment, and it would have been gratifying to have heard more from the Secretary regarding the practical effect of our National laws in producing conditions which are now absorbing the attention and enhancing the anxieties of all bankers.

The Secretary is peculiarly qualified to speak upon the topics upon which he preferably would have been heard, for none of his predecessors has been more successful or ingenious in averting the results of situations which the laws have promoted rather than averted. It was under the pressure of necessity that Mr. SHAW widely extended the use of second-rate bonds—meaning bonds other than National—as security for Treasury deposits. It was no act of bankers which produced the conditions which caused the Secretary's action in 1902. Neither is it any act of bankers which now, as in most years, surrounds the movement of the crops with unnecessary difficulty. It is not the bankers who are to be condemned for the policies causing recurrent friction in these and other respects and which have been repeatedly alleviated by the Secretary's action. The bankers are not responsible for laws limiting bank circulation to the volume of the National debt, and causing fluctuations in the volume of currency according to the price of bonds rather than according to the requirements of business. Bankers did not enact laws preventing the enlargement of bank circulation by forbidding its retirement, except at a limited rate, thereby penalizing its issue by requiring its maintenance when no longer wanted. Bankers are not responsible for the substitution of bonds for gold as a banking basis, or for the maintenance of legal-tender qualities in fiat paper long after the cause and excuse have disappeared.

These are but a few of the defects of our mongrel monetary and currency systems for which the Executive and the Congress are responsible. We have not a word to say against the sentiments expressed, but may be excused for remarking that the most was not made of an opportunity for saying something else, something more practical and bearing more immediately upon the needs of the day, which will be the needs of many coming years unless some public man constitutes himself the leader of thought and action upon the reforms demanded. Upon some of them the Secretary has well expressed himself in his State papers—notably in his position that financial troubles often come from lack of statutory enforcement of expressed policies, which is the exact position regarding the redemption of silver in gold. His recent address before the Ohio bankers also calls for approval as marking an advance from his previous ridicule of a "rubber" currency. Ample recognition of the Secretary's position in these respects is the best proof that these remarks are meant in no carping spirit. But progress in these respects is over such a thorny path that it is impossible not to regret any lost opportunity, and this seems to be one.

THE WRONG TO MASSACHUSETTS.

It is an interesting coincidence that the President's announcement that he will not press on Congress his desire for a revision of the tariff should appear on the same day that the Associated Board of Trade of Boston makes its earnest appeal for free raw materials, especially for the repeal of the taxes on hides, lumber, coal, and iron.

The President thinks he cannot possibly carry tariff revision and railroad rate legislation at once. He prefers to concentrate his influence on the latter. We are not surprised. Railroad rates are not a party matter; the tariff distinctly is. He cannot unite his party on rate legislation, but not only is he unable to unite his party for tariff revision, he would split it if he undertook that task. Most of the ardent protectionists—practically all their leaders in Congress and in the lobby—are Republicans "for revenue only." They would sacrifice their nominal party allegiance without hesitation rather than give up a penny of the advantage the tariff gives them. They say to Mr. ROOSEVELT in substance: "We recognize you as leader only while you protect our interests. Cease to do that and we shall fight you as openly as we should fight a Democrat." For such a fight Mr. ROOSEVELT has no stomach. He will contend with the party leaders when he is sure of winning, not otherwise. His position is not unlike that of Mayor MCCLELLAN—his devotion to independent conviction stops where party dictation requires. Within these rather narrow limits each of these public men accomplishes certain good; if the good lies beyond the limits, they give up.

But the demand of the Associated Board of Trade is dictated by economic needs and by rights of considerable and real importance. The board represents twenty-three affiliated organizations. They are engaged in manufactures chiefly and their establishments are scattered all over New England. Look for a moment at the materials of industry from which they ask that the tax shall be lifted. Not one is a product that needs the slightest protection in order to secure almost complete command of the home market, while some of them are under the control of combinations in the nature of monopolies. Hides are a by-product of the Beef Trust. Iron is largely in the hands of the Steel Corporation. Coal is primarily controlled by the anthracite corporations, which have the power, if not the form, of a combination. Lumber, so far from needing protection, is an essential resource which has been wantonly wasted under the influence of the tariff, and the Federal Government, with some of the State Governments, is spending very large sums and reserving vast areas in a not very promising effort to repair the waste. Both as lumber and as the material for the manufacture of paper it is a very important element in exports that can be and should be immensely increased. Taxes on these things are direct, heavy, retarding, and unjust taxes on American industries, and are in obvious restraint of trade both domestic and foreign. They are taxes which necessarily increase the cost of living to the entire people and to every class, and most to the classes least able to bear the needless burden.

The industries and the people of New England feel these taxes with peculiar directness. That section has no coal. Its water power is not sufficient to its requirements. Its iron is outclassed by that of the West and the Lake Superior regions. Its forests are gone. It no longer produces hides. It is still an active, energetic, enterprising section, but its relative prosperity is steadily decreasing. This is largely due to the arbitrary taxation of its materials of industry and its fuel. New England has a sectional grievance. It is oppressed for the profit of other sections. But the remedy for its grievance, the removal of its oppression, would be a direct and enduring advantage to the entire Nation.

NEY AND BONAPARTE.

For some years now the conviction has been growing on the Continent of Europe that all Americans are both very rich and very credulous. An American, by the force of the term, both has vast possessions and is very easily parted from them. Thirteen years ago or thereabout this conception was most amusingly illustrated by the Duke of VERAGUA, the lineal descendant of CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, who was entertained by this municipality for a period of weeks, living at American expense like a fighting cock, according to our vulgar locution, or, perhaps according to his own, like one of those fighting bulls which it was his avocation to breed. When our war with Spain broke out, it appeared that this blue-blooded Castilian had a grievance against us, inasmuch as we had not bestowed upon him a State or two for his maintenance. He assured Spain, early in 1898, that we were a stingy people.

But the Duke of VERAGUA had at least a sentimental claim upon this hemisphere, even though he did not find it practically collectible. What kind of claim the numerous descendants of Marshal NEY, if they are so numerous as they pretend to be, consider themselves to have upon the present Secretary of the American Navy is more than one can possibly make out. Apparently all that these mendicant descendants of the great Marshal, if in fact they be his descendants, knew about the Secretary of the Navy was that they had seen his name in the newspapers, and that that name was BONAPARTE. The generalization that being an American he was both fabulously rich and incredibly "easy," seem to have leapt at once to all their minds, and at least induced each one of them severally to invest a five-cent stamp on the promise and potency of abundant returns. The individual American who happened also to be a BONAPARTE they fondly hoped would render them that support which France, under the half dozen different forms of government which have prevailed in turn since 1815, had strictly declined to accord them.

As, indeed, why should France accord it? NEY may have been "the bravest of the brave," as doubtless he was one of the bravest and most efficient of NAPOLEON'S Marshals. But the plain fact was that he had taken service, with his eyes open, under the successors of his Emperor, and that he had deliberately abjured his new engagements when his Emperor reappeared. Nobody who recalls GEROME'S reproduction of the scene of his execution, the man who had commanded divisions with glory backed up against a wall and done to death by a detailed squad in the gray of a misty morning, can fail to have some human sympathy with him:

Sunt lachrymae rerum, et mentem mortalia tangunt,

So nobody, on either side of the ocean, excepting the hoodlums of Tappan who have destroyed his monument, fails now to sympathize with Major ANDRE. But that does not alter the truth that the law, in each case, was justly applied to the facts. ANDRE was a spy. NEY was a traitor.

But what mainly makes us wonder at these impecunious and importunate descendants of the Marshal is that they should have applied to Mr. BONAPARTE to support them, upon the ground that it was to help NAPOLEON that their ancestor, if he was their ancestor, broke his faith and became a traitor. If there be any American citizen who, more than another, has occasion to execrate the memory of NAPOLEON, it is that grandnephew of his who is at present the Secretary of the United States Navy. And this for reasons which are very commonly understood in the United States, but apparently not so well understood in France. To be sure, the descendants of Marshal NEY are not especially "charged with knowledge" of the relations of the Bonapartes and the Pattersons. But when, by their applications for his charity, they charge the Secretary of the American Navy with crass ignorance of the history of France, it might be supposed that they would take the trouble to acquire some knowledge of the reasons why he should be indisposed to come to their relief. And, of course, all these remarks take much too serious a view of the investment by certain dead beats in France of a simple five-cent postage stamp on the longest of long chances.

MODERN BASEBALL.

The playing of the series of games between the respective champions of the two professional leagues of baseball gives in some ways a better notion of the modern development of the game than the contests which resulted in choosing them champions. In other ways, in at least in one other way, not so good. As to each other these two teams are at the beginning of the season, since they have not encountered one another as wholes before. Hence the absence of that element of interest which the learned would call the psychological and the unlearned the poker-playing interest. By the end of the season, among members of the same league, the pitchers have learned something of the personal equation of the batsmen with whom they do battle, and the batsmen have more or less "got on to the curves" of the pitchers. But these two teams confront each other for the first time, as it were, in a primeval Eden of baseball. Of course the advantage of this novelty is mainly on the side of the pitchers, and adds its sum of more to that which had too much, seeing that scientific and professional baseball is too much of a "pitchers' game" without it.

That is the lesson which the rusty old-time "rooter," who has not seen any baseball, say, since WARD'S "Giants" won the deciding series from MCGRAW'S "Orioles," mainly derives from the observation of these latest struggles. The pitcher is really of too much account, and the rest of the "outfit" of too little. They are the pawns and he is the queen. Rather he is the matador, the primo tenore, even the prima donna. His power, to borrow the magniloquent language of the eighteenth century about that of the British Crown, "has increased, is increasing, and ought to be diminished." MATHEWSON distinctly won Monday's game. BENDER as distinctly won yesterday's. The other players, absolute perfection as they almost were in their places in the field or behind the bat, had no more chance to affect the result than the ball-bearing umpire, not so much as the umpire would have if he did not go in wholesome fear of that personal violence which might possibly be advantageously introduced as an element into the criticism of life insurance companies in the interest of the policy holders.

In a way, the pitcher deserves all that comes to him. His skill is marvelous. Batting and fielding show no great advance over a decade ago, being then already almost perfection. But pitching is a new art. The peaceable citizen would as soon think of standing to be shot at by a small calibre rifle as by one of these new-fangled ballistas of a pitcher, with his tremendous muzzle velocity and his correspondingly flat trajectory, to say nothing of those curves which the spectator from the grand stand cannot see, but which the deluded batsman grievously feels as he furiously smites the air where the ball is not. It is perfectly plain, in spite of the pretensions to the contrary, that it is all a matter of luck, when the batsman does hit the ball, whether it shall go before him or ascend like a rocket over his right shoulder and alight on the roof of the grand stand. Art and man's device are not equal either to "placing" it or to "keeping it down." Therein the art of batting in baseball is different from the art of batting in cricket, and inferior to it. Curious to say, the complaint in cricket is that the batting is getting so much the better of the bowling that a crack bat can stay in all day and accumulate hundreds, while in baseball one base hit in a game is rather a good record for the player. Various devices have been mooted to subdue the tyranny of the bat in cricket. But there is one very simple device which would restore the batsman in baseball to his rightful place and reduce the pitcher to his. That is simply to furnish the batsman with a flat bat, in place of the round broomstick now forced upon him. It need not be of so liberal a breadth, of course, as the cricket bat. In fact, it need have no greater width than the diameter of the present ineffectual club. But if it were flat, it would enable a batsman who knew how to use it to keep the ball down, and to place it, and would thus put him on a more equal footing with the quick-firing artillerist who bombards him than the footing he is on at present.

And injury and outrage; and, when night
Darkens the streete, then wander forth the sons

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Injurious, and Yet Necessary.

It is a little difficult to tell from what Dr. H. W. WILEY, the Agricultural Department expert, said about canned foods in his address before the Medical Association whether he intended a general condemnation of all such foods or only a condemnation of most of them as they are now prepared with the assistance of various chemical preservatives, all more or less injurious to health when used for long periods. Opinions, even those of the experts, differ widely on this subject. The companies engaged in the preparation of these foods never have any difficulty in finding presumably reputable and competent authorities to commend their wares as innocuous, but their conclusions are vehemently traversed by many besides Dr. WILEY, who apparently speak with as much both of honesty and knowledge. In the uncertainty thus created the layman is apt to fall back on his conviction that the conditions of modern life, with its populations so much concentrated in groups ranging from large to enormous, make the universal consumption of fresh food practically impossible and the consumption of large amounts of food in one way or another preserved from its natural decomposition a practical necessity of the time. We all know that none of the devices by which meats, vegetables, and fruits can be carried long distances and kept for long periods improves their quality as judged by the palate, we know that many of them seriously deteriorate them, and we suspect that some of them are actively harmful, but the fact remains that our great cities could hardly be fed without the help of the chemist, the canner, and the various forms of cold storage, and none of us is prepared to accept the restrictions of diet that would be imposed by an abandonment of the dubious "improvements" which science has brought into the provision trade. That being the case, would not Dr. WILEY and his fellows be more profitably employed if, instead of casting the gloom of their criticism over all the methods of food preservation, they told us more about the safest of these methods and then devoted their large talents to the bettering of the present best? Unless the movement from the cities to the country assumes much greater proportions than there is the slightest present probability that it ever will assume, humanity is under the sternest of compulsions to adapt its internal machinery to the pretty constant use of foods that have passed through a good many hands, and have been a good while in doing it. The transition period will be painful and expensive, but what must be must be, and man has more than once in his long history endured greater changes and successfully adjusted himself to conditions that killed their millions and threatened to exterminate the race. He can do it again, and the more help he gets from wise and disinterested experts the easier the task will be.

Electricity as Used in Medicine.

Irritated by the claim of a Western quack to have proved by a series of silly experiments the identity of "life" and "electricity," an eminent physician made the other day the decidedly startling statement that "electricity, beyond its use to heat a bit of platinum wire for cautery, is of no definite therapeutic value, except for its psychic, or suggestive, effect on the hysteric and neurasthenic. Honest men," he added, "are fooled by the talk about the wonders of electricity, and dishonest men utilize the delusions of their betters for the fooling of the credulous." When asked if the statement could be printed he qualified it a bit and warned his astonished hearer that trouble might follow. His considered remarks were to about this effect: A respectable number of respectable doctors are convinced of the utility of electricity in many conditions. They are rather hazy in their ideas, to be sure, and unable to tell what happens when they apply the mysterious agent, but they are none the less sure of its good effects. Denial of the soundness of their views would raise a howl of pain, and, as for the charlatans who do their swindling with the help of elaborate electrical apparatus, of course they would be frantic with rage if the source of their easy profits were cut off. Yet it is true that there is little definite knowledge on the subject. High tension currents do seem to exercise paralyzed muscles and to prevent wasting while waiting for interrupted nerve connections to be restored. There is also some evidence that such currents may help to restore the functional activity of nerves affected by neuritis, but this is very uncertain ground. The vast literature on the medical use of electricity is empiricism, almost pure. The corpuscular stream from high frequency currents does increase chemical action, but it is rarely used for this purpose. The Roentgen and similar rays are not electricity, though elicited by it. The psychic effect, however, is enormous in properly selected cases, and right here is where there exists a wide border zone where quackery and honesty overlap, and the difficult question of motive becomes controlling in the formation of judgment. All use of suggestion seems to involve an element of deception or misstatement, but the results are often excellent and such as can be secured in no other way. This is a novel presentation of a puzzling situation, and it seems to deserve some discussion.

Overwhelmed by a Big Wave.

With only ninety-seven indictments against him for the misuse of school funds, Mr. NEWTON C. DOUGHERTY, the Peoria banker, maintains a beautiful equanimity, but there is a note of sorrow, as it were, in his statement that he "supposes" the persecution of which he is the victim "must be ascribed to the wave of reform which seems to be sweeping over the country." It seems to us that Mr. DOUGHERTY imposes a cruel strain upon "errors of bookkeeping" when he expects them to bear the burden of a shortage of $750,000, but we incline to the belief that he is right about the existence of a reform wave that is making trouble for many, and is going to make trouble for more, men of easygoing habits in the use of other people's money. The Peoria financier has not been convicted yet, and therefore it is far from our intention to assume that he is guilty as charged, but things do look a bit black for him just now, what with the wave of reform to which he so disapprovingly alludes and the inconvenient memories of men who know more about bookkeeping than Mr. DOUGHERTY does.

MR. ROCKEFELLER'S TEXT.

Maybe He Will Regard This One as Second Best, Anyhow.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was doubtless one of many readers to be amused at "Rockefeller's Text," "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want!" I am sure that you must he mistaken as to his pet text, which I am certain must be, "To him that hath shall he given, and from him that hath not, even that which he hath shall he taken away." Be sure you are making no mistakes when you publicly quote the Scriptural texts of such a very great man and humanitarian as Mr. Rockefeller. The "public" has no reason, it is true, to be fond of Mr. Rockefeller, nor to honor his methods of achieving greatness, still the "public" is fair-minded as a rule and regrets to see him misquoted in any case. The "public" already knows considerable about Mr. Rockefeller and is daily learning more, but it knows enough now to be reasonably sure that his pet text must have been misquoted, as previously published in your columns. I merely call your attention to the probable error.

S. PALMER BYRNES.

Brooklyn, Oct. 9, 1905.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I can only conclude that John D. Rockefeller is morally blind. That he has ruined financially and broken the courage and spirit of many men there is no doubt. Now he is advertising himself and posing as a saint, weeping in his old age at his own eloquence, and hurstling with "good will toward all men." Such sentiment make those who know what his methods have been sad! However, I suppose he will continue to forget those he has injured and give millions to those he has not injured.

ONE OF THE INJURED.

SACRIFICES A FORTUNE.

German Count Marries Washerwoman's Daughter.

The Berlin correspondent of The London Express, writing under date of Sept. 25, says that a sensation has been caused in German aristocratic circles by Count Francis Erbach marrying the daughter of a washerwoman who lived in a village near the family estates of Erbach.

The Count, who came of age in December last, is the eldest son and heir to the Erbach family, which is one of the oldest in Europe, and his bride is a girl of remarkable beauty. Finding insurmountable obstacles placed in the way of his marriage, he took his bride to London, where the ceremony was performed a few days ago.

His romantic attachment has cost him much. By the house laws of the Erbach family, every male member has to receive the consent of the head of the house before he can marry. This Count Francis failed to do, and at a meeting of the adult male members of the house this morning it was decided to depose him from his position as heir to the estates, and to cut him off with an allowance of £200 a year.

"Mankind's Epitome."

From The Columbia State.

The Boston Transcript has discovered a point of similarity between Roosevelt and Napoleon. Other admirers of Mr. Roosevelt had already seen in him traits that recalled the best qualities of Alexander, Julius Caesar, Hannibal, and Kaiser Wilhelm, and still others have compared with him some of the greatest of explorers, such as Columbus, Magellan, Coronado, La Salle, and Livingstons, while others have found him to resemble such critics as Matthew Arnold and Sainte Beuve, historians like Mommsen and Gibbon, and mighty hunters like Nimrod and Girard, the lion killer. And so it goes—not one, but all mankind's epitome.

A Canadian Estimate.

From The Ottawa Free Press.

Theodore Roosevelt has had an exciting year. He has had a continuous fight with the bears and wolves in Washington and for a rest ventured among the wolves and bears and rattlesnakes of the Rockies. He has brought to a close a great war and survived the attacks of an army of newspaper correspondents. As a diversion he ventured into the depths of the ocean in a submarine. He is now about to visit New Orleans, despite the yellow fever epidemic, but he is not here enough to tackle American football. There is a limit to the risks that even "Teddy" the Talkative will run.

Missouri's Fruit Revenues.

From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Missouri's shipment of surplus fruit last year is reported at $2,559,600, of which strawberries are credited with $966,000, apples standing next at $488,000. Missouri's big red strawberry is a fine revenue producer.

A Moral Tied to a Tail.

But still he beats the man who lies

JUDICIAL RENOMINATIONS.

Why Justice Ingraham Should Be Renamed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, "Good Memory," has a memory not quite good enough. He forgets everything that makes against his contention. It is true that each political party has not always renominated good Judges. But the practice has been steadily improving. In 1903 both parties nominated Judge Denis O'Brien for re-election to the Court of Appeals. In 1904, in the excitement of a Presidential election, both parties united to renominate for that position Chief Judge Cullen and Judge Werner.

In this district, since the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court was first formed in 1896, no Judge of that court has failed of re-election. Both parties combined to renominate Chief Justice Van Brunt and Justice Patterson. The only recent instance in the Court of Appeals where this has not been done has a lesson for both political parties. In 1902 the Republicans declined to nominate Judge Gray. The Democrats renominated him, and he was re-elected, although the Republican Governor carried the State at the same time.

Your correspondent speaks of Judge Howland as if he were the only member of the Bar Association who is active in recommending the election of Justices Ingraham and Gildersleeve. Such lifelong Democrats as Alton B. Parker, De Lancey Nicoll, and Paul Fuller joined with him. It is not a question of dictating to any political party, but of expressing to political leaders the sentiment that a just and upright Judge, of learning and ability, who has dispatched the business of the court with efficiency, should be renominated. This is especially true in the case of a Judge like Mr. Justice Ingraham, who has been a member of the Appellate Division from its formation, and who has conducted himself there with so much satisfaction to the public that his loss would be a calamity;

DEMOCRAT.

New York, Oct. 9, 1905.

Facts About a Naval Hero.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Boston correspondent who entertained your Sunday readers with his account of the present and past condition of "Old Ironsides" was certainly mixed in his data when he penned this paragraph: "The first thing called to the attention of visitors is the painted historic motto, 'Don't give up the ship,' the dying words of Capt. James Lawrence on the sloop of war Chesapeake in the Lake Erie engagement, as the old commander lay wounded on the deck." Most schoolboys are aware that the famous engagement in which the gallant Lawrence lost his ship and his life was fought just outside of Boston Harbor, and that the "old commander" lacked just four months of being 32 years of age at the date of his defeat and death. Knowing also that our flagship in the Lake Erie engagement bore the name of Lawrence and went into action with his dying words displayed at her masthead, they can comprehend, even if they do not excuse, your correspondent's blunder.

'Twas the Kentucky Shot So Well.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of yesterday there is a reference to the recent target practice by the battleship squadron under Rear Admiral Rohley D. Evans, and credit is given to the Kearsarge for a remarkable performance with heavy guns. Permit me to say that the record spoken of was made by the Kentucky, Capt. William Jay Barnette, (sister ship of the Kearsarge,) and the officer in command of the turret was Lieut. Hillary Davis. I have certain knowledge of these facts, and am sure you will gladly give credit to those entitled to it. As you are no doubt aware, naval etiquette prevents those concerned from saying anything in their own behalf, but records in the Navy Department will substantiate my statement.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In last Sunday's edition of your paper an article on the evening schools attributes the extensive equipment of apparatus used in the course in physics and applied electricity in the Harlem Evening High School for Men to the generosity of a private individual. Let me say, as instructor in this course, that the equipment, as it now stands, is solely the result of the broad and liberal policy of the Board of Education, and I hope that in justice to them you will find space in your paper to correct this error.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I, a stranger in your city, be permitted to take exception to a portion of a letter appearing in your issue of this day under the heading "That Anglo-Japanese Alliance" and signed "Impransus"? I had the honor of being a member of one of the volunteer regiments that, under Lord Roberts, took part in the operations resulting in the relief of Kimberley and the subsequent defeat of Gen. Cronje's army at Paardeberg. I cannot believe that any "English officer" described the battle as stated; while, if he did do so, I ask your kind permission to say he did not tell the truth.

I should think he would speak in orange and black, and, being an ex-President of the United States, why not speak in red, white, and blue? If he does speak in orange, I suppose it will be taken down in black and white. I hope the blue pencil will not be used. At any rate, he will be well red.

The President, Not Mr. Roosevelt.

From The Charleston News and Courier.

As President of the United States Mr. Roosevelt is entitled to and should receive every possible courtesy at the hands of his fellow-citizens in Montgomery or anywhere else he may select to go. It was not proposed to entertain Theodore Roosevelt, but the President of the United States at Montgomery. An indignity to the latter is an indignity to American citizenship. The Montgomery Alderman has made a spectacle of himself which deserves condemnation and which will receive it from the intelligent people of the South, no less than from the intelligent people of other sections of the country.

The story is abroad that Andrew Carnegie asked a young man who was about to become a student at Jena to get for him an autograph of Prof. Haeckel. Mr. Carnegie made good, admiring the scientist more than ever.

MONROE DOCTRINE'S PERILS.

A Plea for Steps That Will Tend to Minimize Them.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The time to act is when danger threatens, rather than after the mischief is done. Is it not possible for the Lake Mohonk Conference to give at least one day to a consideration of our relations toward South America? We are now drifting with the tides of prejudice and public sentiment without compass or chart, and no one knows upon what rocks we may be cast to-morrow.

It is idle to say that the Monroe Doctrine is our compass and chart, for no one, apparently, is able to define what that doctrine is. If we are unable to define it and circumscribe it, if every President and Secretary of State can modify and amplify it at pleasure, then it is an unsafe guide and an uncertain protection. Before we drift any further and before we are irrevocably committed to its latest modification—the assumption of responsibility for the international obligations of the Latin-American republics—let us have the subject discussed thoroughly and impartially.

The Lake Mohonk Conference is just the place to open this discussion. Should this be done, it would be opportune to inquire what right we have to force a doctrine upon the Latin republics of this continent—some seventeen in number—that places them in a position of dependence and limits their freedom of action. There was once a time when an extension and strengthening of European power on this continent could be considered a source of danger to the United States. Is that the case now? Is there one man in all this vast country who is losing sleep through fear of European invasion and aggression?

Then there are two sides to the question—our own and that of the other republics. Our discussions of the subject are almost exclusively limited to our own policy and advantage. Why should we not investigate the other side also and find out whether the yoke we have forced upon them is accepted willingly and without reserve, and whether the restrictions we have imposed upon the relationship between Europe and South America has given good results. The economic development of South America is a matter of even greater importance to the world than her political independence, and if we are becoming an obstacle to that development our interference cannot be justified.

WALL STREET ILLUSIONS.

Cruel Are They Who Would Take Them Away.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In one of the "Topics" to-day you speak of the illusion, cherished by widows, orphans, and some others, that Wall Street is the "calm abode of baldheaded philanthropists." There is none such. If there be any illusion it is in the other direction: it is to be feared that many people in these United States consider Wall Street a den of thieves. Occasionally a feeble protest arises from one of the supposed baldheaded philanthropists who endeavor to placate the public. But it is very feeble and gains a poor hearing.

Ninety and nine in every hundred delight to hear from lurid orators and writers that they are being robbed by Wall Street—they fairly gloat over the thought that the pawe of Morgan, Rockefeller, et al., are extracting the hard-earned pennies from the pockets of the poor. This is the real illusion—and it is dear to them that hold it. The one man in a hundred who struggles along without it has to go through life blaming himself for the emptiness of his pockets and naturally he is not as happy as those who can place the blame on others. For the sake of the people's content let us hope that this really beneficent illusion will never be dispelled.

ONE OF THE UNHAPPY UNDELUDED.

New York, Oct. 9, 1905.

Solemn Defense of Wall Street.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Assuming that your "End of a Wall Street Myth" in this morning's issue is intended to be taken seriously, let me suggest that the crowd seeking the mysterious Raffles was largely recruited from other than the Wall Street section. Secondly, it is ridiculous to suggest that the active portion of the crowd were the "assorted brokers, bankers, and promoters, who, by a sort of natural affinity, daily drift into the edifying neighborhood of Trinity Church." Thirdly, as an eye-witness, it seems to me that practically every man who was "seized with frantic vehemence" was simply the butt of a crowd bent on joking, and the $300 reward was entirely lost sight of in the opportunity for skylarking. Truly, it was a "lamentable and pathetic spectacle," but only as showing a laxity at times of the Police Department, and not as "showing up any of the aforementioned miscellaneous assortment" which you apparently conclude it to have been.

An Improvement on "Lookout."

From The London Chronicle.

"He's what they call a 'crow,'" said a well-informed police witness at Brentford of a certain youth, explaining that a "crow" is one who stands on guard while his associates are busy robbing, to warn them of approaching police or other undesirables. The word is thieves' slang of considerable standing. In 1862, for instance, The Cornhill Magazine mentioned it as the technical term for a woman who kept such a watch for a burglar. An explanation that at once suggests itself is that this confederate is expected to "crow," or give some such warning noise, but the word may well point to some study of natural history in criminal circles. Those familiar "crows"—rooks—are accustomed to post sentinels to signal the coming of danger.

SPEAKER NIXON DIES IN WESTFIELD HOME

End Comes Four Hours After a Second Operation.

FAMILY AT HIS BEDSIDE

Career of the Man Who Ruled the New York Assembly During Seven Successive Terms.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTFIELD, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Speaker S. Fred Nixon died at 5 o'clock this afternoon at his home here, surrounded by the members of his family.

Death followed an illness of about four weeks' duration. It is believed that Mr. Nixon overtaxed himself by his hasty trip to the Portland Exposition last Summer in company with other New York State officials. On his return Mr. Nixon complained of feeling worn out, but he did admit that he was ill until a week or so later, when blood poisoning developed. An operation was performed, and hopes were entertained for a complete recovery.

Mr. Nixon began failing again several days ago. The final turn, however, did not take place until 3 o'clock this morning, when he began sinking, and it was evident that the end was approaching. Dr. McDonald of Albany, assisted by local physicians, performed another operation at 1 o'clock this afternoon, but the patient was only semi-conscious at the time. He rallied slightly after the operation, but the change was not of the nature to give encouragement that any permanent benefit had resulted. The family gathered about the bedside following his recovery from the anaesthetic, and did not leave him again until death was announced.

Mr. Nixon leaves a widow, two sons, and a daughter.

Samuel Frederick Nixon, Speaker of the Assembly of the State of New York, representative of the Second District of the County of Chautauqua and Supervisor of the Town of Westfield, made a record for length of service in the position of presiding officer of the Assembly which has never been equaled in the 128 years of the New York Legislature.

He served seven successive terms in the chair. Speaker James W. Husted of Westchester served six, but they were not successive. Of the many presiding officers of the lower House, none ever approached for length of service the records of Nixon and Husted. Altogether, Speaker Nixon served fifteen terms in the Assembly—twelve of them successive. He was a legislator when the Raines bill was passed, the Greater New York charter was enacted, and was leader of the Republicans when the Legislature assembled in special session in 1898 to legislate for the maintenance of New York's troops in the field during the Spanish-American war. He forced through the Assembly this year the Mortgage Tax bill and the Stock Transfer bill. During his fifteen years' service he had a giant's part in shaping legislation.

Mr. Nixon was born at Westfield on Dec. 3, 1860, and was educated in the Westfield High School and at Hamilton College. He graduated in 1881. In just three years he made his entry into public life by being elected Trustee of the Village of Westfield. The next office was that of Supervisor of the Town of Westfield, to which he was elected in 1886. The Chairmanship of the Republican Committee of Chautauqua County was held by him in several campaigns. On Sept. 25, 1905, he was elected for the fourteenth time Chairman of the Chautauqua County Board of Supervisors.

His first campaign for the Assembly was in 1887. He then was elected by the Republicans of what was the First Chautauqua District and re-elected to the Assembly of 1889 and 1890. In the convention of 1890 he was defeated. In 1893 he again sought a nomination. By the apportionment of 1892 Chautauqua had been formed into a single district. Nixon was successful in the convention and in the Bartlett-Maynard campaign, the one that drove the Democrats from power. Thereafter he was re-elected, ending with 1904.

He served under Speaker Fremont Cole in 1888 and 1889. George R. Malby held the gavel in 1894, Hamilton Fish in 1895 and 1896, and James M. E. O'Grady in 1897 and 1898. Under these speakers Nixon rose from Chairmanship to Chairmanship, heading Railroads and Public Instruction, and reaching Ways and Means in 1897 and 1898.

Nixon came to the leadership of the Assembly of 1897 with a great preponderance of Republicans. The majority was unwieldy. The McKinley and Hobart ticket had sent Republicans from Kings and New York districts which were usually Democratic. But he grasped the situation quickly and kept the majority to its work. In this session the Greater New York charter was enacted and the first batch of amendments to the Raines law were passed. Some of the Republicans broke on them, but the leader held a sufficient number in line to pass them.

The next year Nixon had a very slender majority to lead. The defeat of William J. Wallace by Alton B. Parker and of Low and Tracy by Van Wyck retired many members of the House of 1897. When the session of 1899 began no one but Nixon was thought of for the Speakership. He was unanimously elected, and since then had been Speaker continuously.

As a presiding officer Nixon was a Czar, and easily maintained his sway. Of recent sessions, nothing got through the Assembly without his consent. He always had a few strong friends among the Democrats who aided him outside of party questions, notably John McKeown. The majority always was intensely loyal to him. Though never brilliant as a parliamentarian in comparison with some of the leaders of years ago, Nixon generally far outshone his colleagues. He often gaveled his way through a point raised by the Democrats, riding over all opposition.

Many an unpopular measure desired by the Republican organization was jammed through the House, which never could have passed had it not been for Nixon. He would go into the majority caucus and talk and argue and threaten until he had enough votes pledged to the bill's support. Nobody could withstand his energy and tremendous influence. Those who tried it were crushed. It was: "Fred wants this bill," and that was usually enough to send it through.

The members from the agricultural districts stood by him in every tight place. He was their guide, counselor, and friend. He was democratic to the last degree, and that accounts for a large percentage of his success. So secure a grip did he have on the House that Senate bills never got out of Assembly committees if Nixon wanted them held in.

Nixon was almost a giant in stature, and this of itself helped to awe his opponents. Early in his career he was argumentative and easily angered, but when he became the acknowledged boss he had the House machine running so well that a nod or a look was sufficient to work his will. Once in a while a pet measure might be in danger; then Nixon would call a trusted member to the chair and go among the Assemblymen and ask for votes. He never did this in vain, save in rare instances, when groups had to stand in opposition to save their faces and political cuticles at home. He understood this phase and never resented their refusal.

Nixon had not always been an organization Republican. In early times he was not on good terms with Senator Platt, and this kept him somewhat in the background. When, however, in 1894 he returned to the House after his defeat for a fourth nomination in 1890 he worked with the organization.

That he aspired to higher office than that of Speaker everybody who knew him was aware. He was urged several times to take the nomination of Lieutenant Governor, but some of his close friends, led by Garrett Benson, pointed out to him the undesirability of such an office for a man of his temperament. Nixon agreed and decided to wait for the nomination for Governor—that never came.

In business Mr. Nixon was also successful. He had railroad interests, operated a marble and granite works, a box factory, and had various enterprises in and about his home, Westfield. He was also prominently identified with the grapegrowers and wine producers of the Chautauqua Lake country.

GOV. HIGGINS'S TRIBUTE.

Death of Speaker Nixon a Shock—A Proclamation.

ALBANY, Oct. 10.—Gov. Higgins said to-night concerning the death of Speaker Nixon:

"Mr. Nixon's death is a great shock to me. He was a man who commanded the confidence of his associates to a very marked degree. He was a loyal friend, and I feel that I have met with a great personal loss."

The Governor to-night issued the following proclamation:

The people of the State of New York learn with sorrow of the untimely death of the Hon. S. Fred Nixon, the Speaker of the Assembly. He had the affection and respect of all who knew him. In his long service in the Legislature he had won a position of deserved and recognized leadership. His young and useful life gave fair promise of brilliant success in wider fields. His broad experience, his tact, and his sound judgment rendered him exceptionally well qualified for his responsible and arduous duties. His death leaves a vacant place that cannot easily be filled.

It is proper that the Governor should, in the absence of the Legislature, make official recognition of the loss sustained by the people and publicly express the respect due to the character and services of the deceased.

Now, therefore, I, Frank W. Higgins, Governor of the State of New York, do direct that the flags upon all the public buildings of the State, including the armories and arsenals, be displayed at half-mast up to and including the day of the funeral.

Given under my hand and the privy seal of the State at the Capitol in the City of Albany, this 10th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and five.

FRANK W. HIGGINS.

By the Governor:
FRANK E. PERLEY, Secretary to the Governor.

INSURANCE INQUIRY HALTS.

Committee Will Adjourn Until After Speaker Nixon's Funeral.

Owing to the death of Speaker Nixon the session of the Insurance Investigating Committee this morning will be merely for the purpose of taking a formal adjournment until after Mr. Nixon's funeral. The committee will therefore hold no further sessions this week, and the date of its first session next week has yet to be fixed.

"The death of Speaker Nixon is a personal sorrow to every member of the Legislature," said State Senator W. J. Tully of Corning, a member of the Insurance Investigating Committee, last night. "He was in a sense a connecting link between all the elements of the Republican Party in the State. No Speaker ever exercised so much influence over the Assembly as he did, and it will seem wholly unnatural to see another in the Speaker's chair."

Arrangements for the attendance of legislators at the funeral of the Speaker were begun last night. It is probable that a special train will leave New York and pick up the legislators and State officers all along the route. Assemblyman Rogers went to Albany, reaching there at midnight.

WE OPPOSE CUBA'S TREATY.

Are Trying to Prevent Ratification of Convention with England.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—It is understood that Mr. Squires, the American Minister to Cuba, is by direction of the State Department quietly but firmly opposing the ratification of the treaty between Great Britain and Cuba conferring upon British vessels certain privileges in the matter of entry to Cuban ports which are not common to ships of other nationalities.

The particular reason for opposition by the State Department to this treaty lies in the fact that it is proposed in the near future to enter into a treaty with Cuba which will confer valuable trading privileges exclusively on American ships entering Cuban ports.

Therefore the British treaty, which, as it stands, would nullify this arrangement by making it common to British ships, will be consistently opposed by this Government until it is amended by the inclusion of a provision that it shall not be invoked in the future to assert favored nation treatment for British shipping under the terms of any treaty to be subsequently made between Cuba and America.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The wedding of Miss Frances Pell of Madison Avenue to Major Archer Shee of the British Cavalry will take place on Saturday at Pellowood, Highland Falls, N. Y. As Miss Pell is in mourning for the late Mrs. Alfred Pell, the ceremony will be a quiet one, to be followed by a wedding breakfast.

* * *

The marriage of Miss Anna E. Matheson and Willis Delano Wood will take place to-day at Fort Hill, Huntington, L. I., the country home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Matheson. Since then they have spent a portion of each season in town, but Fort Hill is their permanent home. It will be a large wedding, some five hundred guests having been asked.

* * *

Another out-of-town wedding will be that at Dreamwold, Scituate, Mass., of Miss Gladys Lawson, daughter of Thomas W. Lawson, to Eben Blaine Stanwood. A special train will take the relatives from Boston to Scituate and back. None but relatives and a few intimate friends have been asked. The evening following the wedding there is to be a big dance in the large barn of Dreamwold for all the employes of the Lawsons.

With George Bernard Shaw it becomes more and more evident that it is all in our point of view. Tie him down to the narrow conventions of a conventionally restricted theatre and there is always a sense of disappointment in his acted plays—least marked, perhaps, in a case like "Candida," where he seems to be telling his story for the pure fun of the telling—most pronounced when, as in "Man and Superman," he rides a hobby to the very farthest ditch.

We have always believed in the theatre as a theatre; its conventional rules and regulations are the safeguards which time and experience create and develop as necessities of every art. But such is the tantalizing insistence of Mr. Shaw that he makes us doubt even the wisdom of our own beliefs. Seriously, however, the real fact of the matter is that Mr. Shaw is the exception to prove the rule. His humor is so scintillant, his wit so dazzling, his intellectuality so enveloping, that he defies all the ordinary processes. We might be sorry if he were not what he is. Certainly the theatre would be infinitely poorer for his absence. Formless as are his plays, there is reason for thankfulness in his mere willingness to place his work before us in some sort of shape suggestive of the drama.

The fact of the matter is, the plays of George Bernard Shaw, whenever they are acted, call for a more open mind than is usually either expedient or necessary in a dramatic review. He is not to be cut up and weighed, labeled, and delivered according to the ordinary processes of dramatic criticism. To subject him to any such processes is to argue one's self incompetent.

These facts, evident heretofore, impress themselves with peculiar emphasis in the presence of "John Bull's Other Island," which had its American premier at the Garrick last night. Our audiences may take exception to the English verdict that it is the best of Shaw's plays, but if such exception does prevail the reason will not be far to seek. To many Liberalism and Toryism are only names—even to those whose acquaintance with British politics is not the limited general knowledge gleaned from the London dispatches, their discussion in the theatre is not necessarily entertaining.

But there was applause and laughter last night—much of both. And there was something more—a sense of respect in the presence of Mr. Shaw's unfrocked priest which we do not remember any of his characters to have created heretofore. Certainly the playwright has never sounded a sincerer note than that which comes with the priest's poignant arraignment of the so-called "efficiency" of modern progress.

For American audiences whatever delight there is in "John Bull's Other Island" will come from the playwright's capacity for hitting heads wherever he sees one standing. The Coney Island barker with his balls and wooden dummies would be promptly bankrupt if such marksmanship were common. Shaw never misses. In this play he lands on the English head as surely as on the Irish. Exposing the dull, complacent, hollow, prating virtue of the one, he is none the less ready to lay bare the self-deluding sentimentality of the other.

One cannot tell the story of "John Bull's Other Island" because, as these things go, there is no story to tell. Nora Reilly's love of Larry Doyle is only an incident to the main theme; Thomas Broadbent's wooing and winning of the same fair maid is only important as illustrating the Broadbent character. Throughout we have the splendid contrast of Larry, the disillusioned Irishman, laughing at the sentimentality of his own race, haranguing against the imaginativeness which saps its strength and energy. Broadbent, the stodgy, ambitious Englishman, believes in it all, or is willing to pretend to such belief, since his interests are steadily advanced by reason of it.

There is a fine passage in the first act, splendidly spoken by Mr. Daly, in which the popular notion of a poetical Erin is exploded, in which the real truth of the situation, as Mr. Shaw conceives it, is laid bare. He would like to see Ireland the "brains of a big empire, not the Robinson Crusoe land" of sentimental fictionists.

Passage after passage develops the narrow bigotry—again Bernard Shaw's viewpoint—of the Church, its superstitions, jealousies, ambitions, and its power. To this end the author introduces two priests—Father Dempsey, the man of influence and authority, and Peter Keegan, unrecognized because he has given absolution to a black man. Both of these parts are extraordinarily well played at the Garrick, Mr. Price's Father Dempsey being a splendid study and Mr. Farren's Keegan a little masterpiece of intelligence, sympathy, and sincerity.

The play has not the superficial brightness of some of the others, and the wit lies further from the surface. But it is a poor mentality indeed that will confess itself unable to get a good deal of entertainment from it. The main idea is to present the characteristics of the typical Englishman in surroundings typically Irish—to contrast the characteristics of the two races. Both appear ridiculous in the process—partly because of Mr. Shaw's capacity for humorous exaggeration, partly because underneath this exaggeration we discern general truths of form and spirit.

Broadbent, for instance, accompanies Larry to his home, which he is revisiting after a lapse of eighteen years. The little Rosculien cottage is crowded, and Broadbent makes his bed on a sofa in the parlor. During the night one of the legs of the sofa comes out of its socket and Broadbent is precipitated in a heap. "You mustn't mind," says Larry, "it used to do the same thing eighteen years ago." There in a phrase is the Shaw perspective on the Irish happy-go-lucky, day in and day out carelessness and procrastination. "If we can't have men of honor let us have men of ability," argues Larry. He is out of patience with the pothouse patriotism. He wants actions, not words and sentiments. He hates the English virtuous pose, but he admires and embraces that nation's "efficiency."

There is a capital scene in which the landlord question is debated most agreeably. Matt Haffigan has suffered under the old system of "oppression," But now that he owns his own plot of ground he fears the reforms that his class has been loudly demanding. This part, somewhat too noisily exploited by Mr. Findlay, provides a view on a broadly applicable phase of human selfishness. Matt, like some of the others, is at first strongly in favor of sending Larry to Parliament. But the boy leaves no illusions in Matt's mind. Broadbent, however, has no scruples. His attitude is plain enough. Discussing the canvassing with his Irish fiancée, he is met by her reluctance to talk to the "common" people. "Oh, but we must be thoroughly democratic," he cries, "and patronize everybody without distinction."

This is not stage humor in the ordinary sense; it is just Mr. Bernard Shaw's delightfully enlarged way of putting things, but it gets home. In everything Broadbent says and does we have the heavy, lumbering type of Britisher. Broadbent in politics, Broadbent in love, Broadbent in his relations with the Church and State, Broadbent, in fact, in all the varied activities of his existence. Especially is Broadbent amusing in his love making, when he defines to a hair's breadth the dimensions of the manly chest fit to bear the burden of a woman's tears. It is a masterpiece of satire, the more convincing because Mr. Shaw emphasizes his virtues as well as his faults. He lays stress on all the absurdities, but he does not fail to let Larry sound the Britisher's virtues to the topmost note.

Mr. Mitchell's performance of Broadbent, excellent in some respects, seemed at times too vociferous, too explosive. But we have not seen the stage directions. Mr. Shaw naturally knows his Englishmen and his instructions may be explicit. As regards Mr. Daly's Larry Doyle it can truthfully be said that it is the best thing the actor has done. His brogue is delightfully genuine. He resists the temptation for the most part to listen to the sound of his own voice, heretofore a flaw in his impersonations, and he moves throughout as we imagine Mr. Shaw would have him move. The others are generally in the picture, Mr. Smith, Mr. Crosby, and especially Mr. Tyler, being excellent.

Crystal Herne adds a touch of beauty and plays discreetly and with charm.

The play as it stands is much too long. Many of its best passages suffer from Mr. Shaw's tendency to allow his eloquence to carry him too far. But on the whole it ought to provide a very exceptional entertainment for people whose sense of fun is not confined to the familiar antics of much that passes for humor in these days.

LATE COMERS NOT SEATED.

Had to Stand at Garrick Until After the First Act.

At the Garrick Theatre last night the management enforced its announced rule of not allowing late comers to go to their seats until the end of the first act. As a result the space at the rear of the last row of orchestra chairs was filled with the standees, some of whom were loud in their protests. When the first curtain fell there was a general scurrying for the unoccupied chairs.

Mansfield Gets Rare Panels.

One set of the copies of the Escurial tapestry panels, which arrived from Paris on Monday, was obtained yesterday by Richard Mansfield to be used for the tableau curtains in the production of "Don Carlos." The five panels were at the Paris Exposition of 1900. Five copies were woven afterward for each country. Mr. Mansfield has recently found in Germany the original manuscript of Ferdinand Ries's overture to "Don Carlos."

JU-DO STARTLES A YOUTH.

Used by Japanese Woman It Flings Him In the Gutter.

Miss Misao Sogi, who lives at 160 West Sixty-sixth Street, went shopping in 125th Street yesterday. She had as escort K. Yoshimura.

Mr. Yoshimura had occasion to enter a dry goods store for a moment. Miss Misao Sogi waited on the sidewalk. While her escort was absent a young man came up to her and said:

"Why, what brings you to Harlem?"

Miss Misao Sogi, not recognizing the young man, caught him violently by the lapels of his coat and, by some Oriental art, threw him violently into the gutter. A watering cart was passing at the time.

The young man arose to his feet and came forward, perhaps to apoligize, but Miss Misao Sogi, not understanding English, took the proffered right hand and by a dexterous twist threw the young man into the gutter a second time.

A crowd gathered and, taking in the situation, laughed uproariously. The young man sat up and wiped his face and clothes. Bicycle Policeman 'Ajax' Whitman and K. Yoshimura arrived simultaneously. The two Japanese talked rapidly for a minute; then K. Yoshimura said:

"This man insulted this lady."

Whitman marched the young man to the station, where before Sergt. Fitzgerald explanations were again in order.

"So she gave him the jiu-jitsu," concluded Whitman.

"No, the ju-do," said Yoshimura, bowing; "the softer art."

"Just what did she do to him?" asked Fitzgerald, curiously, looking at the little Japanese woman. "You tell her I want to see how, Mr. Yoshimura?"

The Japanese again talked rapidly. Then Miss Misao Sogi seized K. Yoshimura by the lapels. There was a whirl and a crash on the floor of the police station. K. Yoshimura arose to his feet smiling:

"That was what she did, Sir."

The young man, who said he was J. F. McCullom of 261 West Fifty-third Street, was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

COUNTRY IN CITY.

A Butterfly Comes Down from West Farms in a Subway Train.

A downtown West Farms train had just thrashed into the Fourteenth Street Subway station yesterday afternoon when a gorgeous yellow and black butterfly fluttered from one of the ventilator windows of the front car and circled dizzily around over the platform.

Fifty men and women who had been thinking of nothing but the necessity of getting down town quickly turned their attention at once to the little visitor. The train went on without several of these lovers of nature.

The butterfly, oblivious of the stir he had made, zigzagged around for a few minutes, darted down to and rested for a second on the bright red hat of a young woman—whose face at once turned as red as her hat when she saw everybody looking at her—and then dashed straight out to the open air by one of the exits.

"There's a country in town for you," said one man in the crowd. "That butterfly had undoubtedly been in the train ever since it left Bronx Park. I shouldn't be surprised any day to see a rabbit or a squirrel dash out of one of those trains. New York's a great city for surprises."

WOMEN TEACHERS ANGRY.

Back Miss Goessling in Her Fight for an Equal Salary Law.

The fight for the equalization of men and women teachers' salaries, which was started last Spring by Miss Anna Louise Goessling, a Brooklyn teacher, was renewed yesterday at a meeting of the Class Teachers' Association, held at Public School No. 15, in Brooklyn.

Bitter attacks were made by Miss Goessling and her associates against the male teachers in the association. The men teachers were openly accused of trying to intimidate their feminine co-workers and of getting their own salaries increased.

"The men reaped the benefit of the Davis law," said Miss Goessling, "but the expenses for this legislation were paid out of a fund to which both men and women contributed alike.

"We will fight this to a finish," she said. "'Equal pay for equal work' is our slogan, and we will not give up until the women teachers of this city receive the same salary as the men."

The meeting started with the reading of the minutes of the meeting of May 9. Personalities had been indulged in by the men teachers at that meeting, and the text of their speeches, together with the hisses, were incorporated by Miss Goessling in the minutes which were read yesterday. This caused a storm of protest from the defenders of the male teachers.

"I move that all irrelevant matter be stricken from the minutes before they are approved," said Miss Gray, a teacher in Public School No. 25.

"If these minutes cause chagrin, the future looks more hopeful," retorted another teacher.

A heated discussion followed, in which Cushing manual was referred to, and a motion was then adopted revising the minutes to the exclusion of all irrelevant matter. The teachers appointed a committee of five to revise the constitution of their association, and hereafter they probably will contribute to no legislation which is not aimed to give them equal benefits with the men.

WHY THE TARS ARE GOOD.

They're Saving Money to Show British Sailors a Good Time.

The crews of the warships belonging to Admiral Evans's squadron, now lying at anchor in the North River, have spent forty-eight hours' leave on shore and returned to their ships in a sober and orderly condition. The Bowery policemen, who expected to have a busy time, have been agreeably disappointed. There have been no fights and no arrests.

Temperance advocates are enthusiastic over the idea that 5,000 sailors and marines are on the water wagon and leading blameless lives. It has been proposed that the crews come ashore next Sunday and march to church wearing white rosettes as an example which the bad men of this city might emulate.

It must be recorded with regret that the officers of the ships do not share in this general enthusiasm. They see on the horizon a cloud, now no bigger than a man's hand, which, to the initiated, foretells a tidal wave of intemperance. It is likely to strike New York with overwhelming force about the time Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg arrives with his cruiser squadron on Nov. 9. The men of Admiral Evans's squadron have resolved to save up $10,000 to spend on the reception of the Britishers. When the American ships were at Portsmouth, England, their crews had the time of their lives and now they wish to return the hospitality. Each mess has a subscription list, and the men hand over a certain sum every payday. With this fund the American tars hope to take their British cousins in tow and give the town a vermillion coat that won't rub off for years.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The Gulf storm has moved northeastward to East Tennessee with somewhat diminishing intensity, and a trough of low pressure extends from the East Gulf States north through the lower lakes into Ontario. Pressure also continues low in the upper lake region. The West, however, is covered by an extensive high area, accompanied by lower temperatures and clear weather. There has also been a decided fall in temperature in the Ohio Valley, West Tennessee, and New Jersey.

There will be rain Wednesday in the Atlantic States and east lower lake region, but a high pressure wave over the West will dominate weather conditions throughout the country for the next few days, and generally clear and comparatively cooler weather may therefore be expected over all districts. It will, however, be somewhat warmer Thursday in the West.

The winds along the New England Coast will be fresh to brisk east to south, shifting to west and northwest Wednesday night. On the Middle Atlantic Coast fresh to brisk south shifting to west and northwest; on the South Atlantic Coast fresh southwest to northwest; on the Gulf Coast, fresh north; on the lower lakes, fresh to brisk west to north, and on the upper lakes fresh west to northwest.

Steamers departing Wednesday for European ports will have fresh to brisk southeast to south winds, shifting, to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York—Rain Wednesday; Thursday fair, cooler in east portion; fresh to brisk south winds, shifting to west and northwest.

New Jersey—Rain Wednesday; Thursday fair, cooler; fresh to brisk south winds, shifting to west and northwest Wednesday night.

Eastern Pennsylvania—Rain Wednesday; Thursday fair and cooler; fresh southwest to northwest winds.

New England—Cloudy Wednesday; rain in south and west portions and at night in northeast portions; Thursday cooler and fair; fresh to brisk south winds, shifting to west.

Western New York—Rain and colder Wednesday; much colder at night; Thursday fair; fresh to brisk winds.

Delaware and Maryland—Rain Wednesday; Thursday fair, cooler; fresh southwest to northwest winds.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1904.	1905.		1904.	1905.
3 A. M.	58	62	4 P. M.	73	62
6 A. M.	57	58	6 P. M.	74	60
9 A. M.	59	61	9 P. M.	69	60
12 M.	64	65	12 P. M.	69	58

The thermometer of the Weather Bureau is 285 feet above the street level.

The average temperature yesterday was 62; corresponding date 1904, 65; corresponding date for the last 25 years, 58.

The thermometer registered 58 degrees at 8 A. M. and 59 degrees at 8 P. M. yesterday, the maximum temperature being 65 degrees at noon and the minimum 58 degrees at 6 A. M. The humidity was 66 per cent. at 8 A. M. and 77 per cent. at 8 P. M.

SIR CHARLES LOSES HIS TOP.

He Intended to Wear It in Chinatown, but It Was Smashed.

A touring automobile stood in front of the Hotel York yesterday morning. In it were seated The Pilgrims, All-England's champion amateur Association football team, who will play the All-New York team selected by the Metropolitan Association Football League, at the Polo Grounds on Saturday week.

The automobile started to do the sights.

"Tally-ho!" shouted Capt. Fred H. Milnes, the full back. Turning to Charles Livingstone, the team's American manager, he added: "Don't the holiday omnibuses have horns in this country?"

A shout came from the front seat, where a man in a hunting cap was seated with a distinguished-looking woman.

"Whoa!" he cried. "Stop the horses, my man—I mean—make this omnibus stop. I've lost me top."

The other fifteen occupants of the touring car took up the cry.

"Stop the omnibus! Sir Charles has lost his top! Hey! Somebody nudge the driver! Shut off the petrol, my man!"

The chauffeur brought the automobile to a standstill.

"Sir Charles Kirkpatrick has lost his top," explained Capt. Milnes. "Get down and get it, like a good chappie."

The chauffeur looked blankly at the top of Sir Charles's head, then appealingly at the "barker," who turned to his megaphone for refuge.

"On our left—"

"No, (confound the way they do things!)" shouted a chorus. "Sir Charles Kirkpatrick—the gentleman behind you—has lost his top."

"But Sir Charles has got a cap on his head already," interrupted one of the English team.

"Oh, yes," said Sir Charles, "but, don't you see, I brought my top along, too. Thought we might stop off to see that Chinese town. Then, of course, I would have to wear it. Awfully sorry, fellows."

By this time the amateur team was craning over the sides of the auto looking for the top hat. They couldn't see it anywhere. Then a bellboy ran out of the York and addressed Sir Charles.

"Please, Sir, was it the leather hat you carried in your hand?"

"Yes, yes, of course," said Sir Charles. "Hat in a case, of course."

"Well," said the bellboy, "that must be it under the wheel."

Investigation showed that in being jolted by the sudden start of the automobile the hat had met an untimely fate under the wheels of the machine. Sir Charles was for going back for another "top," but Manager Livingstone explained that etiquette in Chinatown was lax in election weather. So the touring machine went on, and Capt. Milnes repeated his question:

"Why don't the holiday omnibuses have horns?"

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

In 1893 he bought a farm of 200 acres in Lenox, which he developed into one of the most beautiful country estates in the Berkshires. His residence was a copy of an old Italian villa.

For four years Mr. Cook had been in feeble health and divided his time between his home in New York and Wheatleigh. He came here early in May. Last Saturday he was able to take a drive and did not complain of feeling ill until Sunday night.

Mr. Cook was born in Bath, N. Y., where he married Miss Mary E. McKay, who died in Lenox three years ago. Four daughters, Mrs. C. B. McDougall of Auburn; Mrs. M. R. Miller of Tarrytown, Mrs. Charles S. Ganson of Buffalo, and Mrs. Carlos De Heredia of Lenox, survive him. The funeral will be held at Trinity Church, Lenox, on Thursday morning. CAMPAIGN BUTTON AILED HIM.

Interest in Politics Causes the Death of a Jersey City Dog.

A small brown spaniel, picked up in Van Vorst Park, Jersey City, a few days ago, was turned over to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals on the supposition that it was afflicted with rabies. Dr. Matthews, the society's veterinary surgeon, said the dog was not mad, but was suffering from some strange ailment, the nature of which he could not determine.

He kept the animal under observation until yesterday, when it died. An autopsy showed that a celluloid campaign button, which had lodged in the dog's throat, was the cause of death. The button bore the inscription: For Governor, William L. Douglas."

Where a Jersey City dog picked up a Massachusetts campaign button could not be learned.

BROOKDALE NYMPH WON RANCHO DEL PASO STAKE

H. P. Whitney's Filly Set a New Belmont Park Track Record.

ANOTHER MARK FOR ROSEBEN

Great Sprinter, at Odds On, Lowered Best Time on the Course for Seven-Furlong Race.

The lowering of Belmont Park records, which as a matter of course was a part of the racing, became a matter of only secondary consideration yesterday, when a succession of close finishes, three races being decided by heads, aroused feelings among the bettors that would not permit consideration of simple merit.

The most notable performance of the afternoon did elicit noisy approval from the crowds in the grand and field stands when Brookdale Nymph won the Rancho Del Paso Stakes, the fourth race on the card, but the applause was more for the winning favorite than for the maker of a new record on the six-furlong straight course, Brookdale Nymph's victory being the more welcome because she was the first winning favorite of the day after choices had been beaten in three earlier events.

The weather was pleasant, but a trifle cool, and there was just enough breeze to keep the crowd stirring when Brookdale Nymph went to the post for her race, a stake for two-year-olds, non-winners of $5,000 at the time of entry, Aug. 15, a field of seven running, with the H. P. Whitney filly favorite at odds on, and ridden by Shaw. Athlete broke first, but in the first strides Brookdale Nymph took the lead from him, with Athlete striving after her and close up, while Oak Duke held third place into the second quarter, where he passed Athlete. The three leaders held their respective places for the remainder of the race, Brookdale Nymph drawing away a bit at the end, but being hustled out to win by two lengths from Oak Duke, second, a similar distance before Athlete. The time of the race was 1:10 4-5, a full second faster than the track record, held by the winner's stablemate Perverse, and the fastest race at six furlongs that has been run on any straight course now in use for racing, though Artful's six furlongs down the hill of the old Morris Park course still holds its place as the best time for a straight track.

One other track record breaking race made the tamest contest of the day, as the great sprinter, Roseben, with only 126 pounds up, frightened out all the horses entered in the condition seven furlongs except two that ran for second and third money. There was no betting so far as Roseben was concerned, though the bookmakers did make a pretense by offering 1 to 20 against him, the only speculation on the race being between Chimney Sweep and Monet for second place. Roseben, ridden by O'Neill, broke in the lead and romped out in front all the way, winning, held in, by fifteen lengths from Chimney Sweep, which caught and beat Monet in the last jump. The time of the race, 1:25 1-5, cut a full second from the record for the seven furlongs on the main course, made by Just So last week.

In the selling steeplechase, for which seven horses ran, Buck O'Dowd fell after racing in the lead for a trifle more than a mile, Ruth's Rattler then taking command, and seeming to have the race won until the horses made the last bend starting for the run home, where she slowed up, and was beaten out by the heavily backed Gansevoort.

In the opening race three maidens fought out heads apart, with the favorite, Maid of Timbuctoo, sandwiched in at the finish between the two long chances, Bella Signora, the winner, and Copper, third.

Third Alarm, in the maiden two-year-old race, also won in a head finish by three horses, a long chance being second and one of two equal favorites third. The third head finish was between the top-weight and favorite Knight Errant, which just managed to win, and Louis H., which after swerving badly came on and was running over the winner at the finish. A. A. U. AFTER DELINQUENTS.

Athletes in Arrears for Entry Fees to be Suspended.

So flagrant has become the practice of athletes entering sets of games and then not settling their accounts for entrance fees that the Registration Committee yesterday took hold of the matter, and Chairman John Boyle sent out a letter detailing the action of the committee to every club member of the Metropolitan Association.

In this letter the vigorous Chairman of the Registration Committee makes it evident that such practices and others that are to be dealt with later on must be stopped. The habit of instructing Games Committees to charge entries to clubs, which in turn pay no attention to such accounts, and finally repudiate them altogether, has resulted in a pretty tangle of affairs and anything but harmony among some of the organizations. Such practices are against all of the rules and tenets of the Amateur Athletic Union, and Chairman Boyle notified the members and clubs yesterday that they must pay up before Nov. 1 or the men and organizations would become liable to suspension for sixty days.

Chairman Boyle said yesterday that this action of the committee had been made necessary by the dilatory methods of certain clubs in the payment of entry fees, and in other cases owing to the deception practiced by the athletes. They make entries with notations upon the margin of the blanks such as "club will pay." Subsequent efforts to collect have proved futile.

Nearly every club in the Metropolitan Association is amenable to this suspension as the matter now stands. The suspensions will be meted out without any favor to big and little alike unless the fees are paid before the first of next month. If they remain unpaid after that time the suspension will be continued for such additional time as the bills remain unpaid. It is a drastic measure, but as things stand at present in the Metropolitan Association only action of this sort will bring about the desired result.

Century Club Run to Tuxedo.

An invitation bicycle run of seventy-five miles through the beautiful Ramapo Valley will be the Autumn feature of the schedule of the New Jersey Division of the Century Road Club of America. The run will be a trip to Tuxedo Park and return on Sunday, Oct. 15. This run is open to all amateur riders. The course will be as follows: Leave City Hall, Jersey City, at 7:30 A. M., through Ridgefield, Hackensack, Ridgewood, and Suffern to Tuxedo Park. As an incentive to the racing class of cyclists a five-mile handicap race will be held at Tuxedo Park.

To accommodate the "scorchers" a fast division will leave at 9 o'clock sharp, arriving at Tuxedo Park by noontime. Information and entry blanks can be obtained by addressing Harry Early, the Transcontinentalist, 12 West Forty-first Street, Bayonne, N. J.

Thomas Stud to be Sold.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 10.—The entire breeding establishment of Major Barack G. Thomas will be closed out at auction here during the December sales, and he will retire permanently from the ranks of breeders. This action on the part of Major Thomas is due to continued ill health. His farm will not be sold, but will ultimately be leased to another breeder.

The consignment will include the noted stallion Dr. MacBride, about thirty brood mares, and a number of weanlings. In the brood-mare collection are Quesal, dam of Tommy Atkins; Felicity, dam of Tom Tuff and Himself; Dislike, dam of The Curs; Grace Lee, dam of Hilee and Coburg.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

The Stewards of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, acting in the running of the selling steeplechase at Belmont Park yesterday, were dissatisfied with the riding of Jockey Finnegan on Ruth's Rattler, equal favorite with Bonfire at post time, and called Finnegan up to explain when Ruth's Rattler was beaten by the heavily backed Gansevoort, after Finnegan's mount at the head at the head of the stretch had raced to the front and seemed to be winning. Finnegan there eased up, and Gansvoort caught him and beat him in a sharp finish. The Stewards took the betting into consideration, and will continue this investigation further.

Fast races have been so common at the Belmont Park Fall meeting that a suggestion made in the Spring has been renewed, and it is intended that flagmen shall be stationed at the fractional poles on the straight course, and also at the last three-furlong, last-quarter and last-furlong poles of the main track stretch, so that all the fractional time in races can be taken by the official timer. Under the existing arrangement the timer is able to get only the start and finish of the races on the straight course, and can time the horses only to the head of the stretch in races on the main track.

W. A. Stanton, who has raced a stable with a moderate degree of success for a year, his most notable winner in the East having been Workman, has decided to retire, and will sell out his horses in training. The Stanton stable has a contract on the star lightweight jockey, Miller, and it is probable that the contract on the rider, if sold, will bring more than all the horses.

Steeplechase Jockey Holman, who rods Buck O'Dowd in the cross-country race at Belmont Park yesterday, was injured so badly when his mount fell with him that he was removed in an ambulance to the Garden City Hospital. In addition to the shock of the fall, Holman was struck by the horse Bonfire, which followed Buck O'Dowd to the jump. Holman's injuries will keep him out of the saddle for a time, but it was said that the rider is in no danger.

Knight Errant, the English-bred horse which P. J. Dwyer patiently has tried to keep in training for three years, pulled up very lame after winning his second race of the year at Belmont Park yesterday, and it is likely that he will go into retirement for the season, if not permanently.

SAILORS PLAY FOOTBALL WITH COLUMBIA ELEVEN

Champions of Battleship Alabama No Match for Collegians.

HARVARD LINE CRIPPLED

Fast Practice by Princeton Scrub Shows Weakness of 'Varsity—Light Work at Cornell.

Coach Morley put the Columbia University football candidates through the hardest practice of the season yesterday at American League Park. For an hour he lined the first eleven up against the gridiron warriors from the battleship Alabama. As the navy men were claimants for the championship of Uncle Sam's fleet last year, they were worthy opponents for Columbia to try her strength against. The meeting of the two teams came through the friendship of Morley and Midshipman Smeede, who is assisting in coaching the navy. The contest was not in the nature of a regular game, but was arranged to bring out the weak points in the play of each. Lieut. Carns, left tackle on the Annapolis team a few years ago, was head coach for the navy.

The work of the Columbia team, both in offense and defense, was the best shown thus far this season. The navy line could do little or nothing against the blue and white forwards. The visitors got the ball on their own five-yard line and were told to rush it up the field. Successive tries brought the ball to modified, but had the downs been counted the navy would not have made the distance more than once. When the Morningside collegians received the ball, however, they rushed it down the field and across the goal line in four tries at the line. Lee broke through the navy line and ran twenty-five yards for the first touchdown.

There was speed in the work of Columbia. The plays were started quickly and the team work was good. The men helped one another, often gaining five yards by such tactics after the runner was tackled. The line outweighed the navy aggregation, but even though this was the case, the attack of the men showed better effort than in the past.

Morley tried a new arrangement in the centre of the line. Duden, who has been playing guard, was shifted to tackle, and Ross took Echeverria's place at guard. Bates, who reported a few days ago, was at the other guard. The combination seemed to work much better than the old arrangement. Von Saltza, who was in at right tackle, played a star game. He broke through time and again and smashed the play before it was fairly started by the navy. Fisher was in at quarter back for a time. He has played the position a little in past years, and it looks as if Morley would try to develop him for the place. He is just as slow as Donovan, but is more powerful. Van Hovenburg, the former Columbia end, was on the field coaching the men for the wing positions. The line-up:

Alabama.	Position.	Columbia.
Armitage	Left guard	Roes
King	Centre	Algeltinger
Small	Right guard	Bates
Kneller	Right tackle	Von Saltza
Bennett	Right end	Eyre
Jacobs	Quarter back	Donnovan
Bowman	Left half back	Les
Chryetle	Right half back	Helmrich
Murphy	Full back	Starbuck

Despite the rumor that the game of football is to be altered or abolished as the result of the conference between President Roosevelt and the football coaches of Yale, Harvard, and Princeton at Washington Monday, Harvard's practice on Soldiers' Field continued as usual yesterday. The feature was the appearance of a new man at right tackle on the 'Varsity eleven. His name is Caveno, and he is a law school student, who never handled a pigskin in his life until this Fall. Although green, Caveno is powerful, fast, and heady. He is a type of the mature man like Cutte, Lee, and Blagden, and he absorbs coaching instructions like a sponge. On Monday in the scrimmage he had decidedly the better of it against Brill, and as a result he was put in at right tackle on the 'Varsity in place of Squires, who has a broken thumb. From now on the coaches will bend every effort to bring him to a point where they can utilize his 196 pounds of muscle and his great speed. Foster, left half-back, who cracked two ribs in the Maine game, is coming along nicely, but Nate Hall, at end, is wearing his arm in a sling. One touch-down was scored by the 'Varsity yesterday as the result of a blocked kick by Carr, but the second team held the 'Varsity twice for downs, once on the two-yard line.

The cool weather seemed to put new life into the players of both the first and second teams of Princeton's squad yesterday, and the practice was the best yet sene on University Field. With little Harlan at quarter, G. Brown and Hoagland as half-backs, and Hamil at full-back, the scrub had a back field which played havoc with the 'Varsity defense. Twice the ball was rushed to within striking distance of the first team's goal, only to be lost on a fumble. The probable line-up for to-day's game with Lehigh is as follows: O'Brien, left end; Cooney, left tackle; P. Waller, left guard; Carothers, centre; Rafferty, right guard; Herring, right tackle; Fryer, right end; E. Dillon, quarter-back; Daub, left half-back; Bard, right half-back; McCormick, full-back.

Again Coach Warner refused yesterday to put the Cornell 'Varsity eleven into a scrimmage. Capt. Costello, Quarter Back Rice, and Centre Hodge were kept on the hill by work. A new and promising man was on the 'Varsity for the first time. He is named Dragshinoff, and has been plugging for a position all Fall. He ran through the signals as right half back. Martin, a regular in the same position, who has been on the injured list, was out and followed the team. Several tackles back formations were worked out. Right Tackle Hallida does not participate in them, however, always playing the full back position on the offensive. The work of the eleven showed speed and more accuracy in passing than has been so far exhibited. Pollak ran the eleven well at quarter back.

Capt. Cragin of the New York University eleven has been working to get men out for the team from the Medical and Law Schools. As a result yesterday three big students came out to try for the team. All are from the Medical School. They are L. Kranz, F. O. Bishop, and James Kent. Kranz is a guard and weighs 190 pounds. The other two are backs. Mills, the coach, devoted most of his time to developing the 'Varsity's offense. This was the team's weakest point against Lehigh. With the new big men added to the squad, the team should have a fair chance of defeating Trinity at Hartford on Saturday.

The candidates for the Academy football team at Annapolis had a short signal practice in the morning and a stiff line-up in the afternoon. The work of Morton at quarter continues to give great satisfaction, and he has outstripped Decker and Needham, both good men, for the place. Morton first attracted attention last season, as an accurate drop kicker. This year he is heavier, runs the team well, and carries the ball well from his position. Bernard at half is also showing up well and may outstrip Douglass and Doherty, the veterans for the place.

GALLAGHER'S GOOD RUNS.

Veteran Billiardist Continues to Lead McLaughlin in Balk-Line Match.

When once he had caught his stroke with the cus last night "Tom" Gallagher began with a run of 44 carroms, and for his first four turns at the table averaged 24. Such a start as this in his second night of the match with Edward McLaughlin at Maurice Daly's academy caussd the ex-Philadelphian to weaken, and when Gallagher had completed his string of 300 points McLaughlin was left at 226.

Eight times while he was engaged in making his carroms at the eighteen-inch balk line game, two counts in balk, did Gallagher roll the ivory balls about for double-figure runs. His best effort was a pretty hit of nursing in the fifteenth inning, which added 64 buttons to his string. In making this run Gallagher was forced three times to masse with the balls crowded closely along the rail, which for nervy cue work excelled anything in the night's play. For the second block of points Gallagher has his allotted 600 as a grand total, while McLaughlin has only 515. The score:

Gallagher—0 44 26 25 0 1 0 5 22 4 2 13 0 1 6 4 0 1 15 8 0 5 2 8 1 0 0 0 25 4 9 0 2 0 1 2 2. Total, 300. Average, 8 20-35. High runs, 64, 44, 26. Total for two nights, 600.

FALL SPEEDWAY BRUSHING.

Trotters and Pacers Will Renew Contest for Morosini Cup To-morrow.

The best of the local trotters and pacers with amateur drivers will begin to-morrow the season of Autumn matinees upon the Speedway stretch under the auspices of the Road Drivers' Association. In all the history of the famous drive greater interest was never shown than in the coming series. More entries have been received than for th Spring matinees. The horses have been carefully classified so as to get the most stubborn contests, and all are keen to win one of the splendid trophies offered, chief of which is the cup offered by Miss Giulia Morosini for the horse winning the greatest number of heats. Cups are also offered by Walter M. Jermyn, Dr. H. D. Gill, President of the Road Drivers' Association; Paul Dana, George H. Huber, and Luke A. Burke.

In addition to the regular trotting and pacing races efforts are being made to arrange a special race for Nathan Straus's great trotter, Ida Highwood. There is also the prospect of a team race at a later matinee in which Luke A. Burke's pair, West Wilkes and El Mora, will meet another fast team. In the meantime these two fine trotters will be among the single contestants. The first brush will be called promptly at 1:30 P. M. to-morrow, and a telephone service at the finish post will keep spectators informed as to the horses starting and the winners of the respective heats and races.

YACHT ARROW SOLD.

Fastest Boat in the World Bought by Edward F. Whitney.

The speedy Arrow, the fastest boat in the world, with an accredited record of more than thirty-nine miles an hour over a measured mile, has been bought by Edward F. Whitney from Charles R. Flint. Mr. Whitney has chartered the boat for the past two seasons and had her pretty constantly in commission. Mr. Flint was loath to part with her, refusing several offers from her lessee; but terms were finally agreed upon and the transfer recorded yesterday.

The sale of the steam yacht Seneca, scheduled for yesterday afternoon at the Morse shipyards, did not come off. The yacht was held at $15,000, and, as no bid of that amount was received, the boat was withdrawn. She is a first-class steamer of 150 feet length, fitted with triple expansion engines, and worth all of the amount named, and her owners refused to allow her to be sacrificed.

The new auxiliary schooner yacht Whim, built by the Seabury Company for Mrs. T. B. McGregor of Mamaroneck, was launched yesterday at Morris Heights. She is 90 feet over all, 65 feet on the water line, and fitted with a twenty-eight horse-power, four cylinder, Speedway gasoline engine. Her masts will be stepped this week and the rest of the work on her rushed to completion in order to permit Mrs. McGregor to make a trip to Southern waters in her and spend the Winter in Florida. She will be in command of Capt. Nick Armeda.

Brooklyn Cricketers to Own Grounds.

The annual meeting of the Brooklyn Cricket Club was held in Brooklyn last night. The Treasurer's report showed that the club will be able to carry out its plan to acquire private grounds. Not only cricket, but football, tennis, lacrosse, croquet, and other outdoor pastimes will be encouraged. The report of Secretary Seale gave the best batting figures for the past season to J. L. Poyer, with an average of 28.35. A. S. Durrant was second with 20.30. The best bowling work was accomplished by H. Rushton, who captured 59 wicketa at an average of 5.82. F. A. Corbin follows with 33 wickets for 6.81.

Barney Dreyfuss Talks Baseball.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 10.—Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburg Club, came to town this morning, and in talking about baseball affairs said:

"I have not seen Harry Pulliam since last June. But I have no hard feelings against him. I know that he has made a good President of the National League, and he deserves to be elected and he will be. I intend to vote for him, and I know that every other club owner feels the same way about the matter. The present rule of the American and National Leagues will be continued for years to come. Each is well balanced and each is a money maker. I would fight any steps looking to an amalgamation.

"Who will win the world's championship?"

"That is a hard matter to say. I lean toward New York, of course, but the 'Phillies' are certainly great goers and they know the game well, as well as anybody."

Shower Bath Causes Pneumonia.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 10.—James Irsfield, star half back of the Minnesota football team and selected in 1903 for All-Western right half back, has fallen ill with pneumonia. The disease is complicated with pleurisy, and Irsfield will be out of the game this year, even if he survives the illness. He went in after practice Saturday and stood, while heated, under a cold shower for nearly twenty minutes.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

The Automobile Club of America will give a smoker and entertainment to the Vanderbilt Cup race competitors on Monday night in the clubrooms, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street. It will be an informal affair, but there will probably be speeches or short talks by the leaders in the big race.

Secretary Samuel M. Butler of the Automobile Club of America said yesterday that he had already received applications for over 500 members' and guests' tickets for breakfast privileges at the club tent, which will be placed back of the grand stand near Mineola. Breakfast will be served in the tent from 4 to 8 o'clock on Saturday morning.

The dinner and reception which is being arranged by W. J. Morgan on behalf of the New York Press Club to the foreign and American drivers in the Vanderbilt Cup race, has been postponed until next week Wednesday, Oct. 18. In addition to the contestants many automobilists of note will be invited, and a souvenir medal, characteristic of the race, will be presented to each guest.

The New York Motor Club has leased a cottage near the official grand stand for the use of its members and friends on Friday and Saturday. As many members as can be accommodated will be lodged in the cottage Friday night, and refreshments will be served during the race day.

The National economy test which is being arranged by the New York Motor Club has been postponed one week, and will start on Monday, Oct. 30. Seven entries have thus far been received, including four Franklins, one Frayer-Miller, and two Reos.

The New York Motor Club will entertain 100 members of the Chicago Press Club in an automobile ride around the parks of New York on Friday morning. Frank J. Griffin, Chairman of the committee, has secured twenty-five cars for use, and the start will be made from the club's new headquarters, the Hotel Cumberland, Broadway and Fifty-fourth Street.

Many of the foreign drivers who will compete in the Vanderbilt Cup race, have entered the one-mile contest for the Sir Thomas Dewar trophy, which will be held on Wednesday morning, Oct. 18, over the Ocean Speedway on the Coney Island Boulevard. A new straight away mile record is confidently looked for.

As the time for the Vanderbilt Cup race approaches, the contestants are engaged in trials other than speed, which are just as necessary to their successful participation. Many of the drivers are practicing in changing tires, and replenishing their water and gasoline tanks. Szisz stopped once in each round yesterday to take on water and gasoline. His Renault car has shown itself to be perfectly reliable and consistent, and these qualifications are also shared by the driver and mechanic.

MORE AUTO TROUBLES FOR THE GERMAN TEAM

Warden's Car Cracks Its Cylinders and Cannot Race.

SZISZ MAKES FAST TIME

Observers to be Placed on Competing Cars at Close of Contest—Hundreds of Tires to be Provided.

More misfortune befell the German Vanderbilt Cup team yesterday, and indications now point to only three of the big German Mercedes machines as starters in Saturday's race. The two cylinders in John B. Warden's car cracked just as he was finishing his first round over the Long Island course early yesterday morning. Strenuous efforts were made during the day to secure new cylinders, but the prospect is very dubious and the belief was general among the officials at the Garden City Hotel that there would be but eighteen starters in the race. Mr. Warden, who has only been practicing on the course for three or four days, was making his first round satisfactorily when, near Hyde Park, he noticed that the motors were not working satisfactorily. Suddenly the car stopped and investigation showed that the cylinders were cracked, due to overheating. The accident was primarily due to the breaking of the water connection between the radiator and the cylinders.

The superstitious drivers on the course were quick to attribute the ill-luck of the German team to the fact that the Germans drew number 13. Warden's number, however, was No. 9, while S. B. Stevens's Mercedes, which was to have started in thirteenth place, will be designated by the letter "X." With the Warden car out of the race the thirteenth car to start will be George Heath's Panhard, which will bear No. 14. Mr. Heath is taking his chances of victory cooler than almost any other driver. He did not put in an appearance at the track yesterday until late in the day.

Fourteen of the contestants were out on the course with their big racing cars between the hours of 5:30 and 7:30 in the morning. There was a noticeable slackening of high-speed efforts. The Frenchman, Szisz, was the only one who attempted to make fast time for a long distance. He circled the course three times in his 80-horse power Renault, making the 85 miles in 70 minutes. This is an average of a little less than 26½ minutes for each 28 1-3 mile round, one of the most consistent as well as fastest exhibitions made in practice by any of the competitors. Szisz has made a very methodical study of the course, and watchers who have observed him say that he understands to a dot just the proper fraction of speed to shut off in taking the dangerous turns. He is well satisfied with the course, too.

The only other member of the French team out was Wagner, who made one round in 28:10 in his big Darracq car. Duray put the finishing touches to his 130-horse power De Dietrich car, and said he would not take it out again until the morning of the race. He will use his second car hereafter in practice.

All of the Italians except Chevrolet went over the course, Nazzaro making one fast round in 26:40, Cedrino did 28:30, Sartori, in Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Fiat, went around easily in 35 minutes, while Lancia, the favorite, had fire troubles and took over 50 minutes for his single round. Foxhall Keene also had tire troubles, and was 50 minutes making his round.

Jenatzy did the best of the German team, making two rounds, one in 29 minutes. Campbell made a slow round in S. B. Stevens's Mercedes. None of the American drivers attempted fast time. Dingley did one round in 32:30 and Tracy was satisfied with 33:30. Walter White and Walter Christie drove slowly, and Lytle will not resume practice until to-day.

The reoiling of the course, which began Monday, was concluded yesterday. In all 10,000 gallons of oil have been sprinkled over the twenty-eight-mile circuit this week, and the Jericho turnpike presented a greasy, mushy surface. Provided there is no rain this week, the roads will be perfect for fast time on Saturday. Chairman Robert Lee Morrell said that 60,000 gallons of oil have been sprinkled over the route within the last six weeks.

Mr. Morrell, with Asa Goddard and A. L. Riker, spent several hours inspecting the worst places on the course. They found two bad spots at the Guinea Road turn and at the Lakeville turn. Both of these are dangerous, and the big cars have plowed deep ruts in the road as they have swept around at the sharpest possible angle. These turns will be banked, and the railroad crossing near Mineola is being improved.

Mr. Riker also made arrangements to have observers appointed for every racing car as it finished. In order to prevent congestion on the track at the finish, the racing cars will be required to continue to Albertson's, where they will be weighed. The observers will be taken in automobiles from Krug's corner over a back road, meeting the cars near East Norwich, and accompanying them to the weighing-in station.

Several gangs of tire repair men arrived yesterday and were distributed at the tire controls. Some idea of the value of the tires that will be in readiness for the cars may be had from the fact that the American tires alone will aggregate in value close to $40,000. Five hundred tires will be kept in readiness for the five American cars, 100 being at each of the tire stations around the course. Five men will be in attendance at each of these controls, and tents were being erected yesterday for the storage of tires and other necessities.

Association Football Candidates.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Metropolitan Association Football League was held at the Cosmopolitan Hotel yesterday, and the following teams were selected for the final test match on Saturday at Cosmopolitan Park, Newark. The game will determine the selection of the international eleven to meet the English team on Oct. 21.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Higher; Call Money Rates, 4½@6 Per Cent.

Market Recovers Part of Recent Losses—Helped by Great Northern "Melon" and Crop Report.

It is one of Wall Street's theories that a rally follows three days of falling prices and the recoveries made by stocks in yesterday's market will be accepted as additional confirmation of the theory. Opening well above Monday's last quotations, the active issues advanced a point or more by midday. Thereafter, however, the trading became less general, concentrating on specialties, so that at the end of the day the extreme advances were confined to these issues, while the general list was only fractionally above the level of the previous day. The volume of transactions was smaller than on Monday. The largest gains were made by Delaware and Hudson, 5¼ points; Canadian Pacific, 3¼ points; Consolidated Gas, 2½ points; Manhattan, 2¼ points, and Great Northern preferred, 2½ points.

The rise in Great Northern preferred was due to the announcement of the long-awaited "melon cutting." It has been the policy of the management of the road to cover capital expenditures by stock rather than by bond issues, and this policy is continued in the present case. The new issue goes to stockholders at par to the extent of 20 per cent. of their holdings, and the right to subscribe under these conditions was valued at 37 in the outside market. This announcement, together with the declaration of an initial dividend of 1 per cent. on the common stock of the United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company, the object of no little speculation in recent markets, gave a fillip to the morning trading. Afternoon the upward movement was largely sustained by the publication of the Government's October crop report, which gave final confirmation to the previous belief that all in all the year's harvests have been the most satisfactory ever garnered on American farms. At a condition of 89.2, representing only a nominal decline from the September condition, the indicated corn crop is 2,707,000,000 bushels, 185,000,000 bushels above the record crop of 1902, and as only a negligible percentage of the crop is still exposed to danger from frost, the indicated figures doubtless represent, approximately, the final yield. Untoward conditions during the thrashing season resulted in a curtailment of the Spring wheat outturn, the loss being estimated at 22,000,000 bushels. The final yield is put at 260,000,000 bushels, giving, with the Winter yield, a total crop of 683,000,000 bushels, an outturn surpassed only by the 748,000,000 bushel crop of 1901. It is worthy of note that the quality of Spring wheat is placed at 89, comparing with 75.7 in 1904 and 85.5 in 1903.

Other devlopments of interest included the publication of the annual reports of the Southern Railway, showing increases of $3,000,000 in gross and $1,000,000 in net earnings, and of the Eries, which, by economy in all but equipment purchase, lost only $133,000 net after gaining some $500,000 in gross earnings. The Great Northern reported an increase of over $1,000,000 in gross earnings for August. The banks gained from the Sub-Treasury, reducing their previous loss of $1,000,000 to $600,000. Exchange rates advanced and the Bank of England was reported as buying gold in the market, while France was making inquiries for the metal in London. No engagements were made. The visit of a member of a prominent local banking house to Russia in connection with that country's loan may foreshadow a heavier American participation than had been expected.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Reading contributed about one-half of the day's local sales to-day. For the greater part of the day the stock was well bought by important commission houses, but the price shaded off on selling said to be due to disappointment that the Jersey Central dividend had not been increased. Lehigh Valley acted similarly, early advancing, then falling back at the close. These were the only features, although some interest was displayed in the buying of Philadelphia Company, the bulk of the stock being taken by a house that had long been a seller. Bonds were dull and firm.

Total sales, 29,945 shares.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Money was fairly plentiful in the market to-day, and the rates were easier. The Bank of England is securing most of the gold due to-day.

Five million dollars in gold left Bombay Oct. 8 for London. Discounts were easy on the improvement in Paris Exchange and the continued expectation that the Bank of France will assist in meeting the Egyptian and American demands for gold.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was cheerful, and there was less nervousness regarding the gold outlook, but realizations in many sections checked business. Weak bulls were less numerous, many of them having been shaken out by the recent sharp fall in prices. Transactions were restricted in view of the settlement. Consols recovered, stimulating other departments, but relapsed later on renewed monetary forebodings. Home rails were firmer on the trade returns showing that business is improving.

Americans opened dull and well below parity, but recovered a fraction with the other departments. But the tone was undecided, local operators were conservative, and the market closed quiet. Canadian Pacific was in exceptionally good demand.

Foreigners were firmer on Paris support. Japanese were harder.

Japanese Imperial 6s of 1905 were quoted at 101⅞.

Bar silver steady at 28⅜d per ounce.

Bar gold, 77s 9¼d. American eagles, 76s 4½d.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 27.05; Lisbon, 5.

Bullion amounting to £64,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day, and the sum of £5,000 was withdrawn for shipment to Oporto.

President Hill Announces Plans for Issuing It.

SHARES RISE ON THE NEWS

Proceeds of the Sale Will Be Used for New Equipment and to Purchase More Property.

President James J. Hill of the Great Northern Railway announced yesterday that the Directors of that road have decided upon the issue of $25,000,000 of new stock, which will be offered to the present shareholders at par. Great Northern stock rose 4 points on the news, and after a partial reaction closed with a net gain of 2½ points. The rights to subscribe to the new stock were dealt in on the curb at prices ranging from 35½ to 37, which fixes the value attached to the new stock subscription. Each holder of 100 shares of Great Northern preferred who disposes of his rights, say, at 35, receives the equivalent of a 35 per cent. cash dividend as a result of the increase in the company's capital stock.

In his circular to the stockholders President Hill says:

"Since March, 1901, when the last issue of the capital stock of this company was offered to you for subscription, the rapid expansion of the business of your company has made necessary large expenditures for new lines and property. For a portion of such expenditures your Directors authorized financial arrangements of a temporary character, on account of the litigation in which your company was then involved.

"That litigation being ended, it is considered advisable that permanent provision should now be substituted for such temporary arrangements, and that funds be provided to pay for additional equipment, for the stocks and bonds, or both, of your subsidiary companies, and for such other securities and property as the expansion of the system may require and your Board of Directors may authorize from time to time to be acquired.

"Believing that funds for these purposes may best be provided by an increase of the capital stock of the company, your Directors have adopted resolutions, subject to your ratification, providing for the issuance at par of 250,000 additional shares of stock of $100 each, like in all respects to that now outstanding.

"Subscriptions, or assignments of rights to subscribe, will be accepted by the company as assents to the issuance of such stock, and as equivalent to a resolution of the stockholders to that effect.

"The subscriptions will be deemed binding and effective only when the holders of three-fourths of the stock now outstanding shall have filed their subscriptions or their assignments of rights to subscribe."

Holders of Great Northern preferred as registered Nov. 8 will be entitled to subscribe for one new share for each five shares they may hold. Payment for the new stock is to be made in four equal installments of 25 per cent., on Dec. 18, this year, and on Jan. 18, Feb. 19, and March 19, 1906. The new stock will take rank with the present stock as of Feb. 2, 1906.

The issuance of new stock for expenditures chargeable to capital account is in keeping with the Great Northern's policy. Mr. Hill has adhered to the plan of paying for improvements by the issue of stock instead of by the issue of bonds, and the Great Northern has at various times in the past issued stock for purposes similar to those of the present issue.

In the annual report of the Great Northern for the year 1904 it was pointed out that the amount spent for capital account during the three years ended June 30, 1904, was $23,499,894. Thus the entire proceeds of the present stock issue will be only a little more than enough to make up for these expenditures, irrespective of any that have been incurred for similar purposes in the past year.

FIRST COMMON DIVIDEND.

United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company Declares It.

The Directors of the United States Cast-Iron, Pipe and Foundry Company declared an initial dividend of 1 per cent. on the common stock yesterday. The preferred stock has paid an annual dividend of 7 per cent. since 1899, and the regular quarterly allotment of 1¾ per cent. will be paid with the common stock dividend on Dec. 1.

On the Exchange the common stock acted in the seemingly illogical manner which is often noticed after good news. It went down instead of up, probably because of profit-taking by those who had bought long ago on advance news of the dividend.

George B. Hayes is President of the company and George J. Long of Louisville is Vice President. Among the Directors are E. R. Thomas, Anthony N. Brady, and Colgate Hoyt. The total outstanding stock is $25,000,000, divided equally between common and preferred. Included in the company are the following: Lake Shore Foundry, (Cleveland;) McNeal Pipe and Foundry Company, (Burlington, N. J.;) National Foundry and Pipe Works, (Scottdale, Penn.;) Buffalo Cast-Iron Pipe Company, (Buffalo;) Ohio Pipe Company, (Columbus;) Dennis, Long & Co., (Louisville;) Wisconsin Steel Company, (West Superior, Wis.;) Addyston Pipe and Steel Company, (Cincinnati,) and the American Pipe and Foundry Company.

TO THE HOLDERS OF

First Preferred, Second preferred and Common Stock

OF THE

ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY

On September 20, 1905, the Board of Directors authorized the issue of $12,000,000 of the Four Per Cent. Convertible Gold Bonds of the Erie Railroad Company secured by its General Mortgage dated April 1, 1903, for the purpose, among other things as specified in said mortgage, of acquiring more than a majority of the shares of common capital stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company.

These new convertible bonds are to be designated as Series B. The bonds are to be dated October 1, 1905, maturing April 1, 1953, with interest payable semi-annually on April 1 and October 1, and at the option of the holder they are to be convertible at par into common stock of the Company at $60 per share, at any time after two years and before twelve years from the date of the bonds. Their issue has been authorized by the Board of Railroad Commissioners, to whom application will be made to authorize the stock increase necessary for such conversion.

The General Mortgage authorizes the issue of $50,000,000 convertible bonds. $10,000,000 of such bonds (designated as Series A and convertible into common stock of the Company at 50 as therein stated) have heretofore been issued and appropriated as proposed in the Erie Circular to stockholders dated February 16, 1903. Upon the issue of the $12,000,000 Series B bonds above described, the total amount outstanding under the said General Mortgage will be $22,000,000. The General Mortgage covers the railroad, property, and franchises of the Erie Railroad Company therein described, and also will cover the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway stock acquired with proceeds of the Series B bonds.

There is now offered to the registered stockholders of the Erie Railroad Company on October 21, 1905, a preferential opportunity ratably to subscribe for and to take the $12,000,000 Series B bonds at par and accrued interest. The Company has entered into a contract with Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., as Managers of an Underwriting Syndicate (in which themselves and other members of the Board of Directors are included), whereby the Underwriting Syndicate, for a commission of 2½ per cent. of the par amount of said $12,000,000 Series B bonds, has agreed to take any and all of said $12,000,000 Series B bonds which shall not be taken by the stockholders under this offer.

For the purpose of determining the right to subscribe to said bonds, the stock transfer books of the Company will be closed at three o'clock P. M. on October 21, 1905, and will be reopened November 15, 1905, at ten o'clock A. M.

Only stockholders registered as such on the transfer books on October 21, 1905, will be entitled to subscribe for the Series B bonds. Holders of First Preferred, Second Preferred, or Common Stock will be entitled to subscribe for $6.75 of the Series B bonds for each $100 par value of stock registered in their name. Suitable subscription warrants will be issued to each stockholder specifying the amount of bonds to which such stockholder is entitled to subscribe.

Payments for the Series B bonds are to be made in full on or before November 27, 1905, at par and accrued interest. The privilege of subscription may be sold in whole or in part, and the warrants will bear an appropriate form of assignment for this purpose.

No subscription or assignment thereof will be recognized unless made on the warrants furnished by the Company.

Stockholders residing in Great Britain or Europe may make their subscription and payment at the office of Messrs. J. S. Morgan & Co., 22 Old Broad Street, London, E. C., England, who are authorized to receive the same for transmission to New York at a rate of exchange of which due notice will be given.

Holders of Stock Trust Certificates must exchange the same for Stock Certificates so as to be able to subscribe.

Idaho Has Never Known
a crop failure, and its farms (5,000,000 acres) give 62½% more yield per acre, and 65% more value per acre, than the U. S. average. (This is the U. S. Agricultural Department's report.) Such fertility as this, with demand greater than supply, and the industry constantly growing, is a substantial assurance of continued prosperity. High rates of interest are paid, yet with complete security. The rates pay the borrower well, and pay the lender easily double what he could get in the East.

C., H. & D. NOW FORMALLY UNDER ERIE CONTROL

Stockholders Ratify the Purchase of a Majority Interest.

ERIE YEAR SHOWS LOSS IN NET

President Underwood Reports That Operating and Maintenance Expenses Will Be Less in Future.

The stockholders of the Erie Railroad at their annual meeting yesterday ratified the purchase of a controlling interest in the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railway. W. P. Hamilton of J. P. Morgan & Co. was elected a Director in the place of Assistant Secretary of State Robert Bacon, who resigned two weeks ago.

The annual report of the Erie Railroad published yesterday shows a small increase in gross earnings, which was more than offset by increased expenses resulting in a slight loss in net, as compared with the previous year. The gross amounted to $45,724,737, compared with $45,201,163 in 1904, the net to $12,582,529, as compared with $12,619,325 in 1904, a decrease of $36,795. The increase in operating expenses, which amounted to $33,142,208, as compared with $32,581,838 the previous year, was due almost entirely to the increased cost of maintenance of equipment. The cost of maintenance of way and structure, which the previous year had been increased by the floods which occurred in October, 1903, was smaller by $403,946 last year than in 1904.

President F. D. Underwood announces in his report to the stockholders that the necessary property for the changes and extensions of the Jersey City terminal has been acquired by the company. In regard to the arrangement entered into with the Erie and Jersey Railroad, which is to construct the cut-off from Highland Hills to Mount Hope on the Erie main line, the report states that as much as possible of the Erie's through freight is to be carried over the Erie and Jersey line. The arrangement is expected materially to reduce the cost of transportaton.

The income account shows that after the payment of dividends on the first and second preferred stocks, and setting aside $1,860,555 for additions and improvement, there was left a balance of $490,344 available for dividends on the common, or a little more than four-tenths of 1 per cent. on the $112,378,000 of common stock.

Considerable expense was incurred in the year in having locomotives repaired in outside shops, the facilities of the company being insufficient to care for all of its equipment. The completion of new repair shops is expecto to considerably lessen this particular item of expense. There was charged to capital account for new construction $1,026,236. In the year $6,500,000 of the company's convertible bonds were issued, representing the balance of the original issue of $10,000,000 of these bonds.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 10.—The plan for the absorption of the Great Central system by the Erie Railway was formally carried into effect to-day. By the terms of the transfer the Directors of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton become Directors of the Erie Railway. Of these Directors the terms of four expired to-day, their successors being Russell Harding of Cincinnati, Richard M. Young of New York, Thomas J. Walsh, Secretary of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Company, and John E. Bruce, who was Mr. Zimmerman's counsel in the Erie deal. Walsh and Bruce succeeded J. J. Robinson of Toledo and Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., of this city, the other two being re-elections.

At the Directors' meeting resolutions were passed transferring the 999-year lease of the Père Marquette held by the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton to the Erie and modifying the contract with the Toledo Railway and Terminal Company, so that it may be absorbed by the Erie. Out of a possible total of 160,000 shares 142,966 were voted at the meeting. Of this number 141,855 shares were voted by Mr. Zimmerman. Mr. Zimmerman's large holding, which was by proxy from the owners in New York, allowed him to name the new Directors.

ERIE IN WISCONSIN ROAD?

Newman Erb's Election, Interpreted at Milwaukee—Duluth to Coast Plan.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 10.—"New and strong interests have come into the Wisconsin Central property," says an official statement issued after the annual meeting to-day. "No change is intended in the plans or policies of the company; on the contrary, it will be enabled to push its plans more vigorously.

"Two changes have been made in the Board of Directors to give these new interests representation. Newman Erb of New York and G. M. Cumming, President of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, New York, are the new members of the Board of Directors."

Newman Erb succeeds John Crosby Brown of New York and Mr. Cumming was elected to the place held by Joseph S. Dale of New York. The Directors will elect the officers in New York next month. The gross earnings for the year ended on June 30, 1905, were $6,650,883, against $6,466,176 for the previous year. The net earnings were $2,276,547, against $2,123,737 for the year ended on June 30, 1904.

The Journal says:

"As sized up by Milwaukee financial interests and railroad men, the changes indicate a desire on the part of the Erie Railroad to get control of the Wisconsin Central in order to get a short route by car ferry to Manitowoc for a connection with the Great Northern Railroad at Minneapolis and Ashland. Former officers of the Père Marquette Railroad have obtained interests in the line. The Père Marquette Road was recently absorbed by the Erie system."

The Evening Wisconsin says the new interests in the Wisconsin Central present quite clearly the probability of a big combination of traffic interests which will eventually form a strong, direct through route from Duluth and Minneapolis to the seaboard.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Yesterday, for the first time in several weeks, the stock market was less active on a recovery in prices than it had been on the reaction immediately preceding it. Transactions fell off about one third as compared with the volume of Monday's trading, and whereas prices on Monday were reactionary, the tendency yesterday was the other way. Hitherto the activity has been all on the bull side of the market. The buying yesterday was neither aggressive nor sustained, except in several specialties and in one or two stocks controlled by pools, notably Canadian Pacific, which advanced 3¼ per cent., and closed at the highest eighth of the day. The pool in Reading made its stock prominent, advancing it 1⅝ per cent. and closing it at a net gain of 1 per cent. Other prominent stocks, in which the speculative interest is more general, closed at fractional advances. Union Pacific had a maximum advance of 1¼ per cent., but ended with a net advance of only ⅝ per cent.

⁂

The bull element was favored by the Hill announcement, the monthly crop report, and easier call money. The market's response to these combined influences, however, could hardly be called enthusiastic, and the recovery in prices doubtless was due more to the fact that in the absence of selling pressure it was easier to advance stocks than to depress them. Monday's selling mood had passed, and traders were more inclined to bid for stocks than to offer them. Various pools took advantage of the more hopeful speculative feeling to put activity into their stocks. The market was made largely in specialties. Union Bag and Paper was more active than Southern Pacific, and American Locomotive common was more active than Union Pacific.

⁂

The greatest corn crop is now safe.

⁂

The Erie's annual report shows a margin of only 4-10 of 1 per cent. over the dividends now being paid in the first and second preferred stocks, and the common stock is selling around 49. The second preferred stock was put on a 4 per cent. dividend basis only recently. The slender margin of surplus over the preferred dividends accounts for the fact that the first preferred stock, paying 4 per cent., sells only a little above 80 and the second preferred stock; also paying 4 per cent., sells a little above 70. This recent bull campaign in Erie common, which carried the stock over 52, was open to the criticism that either the preferred stocks were selling too low or the common stock was selling too high. People bought the preferred stocks believing that they would have to be moved up if the campaign in the common stock continued. It did not continue, however, and it is now believed that a large speculative distribution of Erie common occurred above 50. The preferred stocks have been very disappointing to recent purchasers.

⁂

On the announcement of the initial dividend on Cast Iron Pipe common the stock advanced fractionally, and then broke 2½ points. It rallied, but closed, however, at a decline of 1½ per cent. There has recently been an active Wall Street speculation in Cast Iron Pipe shares, especially the common stock, in anticipation of this dividend.

⁂

Abrupt and violent fluctuations in low priced industrial stocks, as, for example, the sharp setback yesterday in Cast Iron Pipe, are calculated to prolong the prejudice with which the conservative commission house element has always regarded that class of securities. Such incidents are particularly unhappy at a time when efforts are being made to turn speculative attention in the direction of cheap industrials. The average pool, as experience goes, makes a very poor market in stocks of this character, and it is no wonder that they are discriminated against by margin speculators. People much prefer to trade in stocks that fluctuate steadily in eighths and are not subject to violent movements.

⁂

The paper stocks—International Paper and Union Bag and Paper—became more active yesterday and were very strong. The basis for this movement in Union Bag and Paper is a decision from the United States Circuit Court of Portland, Me., sustaining the company's patents and also its claims against the Continental Paper Bag Company and appointing a master to obtain an accounting of what is due the Union Bag and Paper Company in the way of profits and damages.

⁂

Every new dividend that is declared makes it so much harder for bears to sell stocks short. He who sells a stock short pays the dividend on it.

⁂

The announcement of a "melon cutting" for the stockholders of Great Northern preferred was one of the things to which the bull element had been looking forward. It will be followed shortly the Hill following assumes, by the announcement of a deal whereby the United States Steel Corporation will take over the Great Northern's wonderful ore properties. This ought to have a more general effect upon the stock market, it is thought, than yesterday's announcement of an issue of $25,000,000 new Great Northern stock available to stockholders at par. The subscription rights on this new stock are worth 37½, with Great Northern stock selling at 325, the price at which it closed yesterday, after an advance of 4¼ per cent., to 326⅝. This transaction, it is said, is but the beginning of a series of transactions by which the market position of Hill securities will be altered. It is expected that the ore deal will be even more profitable to holders of Great Northern stock than the right to subscribe to this new stock at par. A curious feature of the pending ore deal is that the contemplation of it has made the Hill following bullish on United States Steel stocks.

⁂

It is assumed that the offer of new Great Northern stock at par will hasten the conversion of the remaining shares of Northern Securities stock. The only way in which holders of old Northern Securities stock may participate in the Great Northern subscription is to convert their Northern Securities into Great Northern and Northern Pacific shares, according to the terms of dissolution. There is a great deal of speculation as to the interest which the Union Pacific may have in the transaction. It is known that Union Pacific holdings of both Great Northern and Northern Pacific stock have been coming quietly on the market. The holdings of Great Northern stock are so closely accounted for that nobody can sell it without the fact becoming known. The Union Pacific selling referred to has been done in a leisurely manner. There are prices at which the Union Pacific interests are willing to part with their Hill stocks, and as these prices are reached in the market the stocks appear for sale. The buying, of course, is all by the Hill following.

⁂

An attempt was made to bull Union Pacific on the Great Northern announcement, and the stock was advanced 1¼ per cent., to 133, but there was the same opposition that has invariably appeared of late as often as anybody has tried to make a demonstration in Union Pacific. The interests controlling both Union Pacific and Southern Pacific in their ultimate movements are understood not to be enthusiastic over the general stock market situation, and although they have not yet tried to turn their stocks aggressively to the bear side of the market, they have apparently not been willing that anybody else should bull them to advantage. The market for Union Pacific has become rather narrow.

⁂

Canadian Pacific was widely tipped at the opening yesterday for an advance, and the movement occurred. There was also an urgent bull tip on Amalgamated Copper. It was not made good.

TWO THOUSAND BANKERS ATTENDING CONVENTION

Association's Annual Session Begins at Washington To-day.

SAVINGS BANK STATISTICS

To be Gathered by the Secretary of the Section—Will Be an Index of the Country's Prosperity.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—More than 2,000 bankers have registered their attendance at the thirty-first annual session of the American Bankers' Association, which will convene in the New National Theatre here to-morrow. Meetings of several sections of the association were held to-day, when important action affecting various phases of the banking interests was taken.

At the meeting of the Trust Company section the question of Federal control of trust companies was referred to somewhat evasively. No one came out squarely in advocacy of it, but each speaker voiced a decided sentiment in favor of adequate inspection.

The Savings Bank Section voted to make an experiment in taking statistics of savings accounts throughout the country. A Publicity Section was organized and various committee meetings were held.

To-night the officers and Executive Council of the association were the guests of the local bankers at a banquet at the New Willard Hotel.

In his annual address to the Trust Company Section to-day, President Potter said he did not wish to go on record as to whether or not there should be Federal control of trust companies, but he wished emphatically to urge "frequent and rigid examinations, whether State or Federal."

President E. J. Stellwagen of the Union Trust Company of Washington wanted the section to raise its standard for greater charter requirements along the line of the National Bank act, "to make it impossible for disaster born of carelessness, fraud, or corruption to overtake trust companies."

It was stated by Clark Williams of New York, Vice President of the committee, to secure State legislation for supervision of trust companies and to prohibit the use of the word "trust" by organizations which are not monetary corporations, that twenty-one States had specific supervision laws respecting trust companies, while four States—Arkansas, Ohio, Tennessee, and Virginia—had no laws whatever as to trust companies. In these four States were 112 trust companies, and in the twenty-one States having laws were 751 companies, showing that 76 per cent. of the trust companies of the country were regulated by State legislation. Nine States now prohibited the use of the word "trust" by other than monetary corporations.

It was stated by E. T. Perrine, General Manager of the Audit Company of New York, that at the present time there were 1,547 trust companies in the United States, having resources aggregating $3,802,000,000; 5,737 National banks, with resources of $7,472,000,000, and 1,157 savings banks, with $3,175,000,000; that the total active life insurance resources were something less than $2,500,000,000; that the currency in the United States Treasury was $2,885,000,000, and that the commercial value of steam railways was $11,250,000,000. From these figures it was deduced that the trust companies retain one-tenth of the banking power of the world, estimated at $33,000,000,000.

The Savings Bank Section was addressed by its Chairman, Charles E. Sprague, President of the Union Savings Institution of New York. He defined the specific function of savings banks as distinguished from the general banking business. They were, he said, the keepers of the savings of the industrial classes of the country, while bankers were the custodians of the money of the business and manufacturing interests. He urged the necessity of annual statistics regarding savings banks. Now, he said, these statistics were not segregated as a rule from the general banking business, and were therefore valueless as data on which to form conclusions regarding savings banks.

W. B. Ridgley, Controller of the Currency, advocated some system of Federal control of savings banks, although, he said, this should not be "interference," but "intervention."

The Savings Bank Section unanimously decided to begin the taking of statistics of money in savings banks, &c. These statistics are to be gathered by the Secretary of the section through the co-operation of the banks which are members. The first statistics called for are to show the amount of money on deposit, the number of depositors, and the amount of interest paid on Dec. 31 of the years 1903, 1904, and 1905.

It was contended in the discussion that the prosperity or depression of the industrial classes would be correctly indexed in the movement of money in and out of savings banks, and that it would furnish a correct indication of the condition of the country.

Secretary Hanhart of New York stated that when President Roosevelt was Police Commissioner of New York he had savings deposit statistics compiled conjointly with his enforcement of the Sunday closing of saloons. These statistics showed that the Monday morning deposits in the savings banks were much heavier during the Sunday closing period than theretofore.

The following officers were elected by the Savings Bank Section:

President—Edward D. Duff, Vice President People's Savings Bank, Pittsburg; Vice President—G. Byron Latimer, Secretary Irving Savings Institution, New York; three members of the Executive Committee to serve for three years—C. C. Purves, President Philadelphia Savings Fund Society; John F. Flack, President City Savings Bank, Omaha; J. H. Johnson, Cashier Peninsular Savings Bank, Detroit.

The Trust Company Section elected the following officers:

President—Clark Williams, President of the New York and London Trust Company, New York; Vice President—Festus J. Wade, President Mercantile Trust Company, St. Louis; Executive Committee—W. L. McDonald, St. Louis; H. P. McIntosh, Cleveland; J. E. Otis, Chicago; L. H. Dencons, New Orleans, and J. F. Thompson, New York.

The organization of the Banking Publicity Association of the United States as a section of the association was perfected. Its object is to conduct a campaign of education as to the benefits and advantages of banking institutions to the people.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY GAINS.

President Spencer Informs Stockholders of a Large Increase in Business.

The gross earnings of the Southern Railway Company for the year ended June 30 last were $48,145,108, an increase of $3,065,331 over those of the previous year. The net earnings increased $1,068,284, from $11,994,310 to $13,062,594. The increase in total income was $1,285,942. After all deductions the balance carried to the credit of profit and loss was $1,095,082, as compared with $888,488 on June 30, 1904.

In his report President Samuel Spencer tells of many improvements and additions made in 1903-4. The number of locomotives on hand on June 30 was 1,281, an increase of more than 11 per cent. over the supply a year before. The increase in the number of freight cars was 5,848.

"The gross earnings per mile of road," says President Spencer, "for the year ended June 30, 1905, were $6,687, as compared with $6,279 for the previous year, an increase of 6½ per cent. Revenues from passengers during the year increased 10.10 per cent., while the average rate per passenger per mile decreased 1.89 per cent.

"Revenues from freight increased during the year 5.73 per cent. The average freight earnings per train mile increased 3.59 per cent."

President Spencer devotes one section of his report to the industrial development along the lines of the Southern. He says:

Along the lines of the Southern Railway Company during the year there were completed and put into operation 46 textile mills, 34 furniture factories, 38 iron industries, 6 tanneries, 77 stone quarries and coal mines, 13 cottonseed oil plants, 8 fertilizer works, and more than 500 smaller industries. Over 250 previously existing plants were enlarged during the year and 54 new industries were under construction at the close of the year. Immigration to and investment of foreign capital in the territory served by the Southern's lines during the year were greater than in any previous year in the history of the company.

The income account, showing comparison with 1903-4, is as follows:

	1905.	1904.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—The local money market is practically unchanged. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 5½@6 per cent.; time loans on collateral, 4¾@5 per cent.; time loans on mercantile paper, 4¾@5 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 5 per cent.; New York funds, 15c discount; clearings, $27,974,172; balances, $1,930,000; Sub-Treasury debit, $58,086.

Our market is still quiet and firm, but showing more life than yesterday. Few stocks were in sight at going prices this morning, and traders bid them up a little. Isle Royale was the feature, gaining over 2 points on fairly active trading. Allouez also came in a for a good share of activity and strength, while Victoria reached a new high level. There is perhaps a little hesitation about making the market active and higher, on account of the high money rates, but these stocks appear to be in good demand at all times. Closing prices were strong at their best. Complete list of transactions follows:

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—New York exchange was 10 cents discount. Time and call loans, 4@5 per cent.

Business on the local Exchange was rather dull to-day, but prices were firm, and good gains were shown in several instances. Oak Park Elevated preferred sold at 20¼ early, about the high price since its recent weakness. Can preferred went at 72. Edison was firm at 160 and Quaker Oats sold at 105½, very near high record price. Oats preferred held near par. In Box Board shares there was some backing and filling around recent levels.

Refunds on Imitation Pearls.

As a result of adverse decisions in the Federal courts, the Board of United States General Appraisers has begun to decide 4,000 protests filed by importers regarding the rate of duty applicable to imitation pearls. It has been decided by the courts that the Treasury Department has no right to charge duty at the rate of 45 per cent. on imitation pearls. The cases have accumulated on the files of the customs tribunal during the test litigation in the courts. As fast as the cases are decided refunds will follow.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—There was an early advance in the wheat market, followed by reaction and a rather weak close at unchanged prices from the previous day. Further bull support was responsible for most of the early advance, while the bearish Government figures induced a lot of selling after midday. On Spring wheat a total of 258,911,000 bushels was indicated, compared with 219,464,000 bushels harvested last year. The crowd found itself more or less loaded up with wheat when the report came out, and spent most of the afternoon in getting rid of its load. The advices from abroad were somewhat conflicting. Liverpool closed net unchanged, but private advices contained a confirmation of the short crop in Russia, while attention was called to the fact that Russian newspapers were still talking about famine conditions in that country. The Russian exports, however, are expected to continue large for some time to come, as the possibility of Government prohibition at any time tends to reduce port stocks rapidly with a view to getting as much wheat out of the country as possible before such a contingency should arise. There were further reports from Duluth during the afternoon about export sales to Germany, but the amount could not be learned. At Minneapolis the stock of wheat has increased 700,000 bushels in the last three days. Paris markets closed 5@10 points net lower, and Berlin was ½ mark higher. The weather map showed rains in Winter wheat States, where they are needed, and a lot of frost in the Northwest, where there is nothing in the wheat line that can be harmed. The Michigan State report estimated a yield of 19,000,000 bushels, against 6,873,000 bushels last year. No. 2 red wheat in New York closed at 89⅛c, elevator, and 90⅜c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 92⅝c, and No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, 92⅛c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—Responding to low temperatures in the West corn had an early advance at Chicago, part of which was subsequently lost under realizing and short selling, due to the Government report. This indicated a yield of 2,707,517,000 bushels, compared with last year's actual crop of 2,467,000,000 bushels. October was the strongest option at the West, being affected by small carlot estimates for to-day, and lighter receipts for the day than expected. At New York the market was relatively firmer than West, owing to the light stocks and the Buffalo grain blockade. The Government condition on corn was 89.2, or slightly under the previous month. Cables were ⅛d net higher. No. 2 corn closed at 61c, elevator, and 61c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 61½c, and No. 2 yellow, 62c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market was generally firm on covering and predictions for frosts in the northern part of the Western belt. The close was 2 or 3 points down from the best, but steady at a net advance of 19@24 points. Sales were estimated at 450,000 bales.

The opening was firm at an advance of 8@12 points on better cables than looked for, reports of rains in the belt, and a better understanding of the census figures of the previous day. According to reports some operators took the census figures, showing the season's distribution as meaning the year's production, thus aiding the big break of Monday, and covering by these sellers after the opening soon had prices up to a net gain of 20@22 points. The big estimates for yesterday's receipts encouraged bear sentiment, however, and in spite of the cold weather just north of the belt offerings increased on the advance, and prices sagged back to about the opening figures. Later official predictions for frost in Arkansas, the Territories, and Western Texas rallied the market, and the high points was reached in the late trading. The weekly crop report was considered about a stand-off, and indicated comparatively little change in the general condition of the crop.

The crop is late in the sections for which frost is predicted, and if the temperatures decline to the freezing point material damage may result and swing sentiment around in favor of small crop estimates once more. But it is quite possible that the cold snap may pass without material harm, and sentiment still appears to be of a rather bearish average, for while private advices claim firm interior holders the large receipts argue that plenty of cotton is available at present prices. Southern spot markets, according to official reports, were unchanged to 1-16c lower.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 10.—Spot cotton—A fair business doing; sales, 8,000 bales; speculation and export, 500; American, 7,000; receipts, 25,000; American, 7,000; middling upland, 5.27d. Futures opened quiet but steady, 9 points lower on near months and 10 points decline on distant positions. Closed barely steady, at a net decline of 6 points. October and October-November, 5.19; November-December, 5.22; December-January, 5.26; January-February, 5.29; February-March, 5.31; March-April, 5.34; April-May, 5.36; May-June, 5.38; June-July, 5.39; July-August, 5.40. Manchester—Yarns irregular; cloths in more demand.

COFFEE.—The coffee market was very dull, sales for the day being about 3,250 bags. The opening was steady at unchanged prices on all months except September, which was 5 points lower, but there was practically no demand, and just a little scattering liquidation was sufficient to let prices off another 5 points or so, with the close dull, at a net decline of 5 to 10 points. There was nothing in the news to create fresh sentiment. European cables were about a stand off, a decline of ¼pfg in the German market being offset by the relative steadiness of Havre, which was about unchanged. Of the primary markets, Santos declined 100 reis, but Rio remained unchanged, and there was no change in the rate of Brazilian exchange. Brazilian receipts are running a little above the figures of last year, and seem to point toward total receipts for the month somewhat in excess of the Krische estimate, but this is not sufficient to check speculation apparently, and it seems that the uncertainty regarding the import duty, the long interest in December, and possibly the higher money rates recently, are preventing much business from Wall Street sources, and confining the operations to those of a routine character by trade interests.

The market for spot coffee was quiet, with quotations on the basis of 8 11-16c for Rio No. 7. Contract prices ranged as follows:

Spelter was higher, at £27 17s 6d, in London, but was reported quiet at 6@6.10c in the local market. Iron closed at 50s for standard foundry and 51s 10½d for Cleveland warrants in the foreign markets. Locally the market was reported firm. No. 1 foundry, Northern, is quoted at $17.75@$18; No. 2 foundry, Northern, at $17.25@$17.50; No. 1 foundry, Southern, at $16.75@$17.75, and No. 2 foundry, Southern, at $16.50@$17.25.

The market for regular pig iron certificates and foundry grades was dull and featureless all day. Regulars were steady to a shade higher, while foundry was partially lower. We quote regulars as follows: Cash and October, $15.50@$16; November, $16.10 asked; December, $16.20 asked; January, $15.50@$16.30; February, $15.50@$16.40, and March $15.60@$16.60.

Port Chester Line to Pay City $275,000.

The Sinking Fund Commission approved yesterday Mr. Grout's report and valuation of the portions of Cypress Avenue, East 130th Street, St. Ann's, Brook, and Alexander Avenues to be closed for the Port Chester Railroad. Mr. Grout figured that $275,000 was a fair valuation for the company to pay the city for the surface rights in the streets.

THOMAS F. RYAN A DEFENDANT

Harry C. Haskins Seeks an Accounting of the United Lead Company.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, Oct. 10.—Thomas F. Ryan, Vice President of the Morton Trust Company of New York, has been made a defendant in the Court of Chancery in a suit brought by Harry C. Haskins of New York, who asks that Mr. Ryan be compelled to make an accounting to him of the profits of the United Lead Company.

Haskins asserts that in 1898 he made a study of the industrial conditions surrounding the white lead business in this country with a view to buying all the concerns outside of the National Lead Company for the purpose of forming a new company to either compete with the National Company or combine with it. In carrying out this project he says he obtained options on most of the lead plants.

In 1901, he says, he laid the plan before Mr. Ryan with a view to getting his financial assistance. He asserts that Mr. Ryan, after becoming familiar with his plans, engaged Hugh Grant Browne and Edward Lauterbach to obtain options on the same concerns that he himself had options on. Mr. Ryan, in 1903, he declares, organized the United Lead Company with $15,000,000 capital, with himself in control.

Mr. Haskins claims that having inspired the organization of the company and Mr. Ryan having availed himself of his ideas and his works, he is entitled to share in the profits. He asserts that these profits have been "enormous," although he admits his inability to state the actual amount or to declare positively Mr. Ryan's real part in the promotion of the company.

Attached to his bill of declarations filed here, the complainant submits a copy of the prospectus he says he gave to the defendant. It showed that the actual production of pig lead in the United States was about 245,000 tons, 200,000 tons by the American Smelting and Refining Company, 20,000 tons by the St. Joe Company, and the balance by smaller concerns.

Successful Bronx Auction Sale.

Another successful sale of vacant property in the Bronx was conducted yesterday at the Vesey Street Salesroom by Auctioneer James L. Wells—the offering consisting of 110 lots, owned by the Woolf estate, in the neighborhood of 174th Street and the Grand Boulevard and Concourse.

As was the case at the Varian estate sale last week, good prices prevailed and small buyers were much in evidence. After the sale Auctioneer Wells said that the total amount realized was something over $168,000.

On the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, south of Belmont Street, lots of somewhat more than full depth were sold for $2,475 each. North of Belmont Street, $1,200 each was the bid for lots 68 feet deep. Corners at Sheridan Avenue and Belmont Street brought $1,375 and $1,575, and inside lots on Belmont Street from $800 to $1,600 each. On Walton Avenue, prices for lots 75 feet deep ranged from $850 to $1,000. Buyers on Eden Avenue paid from $600 to $1,025 a lot.

Several scattered parcels in the easterly part of the Bronx, owned by the same estate, were also sold. A plot of about three lots, running through from Boston Road to West Farms Road, just south of their junction, was struck down for $17,000 to D. B. Freedman and Joseph Hamershlag, who own adjoining property. A. B. Belcher bought a plot, 25 by 200, running through from 182d Street to Garden Street, 76 feet west of Prospect Avenue, for $3,975.

Announcement was made yesterday that the remainder of the Varian estate property at William's Bridge, 134 lots, will be sold at auction on Oct. 31 by L. J. Phillips & Co.

AT AUCTION. | AT AUCTION. | AT AUCTION.

The Editor of the New York Evening Journal on Sept. 30th Said:

"Buy Where the Crowd Is."

"Buy in the Great New York Crowd."

1,000 people attended the auction sale of the 181 lots of the Varian Estate Property. Every lot was sold—52 buyers. 1,000 people to buy and only 181 lots to be sold; many were disappointed. They have inquired since if more were to be had. Owing to many such requests the owners have consented to offer

134 Lots of the Varian Estate Property, adjoining the lots sold, and ALL THAT IS LEFT of this choice land,

At Public Auction,

Tuesday, October 31st, 1905.

To Those Who Bought: Here is a chance to purchase more and get the rise in value bound to follow the improvement of the property—sure to occur.

To Those Who Did Not Buy: It is a golden opportunity to buy adjoining, where 181 lots have already been sold, many of which will undoubtedly be improved within the year.

Growing Neighborhoods Create Rising Values.

The foregoing personal property and real estate will first be put up for sale separately and then in one lot, the highest or higher bid to be accepted.

The foregoing real estate will be sold subject to a mortgage of $5,000, with accrued interest and taxes amounting, with interest to October 1st, 1905, to $1,576.15. There will be sold at the same time on the premises about 100,000 feet of rough lumber of various kinds, dressed lumber, moldings, doors, blinds, sashes, &c., one surrey, one sleigh, four light business wagons, seven trucks and wagons, nine sets of coach and truck harness, blankets, wagon jacks, &c.

MOURNERS FOLLOW BODY TO DISSECTING ROOM

Relatives of George W. Catt Observe the Terms of His Will.

HIS BEQUEST TO SCIENCE

After the Funeral the Coffin Covered with Flowers Is Borne to Bellevue Medical College.

When the will of George W. Catt, late President of the Atlantic Dredging Company, was read yesterday at his residence, the Osborne, 205 West Fifty-seventh Street, the following clause was found in it:

"It is my wish that my body be given to the medical college in which anatomy and surgery are taught nearest to the place of my demise, to be used by it in such manner as will be most conducive to the advancement of medical and surgical knowledge."

The reading of the clause was a surprise to some of those who had come to attend the funeral services of Mr. Catt, but this desire had been known to his wife and his intimate friends for some years.

In ideas, both Mr. Catt and his wife, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the Woman Suffragist leader, have always been in advance of current notions. To Dr. E. H. Mayne of 139 Bay Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, who, as an intimate friend, attended him in his last illness, he often said:

"Medical and surgical colleges labor under the difficulty of finding material for their studies. Most of the material they get is poor and not normal. I think it a waste for a perfectly normal body such as mine to be thrown away after my death, when it could do so much for science."

Yesterday the funeral services were held at Mr. Catt's late residence by the Rev. Dr. Minot J. Savage, of the Church of the Messiah. The usual burial service was read. Then Dr. Mayne, after a short address by Dr. Savage, spoke a few words to the friends of the dead man, saying that Mr. Catt had no desire to shock those who had known him. He then explained why the body would not be buried.

The coffin, covered with gray silk and piled with flowers, was then put in the hearse. The friends and pallbearers entered the carriages. The pallbearers were nearly all business associates of Mr. Catt. They included Walter J. Greacen, Thomas J. Long, H. S. Wood, and J. McMullen of the San Francisco branch of the company of which Mr. Catt was the head.

The procession moved away. Everything was just as at any other funeral, except that instead of being taken to a cemetery the body was left at the New York University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College at 340 East Twenty-sixth Street. The Dean of the college, Dr. Le Fevre, received the body, which was taken to the dissecting room. The wreaths which had been on the coffin were distributed among the patients in Bellevue Hospital.

Dr. Mayne, who saw to the execution of Mr. Catt's desires, said to reporters:

"I am anxious to know how the public will regard this matter. Fifty years ago they would have been shocked beyond measure, I have no doubt; but in recent years people have become educated to common sense views. The horror with which cremation was first regarded is now a thing of the past. Of course, medical circles will take the view of Mr. Catt that after death the body is of no use to the one who lived in it and of great value to medical science."

George W. Catt died last Sunday of peritonitis. He had offices at 13 Park Row. He was 45 years old. In his younger days, before he became a civil engineer, he studied law. All his life, however, he was much interested in medicine and surgery.

It was said yesterday at the college and at the Board of Health that this was the first time a wealthy man had willed his body for purposes of dissection.

EXPERTS IN DU BOIS CASE.

One Alienist Thinks He Was Sane—Another Thinks He Wasn't.

Dr. Frederick Peterson, a witness in the suit of Mrs. Ivy Blanche McKee, who is seeking to recover about $300,000 of the estate of her father, Alpheus D. Du Bois, testified that in his opinion Du Bois, though eccentric, was not insane. Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton said that, in his opinion, Du Bois was insane. The fact that Du Bois had no feeling for his family, Dr. Hamilton said, was a form of delusion. Putting paper between the roof of his mouth and his false teeth was another sign that he was insane. The written communications containing the numeral 7 in every other line supplied still another sign.

Du Bois's widow, Mrs. Julia Du Bois, was again called to the witness stand. She testified that Du Bois refused to support her and her child in 1858, and she had to go back to her mother. Only two years before that he had written the affectionate poems which have been introduced in evidence. The poems were on faded blue paper. Mrs. Du Bois said she had treasured them all during the years she had been separated from her husband.

At this point counsel for the contestant rested and counsel for the proponents of the will moved to dismiss the complaint. Justice Kellogg denied the motion to dismiss, and to-day the defense will begin.

NO MORE GIRL SELLING.

License Commissioner Keating Says He Has Stopped the Evil.

To show that most of the abuses which existed in the management of the employment agencies have been wiped out through the enforcement of the law which went into effect last year, Commissioner Keating of the Department of Licenses has submitted to the Mayor a report covering the operations of his department since its establishment.

"The immorality and vice which were fostered and allowed to flourish in a certain type of the agencies," he says, "have been driven out. Extortion, once of common prevalence, is no longer practiced. But these reforms were accomplished only after strict enforcement of the law, and can be maintained only by continued rigid supervision."

The so-called cadet system for the ruin of young girls, which had obtained a strong foothold among the east side employment agencies during the past year or more, has been put out of existence, the report says. At present no employment agent will allow a cadet near his place, because if he does so it is more than probable that he will lose his license.

Commissioner Keating says that up to date 4,653 inspections of employment agencies have been made, 1,823 complaints investigated, and 411 hearings or trials heard before the Commissioner. Criminal proceedings have been instituted in 72 cases and 25 licenses revoked during the year.

PLANS 225,000 TELEPHONES.

Business the New Independent Company Hopes for Here.

Thomas W. Finucane, President of the new United States Independent Telephone Company, arrived in New York yesterday and sent out invitations to reporters to go to his office in the Mutual Life Building and hear all about the new company's plans.

His company, President Finucane thinks, will have 225,000 telephones in operation in this city in a little less than two years. He mentioned that the Bell Telephone Company was now operating 140,000 telephones in New York, so that apparently the independent concern expects to have nearly a hundred thousand more within two years than the Bell Company has managed to install since it was organized.

From what Mr. Finucane said it appears that the Mercantile Electric Company, which has been bought out by his new combination, was closely allied with the Equitable Life Assurance Society before the new concern purchased its control. In the corporation Directory the Directors of the Mercantile Electric Company are given as James H. Hyde, C. B. Alexander, W. H. McIntyre, Valentine P. Snyder, W. B. Remner, Alvin W. Krech, Thomas D. Jordan, Gage E. Tarbell, Henry M. Alexander, Henry R. Winthrop, and Henry C. Deming. It also appears that, since the control of the Mercantile Electric has changed hands, the Directors have been allowed to resign. They were replaced by H. C. Durand, Harry P. Sickels, W. F. Dwyer, J. H. Howe, George R. Fuller, George S. Bixby, and Arthur J. Frith, most of them being residents of Rochester.

"There's nothing private or hidden about the United States Independent Telephone Company," announced Mr. Finucane yesterday. "The company was organized for the express and particular purpose of making money for its stockholders and for giving to the citizens of New York and other cities in this country the best telephone service that they ever knew anything about and at a much lower rate than they are now paying. We are going to do both. We have the money to keep up our end. When the New York plant is in operation the system will extend from here to Utah."

Mr. Finucane showed to the reporters maps, with little tacks indicating independent telephone exchanges. It seemed that Ohio, Iowa, Michigan, and other States of the Middle West were thickly studded with exchanges. Mr. Finucane said engineers were now at work selecting sites for exchanges in New York.

NEW SYSTEM FOR JERSEY.

Independent Company Will Operate There, Says Mr. Lindabury.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 10.—The United States Independent Telephone Company will operate a telephone system in this State, according to Richard V. Lindabury, counsel for the company, to-day.

The Coast Line Telephone Company has already begun a canvass for subscribers and has about 3,000 tentative names, but whether this has any connection with the independent company could not be learned. The Coast Line, will, according to the application blanks, apply for a franchise at an early day.

Among the smaller companies, which may become a part of the new system are the State Telephone Company of Trenton, with its subsidiary corporations; the Suburban of Paterson, the Suburban of Elizabeth, and the Home Telephone Company of Trenton, the Coast Line of Jersey City, and the Keystone, whose service extends into Camden and adjoining territory.

BURGLING HIS ONLY VICE.

Mulcare's Statement in Court—Three Held for Trial.

When the enterprising burglar's not a-burgling,
He loves to hear the brooklet gurgling by.

Mr. W. S. Gilbert's verse, slightly amended, might be applied to John Mulcare, alias William Hall, alias Charles Call, the Beau Brummel housebreaker. Mulcare was arraigned before Magistrate Crane in the Harlem Court yesterday for burgling the apartments of Mrs. Harris Hord of 393 Lenox Avenue. His two side partners, Frederick Martin and Stephen Hazen stood beside him.

Mulcare said that he neither smoked, drank, chewed, nor gambled. His only vice was burgling. Commoner vices might have interfered with his art, so he left them severely alone. In reminiscent tones the Harlem flat emptier told of his early struggles before he became a professional burglar. At first he was merely a "grafter," he said, not in the insurance business or politics, but playing races and picking up a living without working for it. When flush of money Mulcare hied himself to green fields and sang pastoral lays to the moon-eyed cows. His tastes were never low. The idea of becoming a burglar came to him suddenly like an inspiration.

One Summer's day in Harlem Mulcare saw a doctor's carriage stop before a house. The doctor alighted and entered unquestioned.

"What a cinch," he soliloquized. He communicated his idea to Martin and Hazen. It happened that Martin was a good driver, so he impersonated the driver. Hazen acted as a "look-out," and Mulcare, always dressed in the height of fashion, would do the heavy acting, or, in this case, the heavy lifting.

The enterprising trio drove about Harlem, and when they saw a house with the curtains drawn and had made certain that the family was away, they began work. Mulcare, equipped with the latest burgling implements, would force an entrance and take whatever he could, removing the loot to the waiting carriage in a suit case.

Police Headquarters was thronged yesterday with victims of Harlem burglaries who came to see if they could identify any of the stolen articles which had been seized by the police. Hazen said that he had only been two months in the burgling business, and before that he was employed in an insurance broker's office on lower Broadway. The three men were held in $3,000 bail each for trial.

CAR FAMINE TIES UP GRAIN.

Exporters Co-operating to Prevent Shipments Being Delayed.

The car shortage on Eastern railroads due to the heavy movement of freight has resulted in a serious congestion of grain at Buffalo. New York shippers have been subjected to much inconvenience by the blockade, and on the initiative of the New York Produce Exchange steps have been taken to relieve the situation. Merchants who have made contracts for the export of grain have found it impossible in many instances to get their consignments in time to be shipped by the proper steamer. A number of exporters have arranged to co-operate with the view of supplying each other with the necessary quantity of grain on the dates fixed for shipments. It has been agreed that those having grain in New York who may not require it for export until a later date will lend it to those having immediate shipments to make.

The local traffic managers conferred on Monday with the Committee on Trade and Transportation of the New York Produce Exchange in regard to the grain situation. It was agreed that all contracts for grain purchased up to Oct. 7 would be accepted by the railroads at the usual rates without any extra charges for storage and insurance.

BANK CLOSED FOLLOWING CASHIER KRAPP'S DEATH

Cooper Exchange Depositors Likely to be Paid in Full.

HAD SUFFERED TWO RUNS

Report That the Cashier Had Been Deposed Before His Tragic End Caused Another Run.

The Cooper Exchange Bank, at 20 Avenue A, was compelled to close its doors yesterday by order of State Superintendent of Banks Kilburn. The bank got into difficulty owing chiefly to a heavy withdrawal of deposits following the sudden death a few days ago of its cashier, George F. Krapp. It was said last night that the depositors would suffer no great loss, if any.

The bank was used by nearly all of the smaller merchants in the neighborhood as a depository for their funds, and within a few moments after the closing notice had been posted on the door the sidewalk in front of the bank was crowded with depositors, many of whom brought their bankbooks along. There was considerable excitement when the depositors learned that they were too late to withdraw their money, and that they could not even get into the tank to tell the officials what they thought of them.

Capt. McDermott of the East Fifth Street Station went to the scene with a squad of policemen. They had great difficulty at first in keeping the crowd quiet, as the depositors believed that they had lost all their money, but by degrees, as reassuring statements came from officials of the bank, they became quieter, and before long the crowd thinned out.

About the angriest persons in the crowd were several business men, who had sent their money to the bank by messengers after it had been ordered closed. The Cooper Exchange Bank, like many other east side banks, had adopted the custom of sending its own messengers out every morning to collect deposits from customers in order to save the latter the trouble of going to the bank. There were about a dozen such depositors on hand, and they became so loud and persistent in their demand for admission to the bank that the policemen finally were compelled to drive them away.

Samuel Gotthelf, President of the Cooper Exchange Bank, formerly was a Vice President of the Union Square Bank, and when he left that institution he succeeded in interesting a number of its depositors and shareholders who transferred their accounts and became stockholders of the Cooper Exchange Bank. At Mr. Gotthelf's residence, 22 Convent Avenue, it was said yesterday that he was ill in bed.

The Cooper Exchange was a State bank, and until some time ago was considered strong and prosperous. It was organized with a capital of $100,000 and a paid-up reserve of $50,000. A year after its organization it had deposits amounting to $670,000. Then came the failure of the Federal Bank, of which David Rothschild, now in Sing Sing, was President. This shook the confidence of east siders in banks generally. The depositors of the Cooper Exchange Bank took fright and the deposits of the bank soon melted to $350,000.

Last Wednesday George F. Krapp, cashier of the bank, was picked up dead in the courtyard of his home at 209 West Ninety-seventh Street. Members of his family declared that he had accidentally fallen from a fourth-story window. The depositors took fright anew, and a run on the bank followed.

Officials of the bank declared yesterday that Krapp's accounts were all right. It was learned, however, that the day before his death he had been reduced to a subordinate place in the bank. It was also learned that one of the Directors and stockholders had complained to Superintendent Kilburn more than a month ago that the bank's affairs were in a bad way, owing to mismanagement.

Bank Examiner Judson said last evening that the liabilities of the bank were about $580,000 and the assets about the same. A large proportion of the assets consists of outstanding loans.

"Provided the collateral for the outstanding loans is good," said Mr. Judson, "there will be no great loss to the depositors and stockholders. I have not as yet had time to examine these securities, and until I have done so will not be in a position to tell."

Mr. Judson said several thousand dollars had been deposited before the bank closed yesterday. The Examiner took charge of this money, which probably will be restored in full to the depositors, as is the custom, as soon as a receiver has been appointed.

Chorus Singer Killed by Gas.

William Burger, a member of the Metropolitan Opera House chorus, was found dead in bed at his boarding house, 328 West Fortieth Street, yesterday. Burger had gone to bed leaving the gas burning. On retiring, however, he had accidentally knocked loose the rubber tube leading to a lighted gas stove. When the body was found the gas was flowing from the tube. Burger had been a member of the grand opera chorus for several years and was widely known in the profession.

They were Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, President of the London County Council; William Patrick Byrne, C. B.; Horatio Bryan Donkin, M. D.; James Crauford Dunlop, M. D., and Mrs. Ellen Frances Pinsent. The object of the commission is to study the methods of dealing with idiots and epileptics or defective persons not certified under the lunacy laws.

ROUSS ESTATE WINS SUIT.

Mrs. Cowen, Who Said She Married Merchant, Wanted $39,250.

After listening to testimony yesterday in the suit brought in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Elizabeth Cowen to recover $39,250 from the estate of Charles Broadway Rouss, Justice Greenbaum, on motion of counsel for the defense, dismissed the complaint.

Mrs. Cowen testified that she first met Mr. Rouss when she was sixteen years old. He owned a little store in a basement on a side street, and she went there to buy goods for her mother, who owned a store in Jersey City. The acquaintance, she declared, ripened into a love match. She said she eloped with Mr. Rouss and went to Niagara Falls.

Upon returning home Mr. Rouss told her mother they had been legally married. She said she believed she was legally married to Rouss. Later, when her mother discovered that Rouss was already married, she said Rouss entered into an agreement to pay her $50,000 for the support of herself and her child.

By the terms of the agreement, she said, Rouss was to pay her $50 a week until the $50,000 was paid. At the time of Rouss's death, she said, $39,250 was still unpaid. To recover it she brought suit through Howe & Hummel.

Mrs. Cowen's story was corroborated by her sister, Mrs Collins, who identified several letters alleged to have been written by Rouss.

J. Power Donellan, counsel for the Rouss estate, moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that there had been no contract proven, and that there was no cause for action

David May of Howe & Hummel's office argued that the cause of action was in the breach of promise of marriage.

Justice Greenbaum remarked that there was no testimony to the effect that a marriage ceremony had been performed.

He then dismissed the complaint.

John J. Rooney of counsel for the Rouss estate then made a motion that the plaintiff be arrested on a charge of perjury. He said that once Mrs. Cowen had testified in supplementary proceedings that no person owed her money, while in an affidavit in this case she had testified that money was owed to her by Rouss.

Justice Greenbaum refused to grant the motion, saying that that was a matter for the Grand Jury to consider.

Mr. May said that he would carry the case to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

ELEVATOR FALLS, TWO HURT.

Car Drops from Second Floor in the Pocahontas.

Miss Laura Schnelling, who lives in the Pocahontas, at 12 West Ninety-second Street, boarded the elevator at her home last night about 7 o'clock to be carried to her apartments on the third floor, and Cara Epps, the colored elevator boy, started the car with a jerk. The elevator rose to the second floor. Then the safety cable snapped. The big box dropped to the ground floor with a crash.

The elevator was wrecked, and Miss Schnelling and Epps received painful but not serious injuries. The elevator was inspected a few days ago and pronounced safe.

An easy step.

You are very welcome to overhaul our Fall suits, get a line on the exclusive patterns we've had designed for this season, try on some suits to get an idea of the best Fall cut.

Then have a tailor make up your Fall suit, if you think he can touch our fit and quality at anything like our price.

Another step.

One of the really crack tailors in town says he'll make a boy's school suit at his price for a man's business suit, $75; but most first class tailors won't bother with boys' clothing at all.

So we're inclined to believe that our finer qualities of boys' suits—those selling from $10.50 to $15.50, touch the very top-notch of New York boys' clothes.

Every thread all wool, from the $6 suits on up.

VISITED BROTHER AGED 102.

American Citizen, 99 Years Old, Nearly Deported on Account of It.

Alexander Harriet, American citizen, 99 years old, had a narrow escape from deportation yesterday because of the belief of the Ellis Island office that he was not a citizen, and that he would become a public charge.

At the eleventh hour the old man was able to tell enough about himself to result in the officials sending for Mrs. Sarah Sirsp, his daughter, who lives on Bailey Avenue, King's Bridge.

She went to Ellis Island yesterday and told the authorities all about the old man. He had not been able to tell much more than that he had arrived on the Numidian of the Allan State Line on Sunday from Scotland. The daughter said he sailed on Aug. 8 to visit his brother in Edinburgh. The brother is 102 years old.

Harriet was released at once, and went home with his daughter.

NORMAN HAPGOOD GIVES BAIL.

Waives Examination on Justice Deuel's Criminal Libel Charge.

Norman Hapgood waived examination yesterday afternoon in the Tombs Court in the suit for criminal libel brought against him by Justice Joseph M. Deuel of Special Sessions on account of an editorial in Collier's Weekly dealing with Justice Deuel's relations with Town Topics. The proceedings were brief.

Magistrate Moss, turning to Justice Deuel, asked him what bail, if any, he would think sufficient. Said Justice Deuel impressively:

"There is nothing, your Honor, that I can suggest. I am perfectly satisfied that Mr. Hapgood will be present when the case is brought before the Grand Jury. You know it is obligatory on you to require bail, otherwise I would have this defendant paroled in the custody of his counsel, James Osborne."

Magistrate Moss then set bail at $5,000. This was immediately furnished.

A BLACK HAND FOUR KILL ITALIAN BUTCHER

They Had Picketed His Shop in Brooklyn for Weeks.

WENT IN BOAT TO SHOOT HIM

Sent Him a Letter Yesterday Demanding $1,000—Police Hunt Murderers in the Bay.

Daetano Costa, a well-to-do Italian butcher, was attacked in his shop at 865 Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn, last night and shot to death. Four bullets landed in his body, and any one of three of the wounds caused would have been fatal. The police declare that he was killed by Black Hand assassins.

Costa closed his doors last night at his accustomed time and retired. His wife is in Italy.

Shortly after 10 o'clock James and Andrew Anderson, brothers, who live at 200 West Thirty-first Street, were standing a few feet from the door of the shop when they heard four shots. Then four Italians hurst from the shop, scattered, and ran. The police from the Fourth Avenue Station soon came, with Capt. Evans at their head. The Captain found Costa in the doorway leading from his sleeping room to the shop. He was already dead. The surgeon in charge of an ambulance from the Norwegian Hospital, who arrived soon afterward, said that one of the bullets had penetrated Costa's heart, and that death had been instantaneous.

At midnight, with every available detective in Brooklyn at work on the murder and Inspector Wiegand leading the hunt, while the police patrol boats were cruising up and down the river, important clues were being obtained.

It was practically established through William Brady, who runs a boathouee at the foot of Thirty-fourth Street, that the murderers went to Brooklyn by water and left their skiff at the foot of Thirty-fourth Street, while they killed Costa. There were six men in the skiff, according to Brady, and four of them went toward Fourth Avenue, while the other two remained to watch the boat. It was just about 9 o'clock when the boat was tied up. In about an hour, while the two sentinels were pacing up and down the bank, the four men who had gone up Thirty-fourth Street, came back, running at full speed.

"They jumped into the skiff," Brady told Inspector Wiegand, "and pulled over in the Buttermilk Channel toward the Hamilton Ferry. I thought there was something very suspicious about their movements, and when I learned of the Italian murder I knew that they were the men who had committed the crime."

Brady was able to give the police a good description of the four men who left the boat as well as the two men who stayed behind with the craft. After this clue had been turned up the police patrol boats were pressed into service. A general alarm was sent out, and Inspector Wiegand said he hoped that the murderers would soon be caught.

John Prazza, who keeps a saloon next door to Costa's shop, told Detective Vachris, who is better posted on the Brooklyn Black Hand than any other detective in the borough, having worked on all the big cases of the kind in recent years, that Costa received a letter yesterday morning demanding $1,000. Prazza added:

"He read the letter to me. This is what it said:

"'You have more money than we have. We know of your wealth and that you are alone in this country. We want $1,000 which you are to put in a loaf of bread and hand to a man who comes in to buy meat and pulls out a red handkerchief.'

"I remember just what the letter said because it made such an impression on me and Costa was so badly frightened. He told me that he did not know just when the Black Hand people would be after him, but that as soon as he closed up his shop he intended to go to the Fourth Avenue Police Station and ask for protection.

"He was just preparing to go to the police station, I suppose, when the men broke into the place and killed him."

Within an hour after the shooting the police, reinforced by detectives from Headquarters, had questioned nearly everyhody in the neighborhood.

They found that they were practically wasting their time. The residents of the vicinity, nearly all of them Italians, were panicstricken and did not hesitate to say that it would be worth their lives if they said a word.

The Captain and his detectives did succeed in ascertaining that for three weeks Costa's shop has been watched day and night by Italians whom the neighbors described as of forbidding appearance. There were never fewer than two pickets on duty, and sometimes there were as many as half a dozen.

The two Andersons say that they caught an imperfect glimpse of two of the murderers as they fled from the shop.

"They were roughly dressed," said James Anderson, "and looked like the pictures you see of brigands. One of them was about 5 feet 8 inches in height, and the other 5 feet 6 inches. One was smooth shaven and had straight hair. The other wes curly haired and wore a fierce mustache They were dressed in dark clothes and wore slouch hats. I didn't see what the other two looked like. Neither did my brother.

"One of the men still had a smoking revolver in his hand, and when he saw us he pointed the weapon in our direction and waved us back. The river is only about two blocks away, and the men, although they did not run away together, seemed to be making for it."

Costa's body was taken to the police station. Shortly after that Pietro Angelo, a brother-in-law of the man, arrived.

"I knew it, I knew it," he wailed, "and so did poor Gaetano. Within the past month he has got six Black Hand letters demanding thousands of dollars. He knew he was spied on, too, hut he didn't think that his end was so near. Neither did I. The letters were all locked up in his ssfe, and nobody has the combination.

"Gaetano was a rich man. He had three butcher shops, the one in which he was killed, another at Thirty-sixth Street and Third Avenue, and a third in Thirty-second Street. He has been worried by the Black Hand before, and a year or so ago he sent his wife and children home to Italy so that they at least might be safe.

"I don't know what was in the Black Hand letters. Gaetano never showed them to me. He just told me that he had received them."

Costa wss 40 years old, and among Italians bore the reputation of being a rich man.

THE PRESIDENT INTERFERED.

Got Appointment for a School Teacher When It Was Long Delayed.

President Roosevelt has made a Long Island school teacher happy by obtaining for her an appointment in the Philippines that had long been held up. The teacher is Miss Marie R. Overton, daughter of Winfield Scott Overton of 859 Madison Street, Brooklyn. Her brother is Capt. Winfield Scott Overton, Jr., United States Army, who married the daughter of Gen. Anson Mills of Washington.

Miss Overton teaches school in Richmond Hill. Early in 1904 she decided that she would like to teach in the Philippines and prepared herself for an examination to be held in September, that year. She passed very creditably, receiving a mark of 93.28 por cent., and was sixteenth in point of merit out of the 200 who passed. Having heard how badly teachers were needed in the Philippines, she expected an early appointment, but she waited, and nothing was done. Then she learned that several teachers helow her on the list had been appointed.

Miss Overton's father, who is a lawyer, presented the facts in the case to Congressman W. W. Cocks of Westbury. Then the Congressman went to see the President.

"Send a cable query to Manila at once as to why Miss Overton's appointment has been held up," the President ordered.

The appointment was cabled back at once, and Miss Overton will receive a salary some hundreds of dollars larger than she had expected.

N. Y. LIFE PROTESTS.

But Missouri Official Says Counsel's Logic Hasn't Swerved Him.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 11.—Frederick N. Judson, who represents President John A. McCall of the New York Life Insurance Company, and who was special counsel for the Government in the recent investigation of the Santa Fé rebats cases, filed witb State Insurance Supt. Vandiver to-day a formal protest against the latter's contemplated action against the New York Life.

Mr. Judson sets forth that the Commissioner of Insurance would have no legal right to exclude the New York Life from doing business in Missouri on the grounds set forth in Vandiver's letter to McCall, and that even should there he a legal right to take such action it would be unfair and unwise to take such a step against the New York Life alone when all the great insurance companies of the country, he alleges, are guilty of the same offenses as are charged against the McCall company.

Supt. Vandiver agreed to meet Mr. Judson to-morrow and listen to arguments. Gov. Folk will be present. Mr. Vandiver sai dto-night that he disagreed with Mr. Judson on all his arguments, and that it would require more logic than has been advanced so far to swerve him from his course to oust the New York Life from Missouri unless McCall and Perkins resign and the money paid the Republican Party is refunded hy them. He says the action has the full approval of Gov. Folk; that competent legal authority has been consulted, and that it is meant to be only the opening wedge.

Curious Error in a German's Certificate Discovered at Ellis Island.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The Commissioner General of Immigration, Frank Sargent, has the legal papers making Emperor William of Germany a citizen of the United States.

The certificate is signed hy Judge Thayer Melvin and Charles H. Henning, Clerk of the Court of Ohio County, West Virginia. Mr. Sargent explains the situation as follows:

Several years ago Jacob Ohlinger came to the United States, and, as he thought, took out his papers. Recently he made a visit to the Fatherland, and in due time returned. When he landed at New York an Immigration Inspector demanded his papers. Ohlinger pulled forth the document, which was confiscated and sent to Washington. The blank containing the applicant's name was filled out by the Clerk of the Court so as to read:

"It is thereupon considered, ordered, and adjudged by this court that the said Emperor of Germany be, and he is hereby, admitted a citizen of the United States."

RETIRED HOTEL MAN MISSING.

Police Say Schwandel Had Said He Wished to Kill Himself.

The police of the Fourth Avenue Station, Brooklyn, have been asked to look for Henry Schwandel, a retired hotel keeper, who lived at the Exchange Hotel, at Third Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, Brooklyn, which he formerly owned. eH is 59 years old and a bachelor.

According to the police Schwandel disappeared on Saturday night. Earlier in the evening John McNeely, a young man whose father started Schwandel in business many years ago, wae in the hotel and had a revolver in his possession. Schwandel, who, his friends say, has been nervous of late, tried to take the weapon from Young McNeely, declaring that he wished to kill himself with it.

It was discovered later that he had disappeared. He kept a safe in the hotel. He left the door of this open. In the safe were $800 and a gold watch and chain. Schwandel was reported to be worth $500,000, chiefly in Brooklyn real estate.

CHURCH CAN'T MEET ROCKEFELLER'S GIFT

Washington Heights Flock Raised the Necessary $20,000.

THEN A NEW BAR WAS RAISED

By the Baptist Missionary Society, Which Demanded a Mortgage—The Time Limit Expires.

The Rev. B. Boardman Bosworth, pastor of the Washington Heights Baptist Church, and the members of the church ahandoned hope yestetrday of being ahle to get the $20,000 which John D. Rockefeller offered three years ago to pay part of the deht incurred in the building of the church. Hope was given up after a meeting of the Southern Baptist Mission Association in the Mount Morris Church.

When the debt was started three years ago, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., through a friend, learned of the church's difficultiee and persuaded his father to offer $20,000 if, before July 23, 1905, the Baptist Mission Society and the church raised $20,000 cash. The mission society agreed to this.

The members of the church were enthusiastic. Money came in rapidly. Early this July Mr. Bosworth reported that $17,000 had been raised. Within twenty days of the time limit, however, there were still $3,000 lacking.

When this hecame known the memhers of the church hecame anxious. It was a emall sum, but $17,000 from the congregation had left the members with a full realization of the full value of $3,000. Added to this anxiety was the expressed conviction of Mr. Bosworth that Mr. Rockefeller would assurcdly accept a release, as it was his practice to insist on the fulfillment of both ends of a bargain.

Every effort of Mr. Bosworth and his flock was put forth to raising the $20,000 in cash before the time limit. Mr. Bosworth sent out 500 envelopes, each with a dime in it, to as many members of the church. Each dime was called a talent. To the women he suggested that they invest their talent in flour and baking soda and make their own loaves. The saving by this industry was to be put into the envelope and given to the church. To the men it was suggested that each huy a ten-cent cigar with his talent, place the cigar in one pocket and in another the envelope. Whenever a male member wanted a cigar the circular accompanying the talent suggested that he smell the ten-cent cigar, and, contenting himself with that, slip the dime he had intended to spend into the envelope.

Then a painting of the church was made and covered with black pasteboard squares. One Sunday night after the service a meeting was held at which the memhers had an opportunity to buy off the debt of the church at $5 a pasteboard square.

The result of all this was that in the three days instead of twenty—seventeen days before the expiration of the time limit—Mr. Bosworth triumphantly announced that $3,000 in cash had been raised. The rest was a foregone conclusion; hut the Rev. Mr. Bosworth and his congregation had just started on their troubles.

A meeting was held in the Dry Dock Savings Bank, at which the Trustees of the Washington Heights Baptist Church and the committee of the Baptist Mission Society were present to discuss the debt. The Mission Society refused to give its $20,000 unless the Trustees of the church gave an "ecclesiastical" mortgage for $60,000. The Trustees refused to do this on the ground that they had no right to handle the funds of the congregation in this way.

The matter stood there. In the meantime the time limit passed, and ae only $20,000 of the money could be shown, Mr. Rockefeller's obligation ceased to exist. The feelings of the church members, who had striven so hard to raise their share of the money, were at this time and have been since very hitter.

Mr. Rockefeller seemed willing to allow the Baptist Mission and the church Trustees to settle their differences. There was some correspondence on the matter, but no headway was made. Mr. Bosworth is now trying to have the case reviewed hy the Southern New York Baptist Mission Association.

Late last night the trustees of the church issued a statement. It says that after the removal of the site of the church from Twenty-third Street the same Board of Trustees continued in office and proceeded to build a meeting house "without consulting the congregation." It continues:

They appointed as Building Committee Dr. Bennett, Chairman, and Messrs. Clinch and Jackson. They gave the building contract to Mr. Robinson. He was not limited by the terms of this contract either ae to time or expense, and was promised and paid 5 per cent. of the cost of building as his commission. No competition for tbis contract was invited. A competitive offer was ignored by the committee. Marble for the new building was taken from a Georgia quarry owned by a company in which Mr. Robinson held controlling stock and Dr. Bennett was President. Hardware came from the firm of Underhill, Clinch & Co., of which Mr. Alfred Clinch was a partner. It is claimed by the Trustees who furnished materials, as thus noted, that such material was in every instance furnished at actual cost. Washington Heights Church does not and has not disputed that claim. Tbe building as thus erected cost over $30,000 more tban a rival builder of approved responeibility offered to build it for on the basis of the eame general plans, but of cut granite instead of Georgia marble.

In all this building transaction the corporate congregation was never called togetber for consultation, but only for mortgage purposes, and then not until after the plane involving the necessity of mortgaging had been put into execution, and without the congregation's consent contracts had been made in its name, its own means, derived from the sale of its former property, expended, its credit pledged, and the congregation involved beyond retreat. The church, nevertheless, assumed the liabilities thus incurred on account of its building, and on Feb. 14, 1899, authorized a mortgage of $58,000 to cover them.

These transactions, coupled with an attack of the four Trustees on the pastor, caused a breach between the congregation and the Trustees and a demand for their resignation.

The Trustees later resigned after the Church had refused to re-elect Dr. Bennett a Trustee. Shortly after he was elected to fill a vacant seat in the Baptist Mission Society.

With regard to the Baptist Mission it is declared that "the society apparently made no effort to raise its portion of the debt fund beyond publishing in its budget a misstatement of its obligation."

CAN'T EVEN GET DOGFLESH.

Rabbits and Fish the Last Resources of the Germans.

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—There is much evidence that Germany's meat famine is growing worse. Reports from all parts of the country tell of measures that are being taken to abate the famine.

At Eisenach a conference of municipal authorities in that region decided to establish regular rabbit markets, and in the Munich puhlic markets rahhit stalls have been opened.

Since horse meat has risen in price and dog flesh is no longer ohtainahle, a number of municipalities have begun buying carloads of sea fish at the coast towns and selling them at cost price to citizens. This expedient was first adopted at Solingen, but has now spread to various Westphalian cities, to Posen, and even to Bavarian towns.

The latest Government statistics show that the prices of meats are still rising. The September report shows that some kinds rose in ths courss of the month 1½ cents a pound.

At a conference of the Burgomasters of Berlin and other important towns, it was was voted to appeal to Prince von Bülow, the Imperial Chancellor, to take measures to alleviate the conditions, since previous petitione to the Prussian Minister of Agriculture had been unavailing.

It is tbe intention of Mr. Jerome to treat the Municipal Ownership forces, or any other organization which may think of indorsing his candidacy, exactly as he has treated the regular organizations. CANDIDATE IN SIGHT! BIG NEWS FROM HALPIN

But How Near to Actual Range That Is He Won't Tell.

FRANK MOSS IS RECEPTIVE

And He May Have to be It—Olcott and Willcox Both Dodge—Who for Borough President?

There will be a meeting of the Republican Committee on Vacancies to-day. It is hoped hy that time to have a candidate for Mayor roped. Great pressure is being brought to hear upon the Committee on Vacancies to find a man without further delay. District leaders say that every day's delay means the loss of votes to the ticket.

Chairman Halpin spent yesterday at Newhurg communing with State Chairman Odell. Before he left Mr. Halpin said he had a candidate "in view." He did not say whether the candidate had been sighted off Sandy Hook or was in actual range of the Committee on Vacancies.

After Mr. Halpin made his announcement, the report spread among the Republicans that tbe man the committee was considering was J. Van Vechten Olcott, Representative-eleot from the Fifteenth Congressional District. Mr. Olcott is a prominent member of the West Side Republican Cluh. He le a brother of W. M. K. Olcott of tbe law firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge. Asked if a tender of the nomination had been made to him, Mr. Olcott said it had not.

"I have not even had a suggestion that tho nomination would he offered me," he said, "hut if it should he, I could not conceive of circumstances under which I could accept it, as I have been elected to Congress and owe a duty to those who elected me to that post."

Thers was also talk among the Republicans of Postmaster William R. Willcox as an available candidate. It was not taken seriously, because Mr. Willcox is not likely to give up the Postmastership to run for Mayor.

Messrs. Olcott and Willcox being considered out of it, Republican hope hegan to centre around Frank Moss. Mr. Moss has heen approached by persons supposed to represent the Committee on Vacancies to ascertain what his disposition would be if the Mayoralty nomination were tendered to him. It would seem equally certain from Mr. Moss's manner when questioned about his attitude tbat he is in a receptive mood.

"Has the nomination heen offered to you?" he was asked.

"No offer has been mads."

"Are you afraid that there will be?"

"I am not afraid of anything."

"Would you accept the nomination if tendered?"

"That I cannot discuss."

"Do you regard the present situation as hopeless for the Republicans?"

"No campaign in which a moral principle is involved is ever hopeless."

"You would not mind making an uphill fight?"

"I am used to making uphill fights."

Charles E. Teale of Brooklyn is understood to be a strong probability for the Republican nomination for Controller to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Richard Young. Mr. Teale is a member of the firm of Smith & Gray of Brooklyn.

Lucien L. Bonheur of the Twenty-ninth Assemhly District has been asked to accept the Republican nomination for Sheriff.

The Republicans are still without a candidate for President of the Borough, notwithstanding their Borough Convention is to be held on Friday night. It is considered settled that the County Convention will indorse Jerome for District Attorney.

MUTINEERS KILL FIVE, INCLUDING THE CAPTAIN

Three Negroes Captured in Control of the Harry A. Berwind.

BODIES THROWN INTO THE SEA

Quarrel Over Quality of Coffee Led to Murder of Captain, Mate, Engineer, Cook, and Sailor.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Oct. 11.—Cspt. Rummill and four of his crew of the four-masted schooner Harry A. Berwind were murdered in a mutiny while the vessel was bound from Mobile to Philadelphia. The schooner Blanche H. King, Capt. J. W. Tapler, bound from Brunswick, Ga., to Philadelphia, put in Southport this afternoon, bringing in irons tbree negroes, all that remained of the crew of the Berwind.

The Captain, the mate, the cook, and an engineer, who did hoisting work aboard tbe latter vessel, had heen killed in the mutiny and their bodies thrown overboard, and the body of a fourth sailor, a negro, was lying on deck, where he, too, had been killed.

The Berwind left Mobile on Sept. 23. She was sighted early this morning thirty miles off tbe Cape Fear Bar by Capt. Taylor, whose attention was attracted by the reckless manner in which the veesel was being steered, her course threatening to run down his own vessel.

Capt. Taylor sent his mats, his engineer, and others on board tbe Berwind. The decks of the schoner were crimson with blood, giving evidence of a fierce encounter. The berth of the mate was spotted with hlood, indicating that he was butchered in bed.

After the hoarding party from ths King had handcuffed the mutineers one of the negroes complained the irons were too tgibt and hurt him. The hracelet on the negro's arm was loosened, when the captivs whipped out a pistol and shot one of his fellow-mutineers. The total list of killed is four whites and one negro, the names of none of whom can be learned.

It developed from the stories of ths negroes brought in irons by the King that ths mutiny arose as the result of a quarrel ahoard ship early Tuesday morning about the coffee made for breakfast.

The King left a prize crew ahoard the Berwind, which is still off the bar, but will he brought in to-morrow morning.

United States Commissioner S. P. Collier and Deputy Marshal C. O. Knox left to-night for Quarantine to take charge of the captives.

The Berwind heing from a territory against which this city is quarantined for yellow fever the three negroes taken from her are held at quarantine until arrangements can be made for their detention hy the Federal authorities.

Prof. Krause was profoundly impressed and immediately accepted her as a pupil."

A COPPER-LINED STATION.

The Pennsylvania's Work to Halt Corrosion Will Cost $500,000.

Gangs of men were busy yesterday on the roof of the vaulted train shed of tbe Pennsylvania Railroad at Jersey City. The shed is said to he the largest in the world. It is constructed mainly of galvanized iron, and was vaulted high, in the hope that the gases from the puffing locomotives would not reach it.

The engines helch the gases away up to the iron beams, however, and there they linger, eating away and corroding the inner surface of the structure. The company has decided that there is no way to save it except hy sheathing it with copper, and in places where repairs are necessary the face of copper will be stretched over it. The refacing of the structure will go on from time to time as it becomes necessary, and the expectation is that it will all have received a new lining in about two years. Tbe cost will exceed $500,000.

"JOSEPH THE 4 A. M." KILLED.

An Old Man of the Bronx Who Got His Name by Early Rising.

An old man who had been known around the neighborhood of Oak Point, in the Bronx, for twenty years as "Joseph, tbe 4 A. M.," was found dead on the tracks of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Longfellow Street and Lafayette Avenue last night. He had been run over by a train.

When Joseph arrived in the Bronx nearly a quarter of a century ago it was said that he was a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war, and had heen exiled for an attack upon the Colonel of his regiment. He was called "Joseph, the 4 A. M.," because of his habit of getting up at that hour. It was rare, indeed, however, that Joseph arose from a bed. He slept mostly in harns and cars and in the lee of sheltering haystacks. Kind-hearted persons fed him. He was 87 years old.

CITY OWNERSHIP FOLKS WILL NOMINATE TO-NIGHT

Red Fire and Loud Hurroo for the Hearst Ticket.

EDITOR NAILED IN THE WAGON

Noblest and Strongest Men Chosen, a Brooklyn Dissentient is Told—May Get Coler, Too.

Arrangements for the nomination of the Municipal Ownership city ticket in Carnegie Hall to-night and for the campaign which is to be waged in its behalf were completed at a meeting of the representatives of the Municipal Ownership League, Citizens' Union, German-American Municipal League of Brooklyn, German-American Municipal League of Staten Island, and the Workingmen's Municipal Ownership Association held in the Astor House last night.

The Committee of Seventeen appointed at the last meeting to recommend a city ticket and a platform reported in favor of the nomination of William R. Hearst for Mayor, John Ford for Controller, and J. G. Phelps Stokes for President of the Board of Aldermen.

Ex-Congressman Baker of Brooklyn made objection to the report. He said he thought the nomination for President of the Board of Aldermen ought to be given to a Brooklyn man. As the ticket was made up, he said, Manhattan secured all three nominations. Nobody else seemed to care.

A. J. Boulton of Brooklyn and of the Citizens' Union replied to Mr. Baker. He said it was with the full approval of the Brooklyn members of the Committee of Seventeen that Messrs. Hearst, Ford, and Stokes were decided upon. They were the three finest and strongest personalities that could be selected to represent municipal ownership doctrine.

After that the report of the Committee of Seventeen got through.

A tentative draft of a platform was submitted and discussed at length. It contained strong planks in favor of the municipal ownership of all future subways and of a gas plant. By a large majority it was decided to insert a plank in favor of direct nominations. Then the platform as amended was referred back for polishing ready for to-night.

It was decided to hold borough and county conventions for Manhattan either on Friday or Saturday evening. Nothing was said about the indorsement of Mr. Jerome for District Attorney. Judge Scabury said later he did not know whether or not it was the league's purpose to indorse Mr. Jerome.

A campaign committee of one hundred was appointed. Prof. John Martin of Staten Island was made Chairman, John J. Hopper Treasurer, and August H. Stebbins Secretary. A notable recruit was welcomed in Lucien Knapp, Republican leader of the Third Ward of Queens.

After the main conference had adjourned there was a conference of the Brooklyn representatives. There was some talk among the Brooklynites of having Bird S. Coler make the race for Borough President on the Brooklyn ticket. A. J. Boulton has been understood to be slated for that place, but there is a possibility that he may make way for Coler.

There was much discussion of Mr. Hearst's candidacy yesterday. When Charles F. Murphy was asked if he thought Mr. Hearst would make a strong candidate he said:

"I think he will make a good candidate —for Tammany Hall."

Chairman William Halpin blew a smoke cloud, looked into it, and saw that the candidacy of Mr. Hearst would redound to the great benefit of the Republicans. He believes it will draw thousands of votes away from Tammany Hall.

It is betraying no confidence to say that there are a number of Republican district leaders who not only do not agree with Mr. Halpin's view, but who were inclined yesterday to take the view that the Republican campaign had gone to the bowwows. Here is what one of the Republican district leaders said:

"If Odell and Halpin entertain the belief that the Hearst vote will be drawn entirely from Tammany, they are under a delusion. I find in my district that Republicans are talking of voting the Hearst ticket.

"They are men who favor the municipal ownership issue as set forth in the invitation which Halpin sent out to the Citizens' Union and other organizations to join the Republicans in a fusion movement. Now that the Republican leaders have turned their back on that issue these men are sore and ready to vote for Hearst out of resentment."

LEDYARD FOR McCLELLAN.

And Says James C. Carter Meant to Congratulate the Mayor.

Lewis Cass Ledyard of the law firm of Carter, Ledyard & Milburn, wrote to Mayor McClellan yesterday, congratulating him on his renomination and promising support in the municipal campaign. The letter, which came from Mr. Ledyard's Summer home at Newport, was made public last night. In it Mr. Ledyard says:

"As I am of those in the party who have found themselves in general unable to vote with it in municipal elections, I hope you will allow me to express my very great satisfaction with your renomination.

"I think there can be no question but that you have given us the best administration we have ever had within my memory, and your personal strength and rectitude and the independence with which you have administered your office for the best interests of the city have converted thousands of Tammany's strongest foes into earnest supporters of a Tammany ticket headed by yourself.

"My dear old partner, Mr. James C. Carter, was so impressed by what you had accomplished that he said to me shortly before his death that having bitterly opposed Tammany for years and having taken an active part in opposition to you in your first campaign, he considered it a duty he owed to his own manhood to call on you and say that he recognized that you had given a striking illustration of what could be accomplished in the way of non-partisan government by a partisan administration with a man of honest purposes and public spirit, possessed of the necessary strength and capacity, at its head. He afterward told me he had called upon you, but had not found you in, and I believe that the opportunity which he sought to discharge this duty never came.

"I think I would rather have had such a tribute from Mr. Carter than from any other man I have ever known."

RONNERITES ATTACK HAFFEN

For Turning the Register Down—May Join Coroner O'Gorman.

Bronx friends of Register John H. J. Ronner put out a statement last night attacking Borough President Haffen and threatening all sorts of acts of reprisals because of the word from Tammany Hall that Mr. Ronner would not be renominated for Register. Mr. Haffen, Thomas H. O'Neil, and Eugene J. McGuire, the three Tammany district leaders of the Bronx, are backing Alderman Frank Gass of the Bronx for Register.

Ronner's friends charge Haffen with "political knavery," and threaten to join Coroner O'Gorman, who is the Fusion opponent of Haffen for Bronx Borough President.

BOARD OF EDUCATION ANGRY.

Resents Mr. Dix's Criticism of its Bookkeeping Methods.

There was a wordy war at the meeting of the Board of Education yesterday afternoon, end the report of the Special Committee on Bookkeeping Revision, which started the dispute, was referred back to its authors for "intelligent reconsideration." Commissioner Abraham Stern, who headed the opposition, insinuated that Chairman Samuel M. Dix of the special committee was a pretender and not a certified public accountant. Mr. Dix left without making any reply to this. He is a member of the firm of Townsend & Dix at 31 Nassau Street.

Commissioner Henry Schmitt started the trouble by presenting a resolution asking for the reconsideration of the report of the Special Committee on Bookkeeping Revision. Mr. Schmitt said that the newspaper accounts of an interview given out recently by Mr. Dix had created the impression that the Board of Education was afraid to open its books for public inspection.

"This is altogether wrong," said Mr. Schmitt. "We are not afraid to let the public see the books of our auditing bureau. Neither do we want to spend $15,000 for expert assistance if we can do without it. The report of the special committee tells ue nothing, it explains nothing."

"I am not responsible for what the papers say," said Mr. Dix. "I stand on my record. We have many excellent workers in our auditing department, and I would like to say much in praise of them. But, gentlemen, they are not trained to business. There is not a man on the board who would tolerate having his business conducted as ours is here."

He said that his committee had recommended the service of expert accountants, and that the board should employ them even if it cost $500,000.

"Mr. Dix says it would be cheap to establish a new system in our auditing bureau even at the cost of $500,000," said Commissioner Stern. "What that system is I have been trying to get from his report, but outside of a lot of meaningless high-sounding words I can get nothing.

"Insinuations come with ill-grace from one who pretends to be a certified public accountant, but who hands in such an unintelligible report. If I were a certified public accountant I would at least tell where the faults were without recommending the expenditure of $15,000 to find them. The sooner you dispel tho idea that this department can be run like a business concern the better. It is impossible."

A SUGGESTION BY MR. FISH.

Thinks Money Might Be Advanced for Peabody College Endowment.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 11.—Stuyvesant Fish, President of the Illinois Central Railroad, has made a suggestion regarding the postponement of the Peabody College endowment which may bring results. In a letter to J. M. Dickinson, he says:

"Yesterday's New York papers state in effect that the Trustees of the Peabody Fund have postponed making their donation for Nashville because $250,000 of the $800,000 which were required to be raised locally have been voted by the State of Tennessee in ten annual payments and not in cash. It has occurred to me that people interested in Nashville, and in the cause of education in the South might be willing to advance the $250,000, to be reimbursed to them without interest in ten yearly payments.

"I know nothing about the matter except what I have seen in the papers, but beg to say that if you shall on investigation find that the State really appropriated the money in this way and the arrangement could be made safely, I would be willing to advance $10,000 toward such fund of $250,000.

SAY HOSPITAL FORCE FLIRTS.

Committee's Charge Brings Denial from North Hudson Institution.

At a meeting of the Board of Governors of the North Hudson Hospital at Union Hill Tuesday night a committee of four women, representing the Ladies' Guild, startled the board by charging that the doctors and nurses at the hospital, instead of attending to the patients passed much of their time in flirting.

The board will make an investigation if it decides that such a course is necessary. Miss Clemens, the Superintendent of the hospital, said yesterday:

"The report of that committee is founded purely on hearsay and there is absolutely no justification for it. Both the doctors and the nurses indignantly deny that there is the slightest foundation for the statements made by the committee of the Ladies' Guild. Furthermore, if any of the patients had been neglected, I am sure it could not have escaped my attention. The charges are absolutely false."

WOMAN FOUGHT OFF NEGRO.

Gave Alarm by Telephone and Her Assailant Was Caught.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 11.—Mrs. Frank Mulky, a well-known member of clubs, was attacked in her home to-day by a negro, who gained entrance to her bedroom by climbing a veranda. She fought the man so desperately that he fled.

Mrs. Mulky gave an alarm by telephone, end the entire police force started on a hunt. A negro with his face and hands badly scratched was found and taken before Mrs. Mulky, who positively identified him. He gave his name as Leasy Johnson.

When indicted by the Grand Jury for attempted criminal assault, he refused to plead guilty. There is much excitement in the city and the man is closely guarded.

FORNES SUIT GOES OVER.

It Is Said Mrs. Fornes Has Not Proved Residence in Vermont.

Special to The New York Times.

RUTLAND, Vt., Oct. 11.—If Mrs. Charles V. Fornes continues her efforts to secure a divorce from her husband, the President of the New York Board of Aldermen, she will probably have to change the scene of the suit from Vermont.

It was expected that the case would come up in Rutland County Court at this term, but to-day it was continued.

Mrs. Fornes's counsel are very reticent, refusing to make any statement as to further steps. Some of the best-known lawyers here, however, believe that the case will never be tried in a Vermont court, asserting that Mrs. Fornes has failed to establish any legal grounds of residence in this State.

BACON SUCCEEDS LOOMIS.

He Acts as Secretary of State on His First Official Day.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Robert Bacon of New York to-day took the oath of office and qualified as Assistant Secretary of State and Francis B. Loomis vacated that office. The ceremony took place in the office of the Assistant Secretary, the only persons present being Mr. Bacon, Mr. Loomis, and Mr. Dean, chief of the appointment division of the State Department, who administered the oath.

Secretary Root was absent from Washington for the day, eo that Mr. Bacon became Acting Secretary of State.

DISTRICT ATTORNEYSHIP STILL A GUESSING GAME

But the Tiger Will Open the Bag To-night.

WHO'LL COME OUT OF IT?

Jerome, Philbin, or Osborne—One Guess as Good as Another, and all Three May Be Wrong.

Tammany's "Great Jerome Mystery" will be solved to-night, when the County Convention is held in the Wigwam. To nominate or not to nominate still remaine undecided.

While Charles F. Murphy, his advisers and lieutenants have been giving their closest attention to the District Attorneyship since the City Convention, it was said last night on high authority that no definite decision has been reached as to whether Mr. Jerome will be indorsed or whether another candidate shall be named.

Several daye ago Charles F. Murphy, after a conference with Senator McCarren, J. Sergeant Cram, and others, practically decided to reject the Jerome claims for consideration. At the same time it was admitted, however, that the wish largely was father to the thought, and that conditions might arise which would make it advisable to put Mr. Jerome on the slate. This is still the situation to-day within a few hours of the convention.

If Jerome is dropped it is likely that either Eugene A. Philbin or James W. Osborne will be nominated to run against him. Of the two the sentiment is the stronger for Mr. Philbin, who made his peace with Tammany on the night of the City Convention, when he placed Mayor McClellan in nomination. Mr. Osborne has had many friends at work in his own behalf, and yesterday he called on Mayor McClellan and was closeted with him for nearly an hour.

It will probably all be settled when the Tammany Executive Committee meets at 7 o'clock to-night, just an hour in advance of the convention in the big hall up stairs. The details of the convention, the apportionment of resolutions, and the selection of men to make nominating epeeches will also be decided then.

Most of the finishing touches to the rest of the county and borough slates were completed at the Hall yesterday. As to the judiciary ticket, the Supreme Court nominations were settled. Ex-Senator Thomas C. O'Sullivan and Magistrate Mayo are candidates for the General Sessions bench to succeed Judge Newburger. But, unless Gov. Higgins acts at once, the nomination cannot be made to-night.

For the other places on the county ticket, Fire Commissioner Nicholas J. Hayes is to run for Sheriff and Frank Gass of the Bronx, now an Alderman, for Register. All of the three Bronx leaders are with him, but if there is any break in their ranks to-day a Manhattan man will get the place. Matthew F. Donohue, leader of the Twenty-first District, heads the list for County Clerk; Patrick H. Keahon, leader of the Seventh District, was bowled over yesterday in spite of the Sullivan influence behind him.

There is a possibility, however, that Mr. Murphy may use the clashing of the Donohue and Keahon booms to kill off both, leaving the field clear for Senator Peter J. Dooling, also an aspirant.

As soon as the County Convention is over the delegates from Manhattan Borough will at once constitute the Borough Convention. This will renominate John F. Ahearn for Borough President without opposition, and four Coroners for Manhattan. Under Sheriff Julius Harburger, leader of the Tenth District, will be one of the Coroners. The other three places still are open, with a score of candidates.

HIGGINS NAMES ADDOMS

To Fill Out Van Brunt's Term on the Supreme Court Bench.

Mortimer C. Addoms, Republican, was appointed yesterday by Gov. Higgins, a Justice of the Supreme Court in the First District, in place of the late Charles H. Van Brunt. His term will expire on Dec. 31. Justice Addoms lives in the Twenty-ninth Assembly District, and in 1904 was the Republican nominee against Victor J. Dowling for Supreme Court Justice. Dowling won, as expected, by a large plurality. Justice Van Brunt's place in the Appellate Division was filled by Gov. Higgins promoting Justice Morgan J. O'Brien to be Presiding Justice, and Justice John Proctor Clarke from the trial bench to the associate seat held by Justice O'Brien.

The Republicans will probably nominate Addoms on their regular judicial ticket against Judge Newburger, and either indorse Ingraham and Gildersleeve, Democrats, or name a full Republican judicial ticket against that to be nominated to-night by the Democrats.

HEIRESS WEDS ACTOR.

Miss Sharpsteen of Boston Becomes Mrs. Errol Dunbar.

Despite the opposition of her mother, Miss Mary H. Sharpsteen, a Boston heiress, became Mrs. Errol Dunbar at the "Little Church Around the Corner" last Sunday. The surprise had been carefully planned, and if there had been any hitch in New York every arrangement had been completed for the performance of the ceremony in Providence.

Mrs. Dunbar is the only daughter of the late Clark L. Sharpsteen, a member of the Paris house of Arnold, Constable & Co. Errol Dunbar is playing the leading rôle of a company now presenting "Sherlock Holmes" in Providence, R. I. He is the son of Dr. Dunbar of Baltimore, and has been on the stage about fifteen yeare. He is a member of the Players Club and has played as leading man in several road companies in recent years. His last Broadway appearance was with Fritzi Scheff in "Fadette."

Dr. Houghton, the pastor of the Little Church Around the Corner, said yesterday that he had married the couple, but that he was unaware of any parental objection. Mrs. Sharpeteen is said to have been keenly opposed to the match, but Miss Sharpsteen, according to Dr. Houghton, said that there was no objection on the part of her mother to the match.

At the death of her father, eight years ago, Miss Sharpsteen found herself in possession of an annual income of $50,000. At the death of her mother she will inherit the entire eetate, which is valued at several million dollars. She recently inherited an independent fortune from her aunt, the wife of Prof. Michael, well known for his work in chemical research.

The Sharpsteen home in Beacon Street, Boston, is one of the finest residences in that section. It contains hundreds of art treasures. The gate at the Charlee Street entrance is said to be a duplicate of that of the Hotel de Ville of Paris.

HEIRS SUE FOR $143,575.

The Newcombs Allege That C. A. Burbank Had Their Mother's Bonds.

Suit was brought in the United States Circuit Court yesterday by David B. and Mary Ellen Newcomb of Henderson, Ky., the heirs and executors of the will of Mary Newcomb, to recover $143,575 from Caleb A. Burbank and George H. Southard of New York, individually and as executors of the will of Ambrose B. Burbank.

It is alleged that Ambrose B. Burbank at the time of his death had in his possession bonds worth $100,000 and accrued interest, which were the property of Mary Newcomb, and that before her death ehe had been unable to get an accounting from Burbank.

FOR ALDERMEN.

Manhattan Democrats and Brooklyn Republicans Nominate.

Democratic conventions for nominating Aldermen in the forty-four districts of Manhattan and the Bronx were held last night, and in twenty-one of the districts the present Tammany members were renominated.

All of the old Tammany wheelhorses were put in the field, except James E. Gaffney in the Eighteenth, Charles F. Murphy's home district. No nomination was mede last night, the convention adjourning until to-morrow evening. Alderman Gaffney will not be named, however. He announced some time ago that he would retire from the board and devote himself entirely to the business of the New York Contracting Company, in which he is associated with John J. Murphy, brother of the Tammany leader.

"Little Tim" Sullivan, Vice Chairman and czar of the board, was renominated in the Sixth District, of which he also le the district leader. The floor leader of the Tammany men, John T. McCall, also was renominated from the Thirtieth District. Reginald S. Doull, Frank L. Dowling, and John J. Haggerty, three other party wheelhorses, are back. Here is the list:

McCarren Slate Holds Good Except in Two Districts.

The will of the McCarren leaders prevailed throughout Kings County, except in the Second and Eleventh Districts, last night, and the candidates slated for the Assembly were nominated without trouble. In the Second John McKeown, Magistrate Walsh's man, was nominated. He will be elected, as the district is safely Democratic. McKeown has eerved in the lower House ever since 1895. He is a member of the Insurance Investigating Committee. In the other district held by the Willoughby Street men, the Eleventh, William Seward Shanahan was renominated. He is one of the Brooklyn veterans in the Assembly. The list of nominations follows:

MUNICIPAL COURT JUDGES.

Lauer and Orlando Named on the Republican Ticket.

The Republicans nominated candidates for Judges of Municipal Court in the Second and Fourteenth Districts last night. Edgar J. Lauer was nominated in the Fourteenth. The district is nominally Republican, but the Citizens' Union and the Democrats have fused. In the Second Francis N. Orlando was named. That district is Democratic.

Last Manhattan Nominations.

For member of Assembly in the Third District, Manhattan, George Husch was nominated last night. There is no hope of electing him. In the Sixth, Frank Sica was nominated. James Oliver, nominated by Tammany Hall, is Sica's opponent. In the First District, A. M. Sartorelli was named. The district is safely Democratic. In the Twentieth, Dr. Henry Cary was nominated. Only a Republican tidal wave could elect Cary or any other Republican in the district.

Citizens' Union Indorses Herman.

The Citizens' Union Municipal District Court Convention of the Fourteenth District last night indorsed Moses Herman, who was nominated on Monday night by the Democrats.

John Lewis for Assemblyman.

John Lewis, a butcher of Third Avenue and Thirty-second Street, was nominated last night for Assemblyman at an adjourned Democratic convention of the Twentieth Assembly District.

Object to Name "Socialist Party."

ALBANY, Oct. 11.—Formal objections to certificates of nomination filed by the Socialist Party were received to-day by Secretary of State O'Brien from Schenectady. The allegation is that the name "Socialist" is eubstantially the same as that used by the Socialist Labor Party. The certificates objected to were filed for the nomination of Louis B. Boudin as Supreme Court Justice in the Second and John H. Bullard in the Fourth Judicial District.

BURGLARS CHARMED THE DOG.

Usually Savage Beast Kept Quiet While They Moved a Safe.

Though noted usually for his ferocity, a Great Dane dog became very friendly yesterday morning with burglars in the salonn of William Zarskis at 111 Wythe Avenue, Williamsburg. The robbers moved a seven-hundred-pound safe from the saloon to the yard and tried to drill a hole into the door to blow it open, but their steel drill broke and they had to quit. There was in the safe $150 and eome jewelry.

How the burglars were able to make friends with the dog puzzled the police. They got into the saloon by forcing a rear window. The police found a gray necktie which Zarskie declared belonged to a man who loafed around the saloon and seemed to take a fancy to the dog. The police found him asleep at his home and arrested him. He denied that the necktie belonged to him or that he knew anything of the burglary.

PANAMA BOARD ANNULS $50,000,000 CONTRACT

It Was Upheld by the President When Rival Bidders Protested.

GOVERNMENT WILL FEED MEN

Chairman Shonts Arranged to Do It Through Markel, But Engineer Stevens Takes Charge.

PANAMA, Oct. 11.—The last action of the Panama Canal Commission before sailing from Colon for New York to-day was the annulment of the contract awarded to J. E. Markel of Omaha for feeding and caring for the employes of the canal.

The reason for this action is that Chief Engineer Stevens, through the Department of Materials and Supplies under Messrs. Jackson and Smith, is handling the commissaries successfully, rendering unnecessary the arrangement with Mr. Markel.

Protests made by the employes against the arrangement, it is believed, also influenced the decision.

Chairman Theodore P. Shonts of the Panama Canal Commission announced on Friday, Sept. 8, that he had awarded the contract for feeding and caring for canal employes to J. E. Markel of Omaha. The contract had five years to run and was estimated to involve $50,000,000. There were two other bidders, H. Balfe & Co. and Hudgins & Dumas, both of New York. The latter firm held the restaurant privilege at Ellis Island for three years.

Following Mr. Shonts's announcement, Hudgins & Dumas made public a telegram sent to President Roosevelt, asking that the Markel contract be withheld on the ground that circumstances connected with its award "seem to indicate collusion." It was charged that an entire section of the Hudgins & Dumas bid was credited to Mr. Markel, and that "the precipitancy with which bids were called for, without public advertisement and with no regular time set for receiving and opening the bids in the presence of the bidders" warranted the assumption that "a predisposition existed to award the contract to Mr. Markel, and that other considerations were sacrificed to this end."

Hudgins & Dumas specifically waived any claims for the concession, alleging that the only desire of the firm was "to prevent the consummation of an irregular proceeding."

The telegram, which was forwarded to the President at Oyster Bay, was accompanied by a message from H. Balfe & Co., requesting "a thorough investigation of the Panama privileges and concessions awarded Mr. Markel." Both withdrew their bids.

Mr. Shonts expressed great surprise when told of the protest. He said that the award was a Panama Railroad and not a commission matter.

"I found the bid of Hudgins & Dumas so low that I feared there was some misunderstanding and wrote them, explaining some specifications," he said later. "I thought they had figured low on cooked meats, expecting to make it up on supplies, and found this surmise to be correct. I told them that the matter of supplies might be withdrawn, in which event they would lose money. I gave them the opportunity to put in a new bid. They thanked me personally and placed a second bid, raising their prices 100 per cent. Mr. Balfe thanked me for the treatment accorded him."

Before submitting his bid Mr. Markel, who has for years conducted a line of railway eating houses in the West, spent a month in Panama and worked out a comprehensive scheme which involved the establishment of ten hotels along the railroad and canal, each of them to accommodate from 150 to 250 lodgers and twice as many table boarders. He made the trip at the instance of the Government in July.

Chairman Shonts said at the time that the idea of the concession was to furnish wholesome food to those employed on the Isthmus at the lowest possible cost. To this end, he said, Mr. Markel would be permitted to ship foodstuffs from New York on the Panama ships and Panama trains at the actual cost of transportation. His refrigerating plants, bakeries, and laundries would be given to him by the Government.

Hudgins & Dumas charged that their bid was really lower than that of Mr. Markel, and that an entire section, including their sample menu, had been incorporated in the Markel bid. They did not hesitate to say that Mr. Markel had seen their bid before making his own. They alleged, further, that they were allowed but thirty minutes to rearrange their bid when Chairman Shonts explained the plans and specifications under which they were competing.

President Roosevelt instructed Chairman Shonts to make a special report covering the matter. It was sent from Mr. Shonts's Summer home, at Greenwich, Conn., on Sept. 13. On the following day it was announced from Oyster Bay that the award would stand. Mr. Markel at once began the organization of the forces which he proposed to utilize in Panama.

CONSULTING ENGINEERS SAIL.

Several Members Make a Final Inspection in a Heavy Rain.

COLON, Oct. 11.—The steamship Havana sailed for New York at 5 o'clock this afternoon with the members of the Canal Commission, the Board of Consulting Engineers, and other members of the party who sailed for Colon from New York Sept. 28.

The members of the commission were reticent regarding their report. It will be several weeks before it is ready for presentation to President Roosevelt.

Several members of the Board of Consulting Engineers left Colon this morning, some going to Panama and others to Culebra, returning in the afternoon. Major Gen. George W. Davis and two others went to Gatun, whence they came down the Chagres to the Atlantic mouth of the river in a launch and thence by sea to Colon. The distance from Gatun to the mouth of the Chagres is seven miles, and from the latter by sea to Colon is also seven miles. The trip was made in a drenching rain.

Steamer Ashore, Crew Saved.

BUFFALO, Oct. 11.—The coal-laden steamer Charles H. Burton went ashore at Barcelona, the port of entry at Westfield, to-day. A crew of eight men was rescued by Westfield men in small boats.

REPORT CASE AGAINST BAKER

Civil Service Commission Asks Department of Justice to Act—Statute of Limitations May Run.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The charge of soliciting and accepting campaign contributions in the campaign of 1902, made against United States Circuit Judge Baker of Indiana by the Civil Service Commission, has been referred to the Department of Justice. The commission to-day gave out a statement as follows:

"The Civil Service Commission, through Commissioner Greene, conducted an examination on Sept. 22 and 23, 1905, into a charge of a violation of the Civil Service act, by the collection of illegal assessments at Goshen, Ind.

"Guy C. Boulton, clerk in the Post Office, testified that he was told in the Fall of 1902 by the Assistant Postmaster, Alderman, to visit Francis E. Baker, Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit; that he was sent during office hours to see Judge Baker; that he was told by Judge Baker that it was to his interest to keep in power the servant of the party to which witness (Boulton) owed his appointment; and that, even if witness was in the civil service, his superior would give him trouble in case of a change of administration. He also was told that Judge Baker paid liberally for political purposes, and that clerks in the service usually gave 5 per cent. of their salary, with other statements along the same line. In pursuance of these suggestions from Judge Baker, Boulton afterward paid 5 per cent. of his salary, being $30, to D. W. Neidig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee.

"La Mar Croop, also a clerk in the Goshen Post Office, testified that Judge Baker was in the Post Office in the Fall of 1902; that the Assistant Postmaster told witness to go and see Judge Baker during office hours. Judge Baker urged the witness to pay money for campaign purposes, and the witness told Judge Baker that he could not afford to, whereupon Judge Baker said to him, 'You can afford to do without a suit of clothes and make your payment.' He was urged to pay 5 per cent. Thereafter the witness spoke to Postmaster Sherwin about paying his assessment, and said that he did not have the money to pay, and Sherwin advanced him, on Oct. 7, 1902, $50, which was paid by Croop.

"Martin T. Schnur, a clerk in the Post Office, testified that he also was sent in the Fall of 1902 to Judge Baker; was urged to pay money to the Republican campaign fund, and did pay $25, 5 per cent. of his salary. He was unable to make the payment and the Postmaster lent him the amount.

"This testimony was presented to Judge Baker and the facts stated by the witnesses were admitted by him to be true. The Civil Service Commission has felt some hesitation in taking any action in the premises, but it is regarded that, inasmuch as violations by others of the Civil Service act occurring in the Goshen Post Office are to be proceeded against and punished, it is not right that distinction should be made in favor of a violator of the law, however exalted his position. The charges against Judge Baker have, therefore, been referred to the Department of Justice.

"There is a clear case of the violation of a provision of the Civil Service act, Section 11. The only question involved is of the running of the statute of limitations, and this is the only defense which can be opposed to the charge, and we feel it our duty to leave the question of the sufficiency of this defense to the Department of Justice."

TO MAKE DEATH PAINLESS.

Miss Hall Advocates Use of Anaesthetics in Hopeless Cases.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—Legalized administration of anaesthetics to persons dying in agony was the subject of a resolution proposed by Miss Hall of Cincinnati at the American Humane Association in the New Century drawing rooms today.

Miss Hall said that often in railway wrecks persons are so injured that their lives cannot be saved. In such cases she thought it ought to be permissible to administer anaesthetics. When persons are dying of consumption, lockjaw, and other diseases in which they suffer agony, she thought the same was true. She read the names of clergymen and educators who, she said, favored her proposition.

Her idea was opposed by some members.

Addicks's Property Goes for $510.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 11.—United States Marshal Flinn to-day sold on the $45,000 judgment of Charles H. Hinchman of Camden, N. J., the one-half interest of J. Edward Addicks in the personal property on his Riverside Farm, two miles below New Castle. The sale netted only $510.

FOOD

FITS MANY

To Leave Off Coffee and Use Postum.

Postum Coffee shows its great nourishing powers in many ways.

"I was nursing my baby six months ago," writes a young matron, "and I found that tea and coffee did not agree with me. I grew nervous and weak, my appetite was not good, and, besides, baby was cross and fretful. He didn't seem to get proper nourishment from my milk, and friends said: 'You must wean him, he is starving.'

"I gave up tea and coffee and tried cocoa, chocolate, and milk instead, but still baby didn't seem to thrive. At last, on the advice of a friend, I began to use Postum Coffee, and I can truly say that the effect was wonderful! Both baby and I began to improve in appetite, spirits, and flesh immediately. In three months my boy weighed 20 pounds and he is as good a baby as a mother could wish to have. My drinking Postum did it.

"I cannot recommend Postum Food Coffee too highly to nursing mothers. It is better in flavor than the other coffee and is far superior in nutritive qualities, supplying just what the child must have, as no other food can do." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason—explained in the quaint little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each pkg.

BISSELL'S

BISSELL'S CARPET SWEEPERS

If there is any one fact upon which the general public is agreed, it is that the Bissell is the best carpet sweeper made. It is the one only carpet sweeper that has stood the test of time, and its superiority is fully attested by the magnitude of its sales. Over 80% of all the carpet sweepers in use throughout the world are Bissell's. Think of this when an inferior sweeper is urged upon you as "something just as good as a Bissell." $2.50 to $5.00. Sold by all first-class dealers. Buy now, send us the purchase slip and we will send you free a neat useful present.

$1.10 for the new $1.75 silk chiffon velvets again to-day.

VELVET is the latest vogue. The popularity of the new silk chiffon velvets has never been exceeded by it, or any other dress material. It is so scarce in the new wine, plum, prune and purple shades that the smart dresser who wears any one of these smart colors is almost sure to have an exclusive costume. Do not mistake these velvets for the ordinary cheaper grade made to sell at 1.25, that soon lose their lustre and look dull and unattractive. They are the very highest grade of 1.75 SILK FACE chiffon velvets, that never lose their beauty—a beauty that is not equalled in any other fabric.

1.10 — Five hundred pieces were purchased for this sale—more than all other stores combined have in stock, according to manufacturers, and while you might go for miles trying to find the new popular wines, plums, prunes and purples, we have them in abundance. Also Alice and Gobelin Blue, Lavenders, and all the popular street and pastel shades for those handsome Evening Wraps and Costumes. — EIGHTY SMART SHADES

The greatest purchase ever made in America, we believe. Dressmakers and small dealers should take advantage, as this quality cannot be bought at wholesale at the low price we ask. A sale at the height of the season. Main Floor.

HUGHES TO DIG FURTHER INTO THE MUTUAL LIFE

Prepared to Ask Questions on Legislative Activities.

ABSENTEE LIST LONG NOW

A. C. Fields Too Ill to be Disturbed—Maybe He Can't Be Reached with a Subpoena.

The Insurance Investigating Committee adjourned yesterday until next Tuesday out of respect to the memory of Speaker Nixon of the Assembly.

This has given counsel for the committee a chance to prepare for delving deeper than ever into the way in which the Mutual Life Insurance Company is managed. This feature is likely to occupy the centre of the stage in the inquiry for several sessions. Hardly more than a beginning was made with President Richard A. McCurdy on Tuesday. A phase of the Mutual's affairs to be taken up at the next session is its legislative activities.

Another line of inquiry that is expected to be very fruitful is that concerning the syndicate participations of many of the Mutual's Directors who have not been examined. One of the men of the Mutual's "inner circle," which President McCurdy talked about on the stand Monday, is George G. Haven, whose son, George G. Haven, Jr., is a member of the Stock Exchange firm of Strong, Sturgis & Co. This firm has done a great deal of business for years with the Mutual Life and with individual financiers prominent in that company. Another member of the firm is S. M. Cromwell, the son of Treasurer Cromwell of the Mutual. The elder Cromwell testified when he was on the stand that his participation in several of the syndicates from which the Mutual Life bought bonds had been through Strong, Sturgis & Co. Mr. Haven is yet to be examined. It is the intention of Counsel Hughes to go into the question of his syndicate participations with a great deal of care.

The investigators are finding out more things every day about the activities of A. C. Fields, the venerable head of the Mutual's department of supplies. And the more the committee find out the more anxious are its counsel that Mr. Fields may be put on the stand. Unfortunately, the illness which James M. Beck offered to prove by expert testimony was keeping Mr. Fields away from the hearings appears to be of such a nature that Mr. Fields's relatives and friends are unwilling to disturb him by even letting him know that the committee wants to see him. Much less is the disposition manifested to inform Mr. Hughes and his associates where Mr. Fields is now and whether he is within reach of a subpoena.

An interesting list of absentees is rolling up in the insurance investigation. In addition to Mr. Fields and Andrew Hamilton, who has decided to stay in London a while longer before baring his heart to the committee, W. H. Buckley, another of the men involved in the "confidential legal" establishment of the Mutual Life, is not at hand, and the committee does not know where it can find him. Besides these, there are James H. Hyde, William H. McIntyre, Thomas D. Jordan, and Gen. Louis Fitzgerald of the Equitable who are out of reach of subpoenas. George H. Squire and James W. Alexander of that society, who are needed to tell about some of the Equitable's "yellow dog" transactions, are on the sick list. Then, too, Edward H. Harriman remains in Japan.

An effort will also be made to find out how A. C. Fields, whose salary from the Mutual was $10,000 a year, has been able for many years, in addition to keeping up religious activities that made him well known in Methodist circles, to maintain a house at Dobbs Ferry, another at Nyack, a third at Albany, a fourth at Asbury Park, and a fifth at the Thousand Islands. Inquiry will be made as well, whether Mr. Fields's house at Albany happens to be the same in which, according to general report, elaborate entertainments were given to legislators by men who in business hours were understood to represent the life insurance interests.

Counsel for the committee are making a further inquiry into the items of upward of $70,000 a year charged up in the Mutual's annual report to "lunches." They will try to find out for whom these lunches were served and how elaborate was the bill of fare of those which went to the higher officers of the company. A report was current yesterday that the Mutual Life maintained a wine cellar for the use of its officers and their guests. No confirmation of this was obtainable.

Senators Armstrong, Tulley, and Riordan and Assemblyman Prentice attended yesterday's session of the committee. All of the counsel were there, too. In declaring the session adjourned to next Tuesday Senator Armstrong said:

"This committee meets this morning for the purpose of expressing its regret at the sad death of Speaker Nixon. He was in the fifteenth year of his representation of the Second District of the County of Chautauqua and in his seventh consecutive term as Speaker. He was singularly great-hearted, sympathetic to all, and with that nice sense of men and conditions that made him so powerful a Speaker.

"He enjoyed the friendship of thousands, the foundation of which was respect. No man exercised a greater influence and used it more wisely. His loss is most serious."

HEGEMAN WILL TESTIFY.

Metropolitan Life's President Coming Straight from Victoria.

VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 11.—J. R. Hegeman, President of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York, and his wife arrived from Japan last night by the steamer Empress of Japan. Mr. Hegeman said he would go straight to New York to give evidence in the investigation into the affairs of the insurance companies, if required.

He said stories circulated that he had gone to Japan to escape giving evidence before the investigation committee were totally untrue. He had planned his trip to Japan a year ago. The investigation, he said, was as inevitable as it was unfortunate, for he felt it would do considerable harm to the insurance business. Regarding the alleged "blind loans" and contributions to campaign funds, he declined to speak, saying he had heard nothing concerning the investigation, and was not in a position to discuss its exposures.

"You may say for me, however," he said, "that I am going direct to New York, and far from trying to avoid giving evidence, I will be willing to appear before the committee when requested."

DU BOIS SANE, THEY SAY.

One of Several Teachers Remembers He Was Fond of Cake.

Half a dozen school teachers, who taught in the school where Alpheus D. Du Bois had been Principal for half a century, testified yesterday in the Supreme Court that Du Bois always appeared to be of sound mind.

The teachers were called by the proponents of the Du Bois will in the interest of the sisters of the old school Principal, who, if the will is proved, will inherit about $300,000 of the Du Bois estate, which Du Bois's daughter, Mrs. Ivy Blanche McKee, is fighting for.

One of the teachers said she usually shared her lunch with Du Bois, as the old Principal was fond of cake and jellies. The trial will be continued to-day.

REAL LEGAL FIGHT.

Wrecks Lawyer Henry's Umbrella and Stirs Up Magistrate Moss.

The unprinted price schedule for legal services in the Tombs Court quotes the procuring of a bondsman at 10 per cent. on the amount of bail fixed by the Magistrate. To go below this rate is considered unprofessional. So the thirty and odd lawyers who draw their practice from that bailiwick stick to the schedule as long as they don't see a chance of raising it.

A sad breach of faith which occurred yesterday, furnishing a painful exception to the customary adherence to high ideals, so impressed the member of the Tombs Court bar, who was the immediate victim of it, that he went one step further and forgot all about that section in the code of court etiquette, which says:

"Always remember that the calling of names breaks no bones."

But before Lawyer M. Jesse Henry went thus far he had been exposed to provocation which it would have taken superhuman self-control to resist. Not only had his colleague, Lawyer Louis Spiegel, got a legally baited and hooked client away from him by accepting $25 for a $300 bond, but when reproached in comparatively moderate terms for this unprofessional behavior, had retorted in language.

Then, and only then, did Henry reach out his right fist. There was a collision between the face and the fist, which, in accordance with the well-recognized law of reflex action, caused the muscles of Spiegel's left leg to contract and extend violently.

The result was a kick on Henry's shin which called forth on his part not only a warwhoop that could be heard up on Broadway, but likewise a rapid and rhythmic lifting and sinking of the umbrella which he was clutching in his left hand. The umbrella broke into small pieces after having produced many bumps on Spiegel's head.

All this happened on the stairway leading up to the Centre Street entrance of the Criminal Courts Building. So engrossed were the combatants in the particular business of the moment that they failed to notice the passing of Magistrate Moss on his way to court. Magistrate Moss knew neither man, and would perhaps have gone his way had he not discovered Court Officer Daly at the top of the stairs bent double in a fit of uncontrollable laughter. That was too much, and the Magistrate cried sharply to the amused policeman:

"Why don't you arrest them?"

Then he continued his way up the stairs, while Daly suddenly lost all his desire to laugh.

But before the policeman could act the two lawyers had grasped the danger of the situation and had made their escape in opposite directions, both of them forgetting the client in their haste. Daly made his way into the court room with many misgivings. When the Magistrate was told who the fighters were and why they had been fighting, he laughed in his turn and remarked:

"I never thought lawyers fought except with their mouths."

STOLE STAMPS.

$10,000 in Business Lost as the Result of a Mail Clerk's Pilfering.

The steady and wholly inexplicable falling off in the amount of business done by mail recently caused the firm of Maxwell & La Costa, advertising agents at 104 Nassau Street, to appeal to Capt. Hodgins of the Oak Street police for help. Two precinct detectives were put on the case.

Yesterday morning they arrested Lorne Porter, a twenty-two-year-old Brooklynite, employed by the firm as mailing clerk. In explanation of the reduced mail business, the detectives dragged out pounds of unmailed and unstamped letters which young Porter had stowed away in drawers and boxes instead of mailing them, the money he should have used for postage passing into his own pocket.

When Porter was arraigned before Magistrate Mott, in the Tombs Court, a representative of the firm estimated the amount lost by the clerk's dishonesty at nearly $10,000. He also informed the Magistrate that Porter was sent to Elmira Reformatory two years ago for a similar offense, and that, after his release he got the place with Maxwell & La Costa by the intercession of his family, with whom the owners of the firm were acquainted.

The charge against Porter was grand larceny of $50. He was held in $1,000 bail for examination. After the arrest the detectives learned that their prisoner had planned to make his escape yesterday morning. He had packed and taken along a dress suit case containing some clothing, and had left this in a drug store while he paid a last visit to the office. In that visit he was caught.

MRS. ROOSEVELT TO GO SOUTH

Will Accompany President to Georgia —Norfolk's Quarantine Off.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Mrs. Roosevelt will accompany the President on his Southern trip as far as Roswell, Ga., the third stop on the trip. From this station Mrs. Roosevelt will return to this city by train.

The quarantine in force at Norfolk, Va., for several weeks against New Orleans and other Southern points was raised to-day and the examination of train passengers by medical officers was discontinued.

The War Department has received daily reports from military posts near yellow fever infected points. No cases have developed in the army, and the immunity is attributed to vigorous precautions taken when the fever outbreak occurred. Every window in every building was screened, steps were taken to destroy the mosquitos, and screens were placed over water barrels and tanks.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 11.—The official yellow fever summary for Mississippi covering twenty-four hours follows:

Vicksburg, five new cases in city, one in county; Natchez, five cases; Gulfport, one new case; Port Gibson, three new cases.

NOT MR. LAWRENCE.

Stenographer's Error Made Him Appear as Making His Own Contracts.

It appears that by the error of a stenographer, an injustice was done to Lysander W. Lawrence, the stationer, in THE TIMES's report of the insurance investigation yesterday. Mr. Lawrence has long supplied stationery to the Mutual Life. In the course of his examination, bringing out this and other facts, Mr. Hughes asked a witness who placed the Mutual's contracts when the head of the supply department, A. C. Fields, was absent. The witness's answer was, "Mr. Norris." The stenographer took down the name as "Mr. Lawrence," thus making it appear as the testimony was printed in THE TIMES that Mr. Lawrence had at times supervision on behalf of the Mutual of contracts made with himself. On the contrary, the placing of these contracts was supervised in the absence of Mr. Fields by his regular assistant, Charles A. Norris.

Wealthy Woman Linguist Missing.

Upon the request of J. Edward Weld, a lawyer, who lives at 37 East Fifty-ninth Street, Police Headquarters sent out an alarm yesterday for his mother, Mrs. Amelia Weld, aged 73, who, the son says, has been missing since Monday. Mrs. Weld is described as a wealthy woman and a fluent linguist. Her son has offices at 55 Liberty Street.

GOULD ROUTS RAMSEY IN WABASH ELECTIONS

Deposed President Fails Even to Keep Seat as a Director.

PROTESTS ALL OVERRULED

Counsel Renew Declaration That Issues Will Be Taken to Court—Second Night Session.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, Oct. 11.—Utterly defeated, Joseph Ramsey, Jr., bent to the power of George J. Gould at the Wabash Railroad's annual meeting to-night, and as a mark of acknowledgment of his defeat, cast no ballot at the stockholders' election of their six Directors.

After the refusal of the Inspectors to allow any of Ramsey's claims this morning, the outcome was plainly to be seen. The new Board of Directors is composed of T. H. Hubbard, E. T. Jeffrey, John T. Terry, W. S. Pierce, R. N. Galloway, E. T. Welles, S. C. Reynolds, C. G. Gould, Russell Sage, W. B. Sanders, R. C. Clowry, and Welsh Blodgett. The thirteenth Director and President of the company is Frederick A. Delano.

Judge Doyle, Ramsey's counsel, caused amazement this evening, when, after affidavits and proxies had been produced and rejected, he offered to the tellers the actual stock certificates signed over to Ramsey for a great amount of stock which had been voted by Gould.

The total vote cast by Gould at the final election was 689,907. Had Ramsey been permitted to cast his cumulative vote he would have had 526,366 votes for Director, or only 163,611 less than Gould.

At the morning session, when the vote of the bondholders was announced, it was shown that Ramsey had obtained but 31,840 votes against the 228,510 cast for each of the six men nominated by Gould. Ramsey made no nominations, but cast all the votes he controlled for himself. His demand that he be allowed to cast his vote under the cumulative system was rejected, but he could not have been elected even in that manner.

When Vice President Blodgett, acting as Chairman of the caucus, announced that a total of 260,350 votes had been cast Mr. Ramsey objected to the statement, declaring that his private tally sheet showed that the number was 10,000 less than that. He asked that his count be checked up with that of the election Inspectors. This was refused, after considerable debate, Mr. Ramsey being informed that he could check up his list at any time after the adjournment.

The caucus of stockholders made much more rapid progress than that of the bondholders. The roll call to determine whether or not a quorum was present was concluded at 6:30 o'clock, when a recess of two hours was taken.

The afternoon session of the stockholders presented practically no variation from the scenes of the morning and yesterday. Protests were filed every time a share of stock supposed to be in any way connected with the Missouri Pacific or the Iron Mountain was voted. All the stock voted by Gould which Ramsey asserted that he had proxies for backed up by affidavits also was protested.

Several technicalities in regard to the making of proxies came up. The question of the admissibility of telegraphic proxies occupied some time, and was duly objected to. Similar cases were decided in Gould's favor yesterday.

Charlotte Crabtree, better known as the actress "Lotta," voted 400 shares for Gould. The Gould estates show holdings in the sum of $10,540,000 of Wabash shares.

CLASH IN CHURCH FEDERATION

Unitarians Left Out, and They Ask Where Is Unity Then?

A clash came yesterday in a scheme of church federation under which it is planned to hold some big meetings in this city next month. The Unitarian denomination was left out.

About 700 official delegates and alternates are coming here, representing about 18,000,000 church members. Among the elected delegates were the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, Chaplain of the United States Senate; the Hon. John D. Long, and the Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, President of the American Unitarian Association and son of President Eliot of Harvard. The committee in charge of the scheme has declined to admit them.

The Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer of All Souls' Church said yesterday for the Unitarians: "We feel no resentment, but it seems to us Unitarians that here is federation without federation. When unity is professed it is strangely lacking."

The General Secretary of the National Federation is the Rev. Dr. E. B. Sanford. On the committees in charge of the meetings soon to be held are many of the prominent clergy and laymen of all Protestant bodies of the whole country. Dr. Sanford said yesterday:

"I took no action without first consulting our full committee. The limitation was early made to such bodies as unquestionably accept Jesus Christ as the head of the Church."

JIU-JITSU IN COURT.

Miss Sogi Shows How She Threw Man Who Annoyed Her.

Miss Misao Sogi, the little ninety-five-pound Japanese woman who caused the arrest of J. F. McCullum, an athlete, on Tuesday night after she had jiu-jitsued him flat as a flounder on the sidewalk on 125th Street, showed in Harlem Court yesterday how she had floored McCullum. Interested spectators were Magistrate Barlow, who is sitting in Harlem Court, and Magistrate Crane, who was a visitor.

Miss Sogi appeared in court accompanied by Koyta Yoshimura, through whom she said that McCullum had spoken to her and seized her by the shoulder.

"Suppose she shows the Magistrate what she did," suggested Bicycle Policeman Whitman, who had arrested McCullum.

Miss Sogi, when an interpreter put his hand on her shoulder, as McCullum is alleged to have done, grabbed his other arm with a quick motion, shoved one of her tiny feet forward, and the interpreter, who weighs 165 pounds, was hurled backward to the floor. Yoshimura then took his place and Miss Sogi sent him flying over her head.

"She threw me higher than that," remarked McCullum ruefully. He explained that he thought he knew Miss Sogi when he saw her or he would not have spoken to her. Magistrate Barlow fined him $5 on a charge of disorderly conduct.

31,000 NEW LIBRARY BOOKS

And 200,238 Readers for the Year, the Director Reports.

The report of Dr. John S. Billings, director of the New York Public Library, for the year ending June 30 presented to the Trustees yesterday, showed large additions to the library. The meeting, which was held in the Astor Building, was the first since the Summer recess.

Additions to the library in the year were 31,000 volumes and 78,000 pamphlets, bringing the total to 657,500 volumes and 256,500 pamphlets. There are 476,000 more volumes in the various branches of the Circulation Department, making a grand total of 1,390,000 volumes. There were 200,238 readers in the library, who consulted 615,454 books, of which only 25 per cent. were printed in English. There are thirty-four branches, fourteen being Carnegie gifts. Three more Carnegie branches have been opened since the report was printed.

RUNAWAY CAR CRASHED INTO FERRYHOUSE; 8 HURT

Piece of Brooklyn's Only Cable Line Unmanageable.

GRIPMAN STICKS TO HIS POST

Tries Vainly to Let Go the Cable and, That Failing, to Work the Brakes.

With the gripman sticking to his post, a runaway car of the Montague Street cable line, Brooklyn, dashed down hill from Hicks Street to the house of the Wall Street ferry at noon yesterday, and, crashing through timbers and iron work, imbedded half its length in the structure.

Eight persons were injured—the gripman, Frank Wall, the most seriously—but none of them will die. Besides Wall, those hurt are Edward R. Cinker, 84 years old, of Washington, D. C., shock; Henry O'Neil, the conductor of the car, sprained ankle; Margaret Torrance of 177 Columbia Heights, bruised; Lillian Hoffman of 157 East Twenty-seventh Street, Manhattan, cut by broken glass; Edward Montgomery of 139 West Twenty-fifth Street, Manhattan, bruised and shaken; F. W. Whitmore, a plumber, of 108 Front Street, Manhattan, legs cut and sprained ankle, and Robert A. Pierson of 106 Prospect Place, Brooklyn, internal injuries and scalp wound.

The car had left the head of Montague Street a few minutes before noon with fifteen passengers. As the car passed Hicks Street two women signaled to the conductor that they wished to alight and he rang the bell.

Wall, the gripman, tried vainly to release the cable. Something had gone wrong. He applied the brake, but the car moved rapidly forward, gathering momentum as it proceeded toward the crest of the incline to the ferry. At a signal from the gripman the conductor tried to put on the brakes at the rear, but they did not stop the car.

Just then the car shot forward and dived down the hill. Wall opened the front door and shouted to the passengers to crowd toward the rear. Then he worked desperately to halt the runaway with his brake. When the car struck, Wall was thrown in the air and landed some distance away. He was picked up unconscious, and was found to have received many cuts and bruises.

At the foot of the hill is a switch which takes the cars to a shed in which they are kept when not in use. At the end of the track there is a heavy beam buffer cushioned with a spring. Instead of striking this buffer the car swerved and crashed into the ferry house. The passengers were thrown in a heap as the car tore through the ferry house and only stopped at a big upright. The car was battered out of shape.

Calls were sent to the Long Island College and Cumberland Street Hospitals for ambulances, and to the Fulton, Amity, and Adams Street police stations for the reserves. It was found when the ambulances got there that the Inspectors of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company had sent an automobile to the scene and taken away some of the injured.

Mr. Cinker, one of those hurt, is President of the Washington Market Company of Washington, D. C. He was stopping with friends at 275 Clinton Avenue, Brooklyn.

The railroad is the only road operated by cable in Brooklyn. It is probably the shortest car line in New York, carrying passengers from Wall Street ferry to the Borough Hall, a distance of less than half a mile.

MISS LAWSON A BRIDE.

Is Married to E. B. Stanwood—The Barn Dance Programme.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 11.—Miss Gladys Lawson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson, to-day became the bride of Eben Blaine Stanwood, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Stanwood of this city.

The wedding was celebrated at Dreamwold, Mr. Lawson's Summer home near Egypt, Mass., in the presence of a large number of guests. The entertainment that followed the wedding and the decorations were on the most lavish scale, but the salient feature of the event was a barn dance arranged by the bride, at which the farm people of the entire countryside assisted. The order of the dance was as follows:

This is the programme of the barn dance:

A hall, a hall! give room and foot it, girls. March and circle.

1. Waltz ..... The bride
"I warrant thee my man's as true as steel."
2. Quadrille ..... The bridegroom
"My mistress is the sweetest lady."
3. Two-step ..... Mrs. Lawson
"Is the lady of the house, and a good lady and a wise and virtuous."
4. Contra, Portland fancy ..... Mr. Lawson
"He bears him like a portly gentleman."
5. Waltz ..... The bridesmaids
"An' I might live to see thee married once, I have my wish."
6. Quadrille ..... The groomsmen
"Well, think of marriage now."
7. Duchess ..... The engagement
"We met, we woo'd and made exchange of vow."

INTERMISSION.

("We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.")

Waltz—schottische—two-step.

"Ah, Sirrah, thine unlooked-for sport comes well."

8. Quadrille ..... The parson
"We still have known thee for a holy man."
9. Waltz ..... The Wedding
"Make haste; the bridegroom, he is come already; make haste, I say."
10. Contra, Portland fancy ..... The feast
"The guests are come, supper served up, * * * the nurse cursed in the pantry and everything in extremity."
11. Two-step ..... The departure
"Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubbering."
12. Waltz ..... The honeymoon
"Ah, me! how sweet is love itself possess'd."
13. Quadrille ..... Housewarming
"Lord, Lord, she will be a joyful woman."
14. Waltz ..... Congratulations
"Now God in heaven bless thee."

The scheme followed in the decorations of house and grounds was intended to carry out the idea of a harvest wedding and had been designed by Mr. Lawson, the bride's father.

DEPUTY HELD FOR PERJURY.

Swore to a Wrong Complaint When He Had a Voter Arrested.

Several cases growing out of arrests for attempts at illegal registration came up in the courts yesterday. Magistrate Steinert, in the Essex Market Court, directed Samuel Karschstart, a young law clerk of 260 Henry Street, to make out a complaint charging perjury against George Keuberdanz, a Morgan deputy, who had arrested him when he attempted to register on Monday. The deputy had insisted that the law clerk did not live at 260 Henry Street. He admitted to the Magistrate that he had made a mistake.

"This is a bad state of affairs," said the Magistrate, "when a man is deprived of his liberty by a deputy who does not know what he is taking about. I direct that a complaint of perjury be made out against Keuberdanz."

The deputy was paroled to get $1,000 bail this morning.

Moses Schliomsky of 21 Catharine Street, who was arrested this week on a warrant sworn out a year ago when he was arrested and discharged because his name was misspelled in it, was discharged again by Magistrate Steinert yesterday. It was shown that he had lived at 21 Catharine Street since Aug. 4, 1904.

"This is something new in criminal procedure and indicates a queer state of affairs," remarked the Magistrate in discharging the man.

YOKOHAMA EN FETE FOR BRITISH WARSHIPS

City Decorated and General Enthusiasm Displayed.

NOEL GOES TO TOKIO TO-DAY

Speaker at a Banquet Says He Believes America Indorses the Anglo-Japanese Alliance.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 11.—The British squadron of twelve vessels, under the command of Vice Admiral Sir Gerard Noel, arrived here this morning and was officially welcomed amid scenes of general enthusiasm by Vice Admiral Shimamura.

The squadron entered in single column line ahead, the torpedo-boat destroyers leading, and took up an anchorage facing the shore. Salutes were exchanged between the Japanese flagship, the Iwate, and the British flagship, the Diadem. Admiral Shimamura then went on board the Diadem accompanied by the Governor and other local authorities and a representative of Sir Claudo Macdonald, the British Minister at Tokio. Admiral Noel later visited the Iwate.

After these ceremonies had been concluded Admiral Noel and 1,300 officers and men landed and paraded through a cheering multitude to a garden party given by the municipality, at which they were entertained by dancing, juggling, and wrestling. There was a display of day fireworks and the entire city was appropriately decorated.

At a banquet this evening Major Ichihara proposed a toast to King Edward, Queen Alexandra, and the British Navy and welcomed the visit of the squadron as strengthening the Anglo-Japanese alliance for the peaceful industrial development of the Far East and the civilization of the world. He referred to the presence of the United States battleship Wisconsin in the port of Yokohama and cordially welcomed it to Japanese waters.

Although the United States was not bound to Japan by formal ties, said Major Ichihara, that country was regarded as the friend of all nations having community of interests in Far Eastern policies. He said that President Roosevelt had illuminated the American policy for peace and the open door in China and Korea, and therefore it was his belief that the Anglo-Japanese alliance was heartily indorsed by the United States.

Admiral Noel and his staff will leave tomorrow morning for Tokio.

TOKIO, Oct. 11.—The papers extend a warm welcome to the British fleet and in most of them the portrait of Sir Gerard Noel appears.

HERMIT KINGDOM DOOMED.

A Stern Policy in Korea to be Adopted by Japan.

VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 11.—A dispatch from Tokio received by the steamer Empress of Japan states that a stern Korean policy is to be adopted by Japan following the announcement of the Anglo-Japanese treaty. Korean publicists state freely that since the treaty guarantees freedom for Japan to do what she wants in Korea the shadow of a Korean Government will shortly be swept away and practical suzerainty over Korea will be established.

Several Japanese papers state that the Foreign Ministers in Korea will probably be withdrawn shortly. The Jiji of Tokio says it is necessary that a change take place at once in Korea, that the Foreign Ministers be withdrawn, and that the Korean Ministers abroad be recalled, for as long as Korea has diplomatic rights she may be swayed by ambitious diplomats and Japanese interests may be jeopardized.

The return of Russian agents, the attitude of the Korean Government regarding uprisings of Koreans in the north, and the formation of patriotic societies in Söul are among the factors which call forth demands from political leaders in Japan for rigorous measures in Korea.

A Yokohama paper says a part of the Manchurian army may be quartered in Korea instead of being sent home to Japan as a concerted uprising of the Koreans, abetted by officials of the Korean Government, is considered too imminent a possibility to be treated lightly.

Recent attacks upon the Japaness administration in Korea by two newspapers published by Americans at Söul have angered the Tokio politicians, and there is a demand for the suppression of the papers.

Mr. Hurlbut of the Korean Review makes grave charges against the Japanese Administration. He says thousands of Korean peasants are threatened with starvation, heartrending scenes are occurring daily, and the peasants are dispossessed of their lands without compensation.

British Steamer Lost—Fifteen of Crew and Passengers Missing.

TOKIO, Oct. 11.—A report has been received at Moji that the British steamer Leho struck a floating mine ninety miles east of the Shan-Tung Lighthouse on Sept. 30.

Of the crew and passengers fifteen are reported to be missing, among them two foreign engineers.

KAISER AT ROYAL WEDDING.

Saxe-Coburg's Duke Marries a Schleswig-Holstein Princess.

GLUECKSBURG, Oct. 11.—The Princess Victoria Adelaide, eldest daughter of Duke Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein and niece of Empress Augusta Victoria, was married to the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha at midday to-day in the beautiful little castle here in the presence of about fifty members of the royal families of Germany, among them being the Emperor and Empress and all the imperial children, except Crown Prince Frederick William.

The castle was altogether too small to accommodate half the number of guests, so they came in automobiles or carriages from country places in the neighborhood. The imperial party stayed over night on the Hohenzollern, which was brought from Kiel for the purpose.

The civil ceremony took place in the wide hall of the castle. Then as many of the royal guests and their suites as could be accommodated went to the little chapel up stairs, where the religious rite was performed. To-day was a holiday in this State. Large crowds cheered the bride and bridegroom enthusiastically when they appeared together on the balcony of the castle.

Prince Eitel's Fiancee.

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—The Duchess Sophie Charlotte of Oldenburg, whose betrothal to Prince Eitel Frederick, second son of Emperor William, was announced last night, is a slim, graceful girl, with pale, regular features. She is four and a half years older than Prince Eitel, and is little known in Berlin. She has been her father's constant companion on his long yachting trips. The Grand Duke of Oldenburg spends the greater part of the year on board his steam yacht Lensahn, and his daughter is equally fond of the water. She became well acquainted with Prince Eitel at Kiel last June.

GERMAN-BRITISH WAR TALK.

More Germans Than Englishmen Desirous of a Conflict.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—The statements recently published in Paris in regard to the resignation of M. Delcassé have encouraged the exertions of a powerful clique in this country which is endeavoring to persuade the Germans that in England there is a party which desires nothing more than an armed conflict with Germany.

The truth is that the number of more or less influential Germans who desire as an ultimate issue a trial of strength between Germany and Great Britain is out of all proportion to the isolated individuals in England who have been rash enough to advocate such a policy.

The German advocates of what in the popular phrase is called the ultimate settlement with England will make what capital they can of the latest phase of the duel between Prince von Bülow and M. Delcassé and will employ that capital in promoting chauvinist agitation on behalf of the German navy. This is perhaps the only gain, if, indeed, it be accounted gain, reaped in any quarter on this side of the Rhine from the recent labors of German diplomacy.

RUSSIA WILLING TO BARGAIN.

An Invitation to England to Enter Upon a Discussion.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 11.—Another important contribution on the subject of an Anglo-Russian understanding appears in the Russ to-day.

The organ of the Foreign Office is not satisfied with the general assurances of Great Britain's readiness to come to an agreement. It wants more specific declarations, particularly in reference to the special interests which the Anglo-Japanese treaty is intended to protect.

The expression of such a desire by an inspired organ affords convincing evidence of the willingness of the Russian Government to discover a basis of understanding. Indeed, the article in the Russ may be regarded as a direct invitation to Great Britain to enter upon the fullest and most free discussion of the respective interests of the two powers in Central Asia, which must necessarily precede a sound and durable understanding.

An exceedingly well-informed personage has given me a statement in regard to Russia's aims and interests in the Middle East. "We will begin," he said, "by elucidating the conditions which would render an understanding impossible. They resolve themselves into the question of our trade in the Persian Gulf. If England places obstacles in the way of our sending merchantmen and gunboats to those waters we shall regard it as evidence of ill-will. We want equal opportunities for trade in Persia. We want also to be allowed to trade in Northern Afghanistan. We further want assurances that England will not undertake important steps affecting those countries, such as the delimitation of frontiers, without consulting us.

"In return Russia could offer to recognize Great Britain's special position in Tibet."

AN EXODUS FROM MOSCOW.

Strike Causes a Panic—Thirty Thousand Workmen Now Out.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 11.—The unexpected extension of the strike movement in Moscow, following the recent disturbances, has caused something like a panic. Whole families are deserting the old capital. Trains arrive here crowded and return almost empty, but the authorities apparently expect no serious trouble. The university will reopen to-morrow.

Strikes are reported to have begun in St. Petersburg, but the city is remarkably quiet. This is probably due to the extraordinary tolerance of the Government toward the public meetings daily held in various academic establishments, at which political views and opinions even of the most advanced character are freely expressed.

Father John of Kronstadt is preaching sermons against the reform movement.

MOSCOW, Oct. 11.—The strike of the factory workers continues to spread, and 30,000 workmen are now out. The great workshops of the Brest Railway are now involved. The railway shops are cordoned by troops.

Though the strike movement is spreading the city is remarkably quiet. In an encounter between police and strikers at the Velo Wheel Works to-day one man was severely wounded. Otherwise the day was uneventful. The police to-night dispersed a crowd in the Prechitensky Boulevard.

The strike is affecting factories in the Government of Moscow outside the city.

The managers of the newspapers have decided to concede the demands of the compositors. The other employers met to-day and determined not to enter into negotiations with the strikers, but they promised that if the men returned to work they would consider their demands and answer them within a week.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 11.—The workmen of several factories here are on strike, but this movement is not yet important.

The police to-day discovered in the outskirts of St. Petersburg a number of secret printing establishments, which have been engaged in issuing revolutionary proclamations. As a result of the discovery forty arrests have been made.

CZAR AIDS JEWISH STUDENTS.

Lets Them Enter Universities Pending Action by Assembly.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 11.—Emperor Nicholas has decided to turn over to the National Assembly the final settlement of the question of the admission without restriction of Jews to the universities and other general legislation relative to the status of the Jews.

In reply to a petition from the faculties of the St. Petersburg and Moscow Universities advocating the unrestricted admission of Jewish students the Emperor has notified the faculties of this decision, and, pending the action of the National Assembly, he has authorized the admission of Jews who are applying this year in excess of the legal percentage.

MUTINY ON THE OCEANIC.

Thirty-three Firemen Arrested on Arrival at Liverpool.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 11.—Thirty-three firemen of the White Star liner Oceanic, which arrived here to-day from New York, were arrested after her arrival on the charge of conspiring to disobey the Captain's orders during the voyage from New York.

The dispute arose over wages. It is reported that the men refused to do their work.

CHINA TO MAKE CLAIM ON US FOR INDEMNITY

Contends That Deportations Since Treaty Expired Are Illegal.

MAY ASK TEST AT THE HAGUE

Waiting Till Amount is $1,000,000 or More, It is Said, so Americans Will Pay Heed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The Chinese Government is preparing to make indemnity claims against the United States for those subjects of the Empress to whom admission to this country has been denied and who have been deported under operation of the Chiness exclusion law. It was stated at the Chinese Legation to-night that no claims for indemnity had been presented, but that all data in regard to such claims and the facts in each were being collected as a due matter of business in the legation.

No move will be made, however, in presenting these claims for six months or a year yet. The number of claims of this class in which it is contended that deportation was not justified under the exclusion law is upward of 200. The officials of the legation have no idea as to the aggregate of the claims. It is not unlikely that the total will run up into the millions.

One version of the affair is that the Chinese Government has ordered the legation to collect information in all such cases of deportation until the aggregate of claims for indemnity is more than $1,000,000, when the claims will be presented. This is said to be arranged on the theory that the American has no respect for small amounts. If the United States refuses to consider the claims the Chinese Government will endeavor to have the matter submitted to arbitration at The Hague.

Should Congress modify the Exclusion act or the Senate make a treaty that would meet the views recently expressed by Secretary Taft, it is not improbable that anything would be heard of the claims. It is understood that the Chinese claim is based only on cases that have occurred since the lapse of the extended Burlingame treaty last year.

The exclusion law was passed against the protest of China and can in no sense be called an international contract. Under existing trade treaties China, it is believed, would have a good case in The Hague court for indemnity in the cases of deportation which have occurred within a year.

A delegation of thirty-two Chinese officers and importers will arrive in this country early in December to urge concessions in the new treaty to be negotiated between the United States and China. Dr. Long, of Shanghai and Wong Kai Gop came here a month or so ago as Trade Commissioners to study conditions. It is understood that no concessions will be asked so far as coolies are concerned, but only liberal treatment for merchants and students.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 11.—A motion to advance hearing on the cases of the six Chinamen, who had been ordered deported from Cleveland under the Exclusion act was granted by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in this city today. The cases are expected to come up at the December term of court.

The same technical question is involved in all of the suits, the contention being that the treaty with China providing for exclusion has expired, and there is no exclusion act under which Chinamen can be deported. The litigation affects many of the Chinamen now in the United States.

NEW GIANT LINER SAILS.

The Amerika, Largest Ship in World, Leaves Hamburg for New York.

HAMBURG, Oct. 11.—Herr Ballin, Director of the Hamburg-American Steamship Line, was one of the passengers who sailed for New York to-day on the company's new steamer Amerika.

The vessel has on board her full capacity of passengers.

The Amerika, the largest ship in the world, is 687 feet long, 74 feet 6 inches wide, and 53 feet deep. She can carry about 4,000 passengers and crew. It was only last April that she was launched at Belfast, and the placing in her of her machinery, &c., has been accomplished with remarkable speed.

With the maiden voyage of this vessel almost the last distinction between life on an ocean liner and that in a first-class modern hotel disappears. The Amerika has an a la carte restaurant, open day and night, and it is understood that if passengers desire they can pay for transportation only, and buy their meals on board. The vessel has electric elevators from one deck to another, telephones from the staterooms to the restaurant and other parts of the ship, a florist's shop, a gymnasium, trained nurses, a nursery for children, and electric and hydropathic baths.

ALFONSO GOING TO BERLIN.

Visit Believed to be Connected with a Matrimonial Project.

MADRID, Oct. 11.—The Palace authorities have been ordered to prepare for the departure of King Alfonso for Germany on Nov. 3. The King will remain in Berlin from Nov. 6 to Nov. 12, attending elaborate festivities.

The King's departure for Germany, immediately following President Loubet's visit to Madrid, attracts comment. The fact that the Premier is to accompany his Majesty is said to indicate that questions of State will be considered.

However, the King's visit to Germany was arranged long ago, and is generally believed to be connected with a matrimonial project.

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—The interior of the Spanish Embassy here is being redecorated in preparation for the visit of King Alfonso. The principal member of his suite will be Premier Montero Rios.

The programme includes the review of an army corps, a stag hunt in the crown forest of Oranienburg, and the usual dinners.

WESTERN UNION'S LOSS ON RACE NEWS, $215,755

Stopping the Service Made a Hole in the Company's Earnings.

GAIN IN MESSAGE BUSINESS

But Increased Expenses Made a Decrease of $699,409 in Net Revenue —Hyde and Depew Re-elected.

The discontinuance of race reports last year cut down the earnings of the Western Union Telegraph Company $215,755. The expenses increased $483,654, so that the decrease in net revenue for the year ended June 30, was $699,409. In regard to the loss caused by stopping the race news, President Clowry says:

"There was a large increase of revenue from message business, but the loss resulting from the discontinuance of race reports shortly before the beginning of the fiscal year made a decrease of $215,755 in the total earnings. Owing to the conditions under which the race service had been handled a proportionate decrease could not be made in the expenses, which show an increase of $483,654, of which amount $300,000 represents the cost of handling the increased message business."

During the year 67,477,320 messages were sent over the Western Union wires, against 5,879,282 sent thirty-eight years ago. The average cost per message to the company was 27.3 cents and the average toll was 31.6 cents.

In poles and cable 874 miles and in wires 29,152 miles were added to the plant. There were 356 new offices established. Of the total of 1,184,557 miles of wire on June 30, 306,736 were of copper.

In dividends $4,868,083 was paid out of the net revenue of $7,188,064. The cost of new construction was $1,288,279 less than in the previous year. This is the income account compared with 1903-4:

	1905.	1904.
Gross revenue	$29,033,635	$29,249,390
Operating expenses	21,845,570	21,361,915
Net revenue	$7,188,065	$7,887,475
Intsrest on bonde	1,227,200	1,167,700
Net profit	$5,960,865	$6,729,775
Dividends	4,868,084	4,868,071
Surplus	$1,092,781	$1,861,704
Previous surplus	14,881,429	13,019,725
Total surplus	$15,974,210	$14,881,429

The surplus, after the deduction of operating expenses and bond interest, amounted to $5,960,865 for the year, or 6.12 per cent. on the $97,370,000 capital stock. Of the company's real estate in New York President Clowry says:

"Purchases have been completed of the properties 14, 16, and 18 Dey Street, west of and adjoining the company's main building at the corner of Broadway and Dey Street. These properties are available for extension westwardly on Dey Street of the present main building when the necessities of the business require it."

At the annual stockholders' meeting yesterday Harris C. Fahnestock and Thomas H. Hubbard were elected Directors to succeed Charles Lockhard and A. R. Brewer. James H. Hyde, Chauncey M. Depew, and J. Pierpont Morgan were re-elected. The officers will be elected next week.

CENSURE MINISTER ROCKHILL.

Americans Charge Him with Discourtesy to Miss Roosevelt.

VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 11.—Mail advices by the steamship Empress of Japan include a Manila dispatch to the Japanese Advertiser of Yokohama which stated that Gen. Corbin had severely censured United States Minister Rockhill at Peking, charging him with dereliction of social duty in the provisions made for the reception and entertainment of the President's daughter and her party at Peking. The Advertiser said:

"Execrable mismanagement of the reception and direct discourtesy on the part of the Minister are charges freely made. The returning party say the marked scantiness of attention paid them was sufficient to elicit surprise from the various legation staffs of the other Peking embassies."

CHESS CHALLENGE ACCEPTED.

Berlin Club to Play the Manhattan Club by Cable.

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—Amid a scene of great enthusiasm the members of the Berlin Chess Club at a special meeting last evening unanimously passed a resolution accepting the challenge of the Manhattan Chess Club of New York for a match on six boards to be played by cable, the contest to take place at the end of November.

The local club selected the following players to represent it: Schallopp, Berthold Lasker, (brother of champion Lasker,) Caro, Lewitt, Post, and Ranneforth.

It is pointed out here that the Berlin Club could not very well accede to the wish of the Manhattan Chess Club that it play only men who have never before taken part in an international chess tournament.

R. W. Ferguson, Chairman of the Match and Tournament Committee of the Manhattan Chess Club, said yesterday that the Manhattan Club would certainly accept the team selected by the Berlin Club. The matter, however, would have to be placed before the Tournament Committee, which would no doubt take official action.

$4,000 A MONTH ON DUMMIES.

Dougherty Padded Teachers' Rolls for Ten Years, Jury Hears.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 11.—An average income of from $2,500 to $4,000 a month for ten years, by means of padded pay rolls, is the latest estimate made from disclosures before the Grand Jury in the case of N. C. Dougherty, City Superintendent of Schools, accused of forgery. The total loss to the city by the padded pay rolls is estimated at $250,000. At least twenty-four new cases, in addition to the indictments previously returned, are in preparation, the Grand Jury reported to the State's Attorney.

The School Board is following the theory that he lost between $60,000 and $100,000 in gold mining schemes. His real estate investments as a rule were successful. The defendant refuses to see any one except his immediate family and attorneys.

PROSPERITY THE THEME AT BANKERS' MEETING

But Vanderlip Warns Against Unwise Speculative Ventures.

PRAISE FOR THE PRESIDENT

Secretary Shaw Pleads for the Merchant Marine—Controller Ridgely Hits at Bank Directors.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Enthusiasm over the great prosperity of the country, tempered by the feeling that it is necessary to be conservative in taking advantage of such fortuitous conditions, marked the meeting of the annual convention of the American Bankers' Association to-day.

Thirty-three hundred representative men met at the New National Theatre and listened to speeches by Frank A. Vanderlip of the National City Bank of New York, Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, and Controller of the Currency Ridgely. Mr. Vanderlip's address, dealing largely with the problem presented by the great increase in the supply of gold, attracted much attention.

Resolutions were adopted praising President Roosevelt for making peace in the Far East. The delegates went to the White House with their families in the afternoon, and the President shook hands with each visitor.

New Banking Laws, Says Swinney.

President E. F. Swinney made the opening address, saying in part:

"We have cause to congratulate ourselves upon the abundant evidence that the past year has been in the main marked by prosperity in all lines of business, and comparatively few bank failures have occurred. All such periods have, however, produced a feeling of overconfidence and lead to the floating of unsound industrial enterprises. The few bank failures of the past year are mostly traceable to excess loans made to such enterprises or their promoters.

"The present statutory provisions of the National Banking act limiting loans to any one individual, firm, or corporation to 10 per cent. of the capital stock of the lending bank seem to be inadequate. I would recommend a change in the banking laws permitting banks to loan one-tenth of their combined capital and surplus to one individual, firm or corporation and provide suitable penalties for any bank violating the law.

"At the same time I would recommend that any funds passed to surplus be reported to the Controller of the Currency and be not thereafter allowed to be in any way impaired under the same penalties and conditions as now prescribed for impairment of capital stock.

"A much more serious abuse lies in the not infrequent acts of managing officers of banks making large discounts to themselves out of the bank's funds. It is an observable fact that in a great number of bank failures there have been found among their assets the worthless notes of high officers of the bank for large loans—frequently without any security at all, or with 'straw' security, which proved to be absolutely worthless.

"This is a most flagrant and reprehensible violation of law, to say nothing of business ethics. It is the essence of personal dishonesty, and I should urge Congress to deal rigorously with these abuses by pronouncing them as felons, with extreme pains and penalties, and we should urge this association and the State Bankers' Association to take this matter before their respective State Legislatures, so as to compel protection where there is wanting official integrity and a proper sense of propriety."

Praise for the President.

Immediately after reports had been read, ex-Representative C. A. Pugsley of Peekskill, N. Y., moved the adoption of this resolution:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association be extended to President Roosevelt for his untiring efforts in the interest of humanity and civilization, which were so abundantly crowned with success in the treaty of peace of Portsmouth, which has restored tranquillity to Russia and Japan, and has made for the greater civilization and betterment of mankind."

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Jennings of Florida, a relative of William J. Bryan, whose words moved the hearty applause of the convention.

"We love peace," he said, "and we love the President. I would not feel satisfied to remain silent and hear words of patriotism that thrill all Americans without rising here to second this resolution, and move for its unanimous adoption."

A rising vote was taken, and the resolution was unanimously adopted.

Shaw on Merchant Marine.

Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury, confined himself to a plea for the upbuilding of the American merchant marine.

"Practically a half century ago," he said, "the present minority party inaugurated, and the present majority party adopted, a policy of liberality to the promoter.

"Not only has the General Government subsidized domestic commerce by direct appropriations from the public treasury in aid of railroads, but it annually subsidizes commerce, both domestic and foreign, by large appropriations for the improvement of rivers and harbors. No difficulty is ever experienced in passing a river and harbor bill if its benefits are sufficiently distributed.

"The Government is now enlarging not only the scope but also the amount of its bounty. It has paid fifty millions for the right to dig a ditch in aid of international commerce, and proposes to pay two hundred millions more, or five hundred millions more, if necessary, in the construction of that international ditch, other millions in its maintenance, and no end of millions, if necessary, in its defense. Then after all this outlay we are under contract to grant its use, for all time, to all the world, on the same terms as to the people of the United States.

"The markets of South America, South Africa, and the adjacent islands are just being developed. The eyes of the world are upon them. The merchant nations of Europe know where they are located, and they are establishing banks and warehouses within them, and they have already established regular and fast lines of steamers to them. The United States has neither banks, nor commission houses, nor warehouses in these ports, nor has it means of communication with them except through old, worn-out, dilapidated ships, sailing under foreign flags and making eight or ten knots an hour.

"We occupy the best position on the map. We have the safest and the most convenient form of money in the world. We speak the language of commerce. Our farms produce more than the farms of any other country. Our mines yield gold literally by the carload, silver by the train load, and there is unloaded on the shores of a single Commonwealth more iron ore than any other country produces. Our forests yield 100,000,000 feet of lumber for every day of the calendar year. Our factories turn out more finished products than all the factories of great Britain and Germany combined by more than three thousand millions every twelve months.

"We transport this matchless product of farm and factory, forest and mine, from the interior to the sea at one-third what similar services cost anywhere else beneath the skies. We carry it from point to point along the coast in better vessels, on quicker time, and at cheaper rates than others.

"But at our coast line we are brought to an abrupt halt. Here we are no longer independent. Our foreign commerce is four times as large as forty years ago, but we carry in our own ships only one-third as many gross tons as forty years ago. We have protected and encouraged every interest but our merchant marine, and every protected interest has flourished.

"We have every facility for international commerce except international merchants, international bankers, and an international merchant marine. Shall we not have these?

"I am not urging ship subsidies. I am speaking of results, not of methods."

Vanderlip on Nation's Prosperity.

Frank A. Vanderlip declared that the bankers could look back on the year with unmixed satisfaction. "It is safe to assert that never before was our population so fully employed," he said. "Never before was the general level of wages so high, never before has the aggregate volume of industry been as great as it is to-day, never was the future of industrial activity so fully assured by advance orders.

"Never was the measure of commercial activity so large, and never before did such bountiful harvests meet such eager markets. The total value of the agricultural crop of the United States will this year exceed by $500,000,000 the average value of that crop during the last ten years. The money value on the farms of this season's crop will reach the staggering total of 3,000,000,000."

He declared that with such prosperity for the farmers, "the whole Mississippi Valley gives promise that at some day, distant perhaps, it will be another New England for investments. There is a developing bond market there that is of constant astonishment to Eastern dealers."

Taking up industrial conditions, he admitted that in the era of industrial combinations at the end of the last century "some industries were swept together under hastily considered plans," and "combinations were made that were properly open to criticism." He believed, however, that events had shown the wisdom of the movement.

"We anticipated economies when these combinations were made, but we are only just beginning to understand something of the full advantage which may result from the National organization of certain industries," he said. "It took a little time to get these organizations running smoothly. It was not easy to find men with the broad economic insight which the management of such great enterprises require.

"Economies are being brought about that were not conceived of when these organizations were formed. The co-ordination of a whole field of industry, the organization and distribution of plants so that the industry is working under the least possible disadvantage in respect to transportation charges, the combination into such aggregates that expenditures may be made to effect small savings, or in introducing mechanical aids which would be impossible in small plants, but which on a large scale effect remarkable economies—all these developments are answering the question as to the wisdom of these combinations.

"I believe we are just started on a new 'commercial invasion.' We have the cheapest raw material, the most efficient labor, a pre-eminent ability in the adoption of mechanical aids, and all that is combined with what I believe to be transcendent genius for economic organization. The combination of these forces will, I conceive, be wellnigh irresistible. The logic of this combination spells for us an unexampled development of foreign trade. All we need is intelligently to foster the possibilities."

Problem of Great Gold Supply.

Largely to the great increase in production of gold he attributed the ability of the world to withstand the strain of the recent war.

"The mines of the world will produce this year $375,000,000 of gold," he continued. "The final figures for the production of gold in 1904 have recently been made and they footed $347,000,000. We may reasonably look forward in the near future to an annual average output of $400,000,000 of new gold for at least a considerable number of years.

"When we remember that the entire monetary stock of gold in the world is about $5,700,000,000 we can calculate that the output from the mines in the next fourteen years promises to equal a total as great as the present monetary stock of gold. These figures are startling. They perhaps suggest the possibility of a disturbance of values.

"What is this to mean to the business situation? What is to be its influence upon prices? What effect will it have upon money rates?

"The classical economists, Ricardo, Adam Smith, and Mill, evolved the quantity theory of money. That theory has been proved to be inadequate. There are many other interfering circumstances and modifying conditions. Nevertheless there is economic truth and force in it.

"It is within the intimate knowledge of all of us that if our bank reserves are increased we are moved to increase our loans. A pressure to increase loans tends to reduce interest rates. Lower interest rates enhance the price of incoming paying securities. I think every one will accept, subject to important modifying conditions, the statement that an increase in the monetary supply has a tendency to advance prices.

"Disregarding for the moment all other influences, we may lay down the principle that an increase in the supply of money will tend to advance the price of real property, but the price of an obligation repayable in money will not tend to advance. That is to say that real estate and all forms of property, including shares of corporate stock, which represent an ownership in real property, would advance, but bonds, which represent only the right to demand a payment in money, would not advance.

"All persons having a fixed income would find the purchasing power of that income reduced. The return from mortgages and bonds would have a reduced purchasing power. Persons receiving fixed salaries and wage earners generally would be at a disadvantage, for their incomes would not tend to increase as rapidly as the purchasing power of their wages decreased.

"Under such a set of circumstances there would be constant pressure from wage earners in order to increase their incomes so as to keep pace with the advanced cost of living. Is not that exactly what we have been seeing and are we not likely to see more of that same pressure to advance wages as the cost of living advances?

Trade to Call for More Money.

"These are tendencies which would become sharply manifest if there were not counteracting influences opposing them. That there are sure to be such counteracting influences goes without saying.

"I recall a conversation which I once had with the great German financier, von Siemens, the creator of the Deutsche Bank. The balances of trade in our favor had been climbing up from $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 and then had gone well beyond $600,000,000, and it looked as if we might drain Europe of her whole monetary stock if that sort of thing was to go on.

"I asked Herr von Siemens what was to be the outcome for Europe. He replied with a well-known German phrase, 'A tree never quite grows to heaven.' Events soon proved that this tree of favorable trade balances could not quite grow to heaven, although for the moment it did look as though it were likely to. And so with this increased production of gold.

"What I do believe is that there is likely to follow just what followed in the two former periods of the world's history when there was an extraordinary production of gold added to the monetary stocks. One of these periods followed the discovery of America, when the treasures of Mexico and Peru were exploited. The other was in the years following the discovery of gold in California and Australia. In each case a mighty impulse was given to the exploitation of virgin fields of development.

"It seems to me not improbable that the next few years will witness the expansion of the field of commercial enterprise into new places. At our own hand is South America on one side and China and Japan on the other.

"If we are to have an influx of gold more than ample to sustain the credit operations for our domestic affairs, that fact will tend to lead our interests into these new fields of exploitation. Then, in turn, a wider use of credit which these new fields will develop and the increased reserves which that wider use of credit will make necessary, will probably absorb the increasing gold stock in beneficent uses, preventing it from ever becoming a serious menace to business organization."

Lurking Danger in Currency.

Returning again to prosperous conditions in the Nation he declared the outlook was bright, but reminded his hearers that "a tree never quite grows to Heaven." Calling attention to lurking dangers he said:

"Among those which we know exist, there comes first to mind our illogical and unscientific currency system. We know that this system may at any time breed us trouble. We know that there is not a European financier of broad intelligence who, looking dispassionately from without at this currency system of ours, does not feel that it has in it dynamic possibilities for trouble even if other conditions are favorable.

"Indeed, it is when all other conditions are most favorable that the danger is the greatest. Now, in the very fullness of the prosperity that we have, there might be a pitfall for us in that quarter. A strain is on our currency system. With our usual good luck we may avoid disaster, but it is the sort of time, nevertheless, when we ought clearly to see that we have a system which might endanger our banking position and retard most seriously our commercial development.

"We know that we are threatened by great social disorders; that the edict of a labor leader might change a cloudless outlook into an uncertain one. We know there is a disregard of law in labor unions and in corporation offices alike which is threatening to our welfare.

"We can, at the moment, clearly see that however prosperous conditions may appear, this prosperity might receive a severe check should a speculative fever begin to rage. Should a stock market speculation start from the present high level of prices in the face of the extraordinary demand for capital and money which crops and business alike are making, the result might easily be temporary disaster.

"Never was there a better time to preach conservatism; never, perhaps, was it easier to be carried away by some of the obvious features of prosperity and to forget some of the dangers which in the end will be quite as potent in shaping the ultimate result. Although there may be many favorable features to the outlook, it is no time for prudence to be cast to the wind; no time for speculative commitments which would yield disaster if temporary reverses came; no time for laxness in any of the forms of business prudence and conservatism."

Ridgely on Bank Failures.

William Barrett Ridgely, Controller of the Currency, spoke on "Bank Examination and Supervision." He said in part:

"After a careful study of the cases which have come under my observation during the last four years, I am firmly convinced that no system of bank examination or supervision from the outside of the bank can absolutely prevent fraudulent bank failures. No outside supervision can supply honesty or brains for the management of a bank, or take the place of either when it is lacking. The best it can do is to discover acts of dishonesty or bad errors of judgment, after they have occurred, and to some extent prevent illegal acts by fear of their discovery and punishment.

"The point I wish to emphasize is that the responsibility for bank management is by law placed upon the Board of Directors. By accepting a place on a bank board and taking the oath of office, a man accepts this responsibility and swears he will diligently and honestly administer the affairs of the association. He is under every moral and legal obligation to perform this duty fully and completely. It is certainly not asking too much of men who accept such trusts that they simply do their plain sworn duty and obey the laws.

"This would seem to be a particularly opportune time for a vigorous self-searching among the Directors of the banks of the country, as well as all other men who are in places of financial trust and responsibility.

"Recent disclosures of the most disgraceful betrayal of trusts by men in the highest positions and the use of these very positions for private gain at the expense of those whom it was their sacred duty to protect, have put the American financier on trial before the country and the world. Not only those who usually are interested in such matters, but all the people of the country are asking: 'If these men are not to be trusted, who is?' 'If this much is true, how much more must there not be?'

"It is only a natural inquiry whether in the contest for wealth and power the American financial conscience has become deadened and the old ideals of honor and truth have given way to a newer code.

"It is a shame, a disgrace, a National misfortune, that such things could have happened when and where they did, but it is a great good fortune that through a quarrel over the spoils, the knavery has been discovered. Unknown, or only suspected, such things are the greatest danger, but their discovery and exposure makes it possible to reform them. The more complete the exposure, the more certain the reform.

"A Director or officer of any bank, no matter how small or obscure, holds the same relation to his trust that these men held to theirs, which differ only in size. The upholding of the reputation and character of the banking institutions of the country is in our care, and depends on each man doing his full duty."

The report of the Treasurer showed receipts and disbursements of $236,125, and a balance on hand of $142,674.

The New York delegation elected E. O. Eloredge of Oswego a member of the Nominating Committee, and Lewis C. Piersen of the New York National Exchange Bank member of the Executive Council. Connecticut elected ex-Gov. Chamberlain to the Nominating Committee. It was agreed that New England should unite upon the election of a member of the Council. Pennsylvania elected John H. Shook of Greencastle to the Nominating Committee, and E. S. Reinhardt of Mahanoy City as State Vice President.

HER SUBPOENA BLOOMED,

But When She Found It in the Flowers She Was Not Pleased.

When Sadie Solomon, 19 years old, was called to the witness stand in the Seventh District Municipal Court yesterday to testify on behalf of her quondam fiancé, who had been sued by her mother for $154, said to have been lent to him, the young woman treated Sigmund Missel to a stare that did not savor of anything but the deadest kind of dead affection.

Miss Solomon appeared to testify for the defendant instead of on behalf of her mother, who lives at 319 East Sixty-ninth Street, through what the lately affianced young woman called a "mean trick."

Elias J. Levy, who appeared for Missel, seemed to have thought that the girl, by explaining how the $154 was spent, could show that the $154 was not a loan, but a gift the mother-in-law-to-be had made. He tried to serve a subpoena several times but in vain. Then the lawyer received an inspiration.

Next day a dapper young man called at the Solomon home with a bunch of flowers for the girl. He remarked that there was a letter inside. Was there any answer? She read, and the answer she returned was not good-humored.

Yesterday she gave answers that did not help Missel's case any, but Missel said on his own behalf that he had been engaged to Miss Solomon in the Summer of 1904, when he was out of a job. The engagement was broken later.

"But," added Missel, "during that time Mrs. Solomon knew I had no money to entertain her daughter and offered me sums from time to time. On one occasion she gave me $20, every cent of which I spent taking Sadie to a theatre—flowers, too—and to supper afterward. That's how it all went. Was it a gift or a loan?"

Judge Seaman took the case under advisement.

SPENCER LIKENS RATE CONTROL TO LYNCH LAW

Southern President Answers for the Railroads.

AN INCENTIVE FOR REBATES

The Esch-Townsend Bill Wouldn't Prevent, but Would Encourage, Them, He Declares.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Oct. 11.—Characterizing as "commercial lynch law" the attempt to establish Government control over railroad properties on the lines of the Esch-Townsend bill, President Samuel Spencer of the Southern Railway delivered tonight the reply of the railroads to the agitation for rate legislation. Addressing the Newark Board of Trade, Mr. Spencer said:

"Up to the present time shipper and carrier have been free to work together without political interference, to facilitate the establishment and development of new industries, to reach out for new markets for our farmers and manufacturers, to create new communities and maintain the prosperity of those already established, and to co-operate to the fullest possible extent to enlarge the volume of both our domestic and foreign trade.

"It is now proposed to change this system, and substitute for it one in which artificial bureaucratic methods will take the place of the natural laws of trade and commerce, which have been the controlling force in the evolution of the present system."

President Spencer referred to President Roosevelt's declaration against rebates, and said that no one desired more than the railroad managers that there should be an end to all such practices. He continued:

"No rational suggestions have been made, however, as to how the granting of rate-making power to the Inter-State Commerce Commission could be effective to this end. A rebate or any secret discriminatory device can of course be applied to a Government-made rate as well as to one made by the carrier.

"In fact, a rate established by the commission and thereafter unalterable by the carrier in reduction or otherwise, except upon petition to the commission instead of serving as a cure or a preventive, would be a distinct incentive toward secret reduction when commercial conditions demanded, and a public and legal reduction could not be promptly made.

"One of the most serious objections to the legislation proposed is that under it a rate once fixed by the commission would continue in force indefinitely, unless changed by the commission or by court. The carrier would thereafter have no power to make either reductions or increases to meet new conditions. Under such a law all rates would in time become commission rates."

Mr. Spencer said that such a system of rate control would eliminate railway managers as an agency in the development of the country. As to the plan to confer upon the Inter-State Commerce Commission power to revise rates and make them effective prior to review by courts, he said that this was opposed "to the fundamental principle of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence that rights of property and persons shall be enforced and protected according to due process of law." He continued:

"Virtually there is not a single respect in which the Inter-State Commerce Commission resembles a court. The commission which investigates offenses and initiates prosecutions may and does in addition sit in judgment upon some cases which have been the subject of the investigation and prosecution. In other words, the plaintiff in the litigation is the Judge that tries the case. All such features are utterly foreign to courts, and they are utterly incompatible with an impartial attitude.

"It may be said, however, that it is proposed that the rates made or revised by the commission shall be subject thereafter to the action of the court. According to the plan proposed, the rates made by the commission become effective pending review by the courts. In other words, this argument, while involving an admission that the railroads are entitled to a judicial trial, makes the remarkable demand that they shall be convicted before their trial can begin, and stand convicted, and suffer the penalties of the conviction during the trial.

"To place in the hands of one tribunal which is or may be prosecutor, jury, and judge, and at the same time executioner, is equivalent to providing by statute for the enforcement of commercial lynch law."

President S. S. Robertson of the Board of Trade entertained Mr. Spencer, Vice President Colwell, and General Counsel Jenney of the Lackawanna; George Dixon of the Pennsylvania, and Vice President Bessler, and Messrs. Huntington and Cooms of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at dinner.

The board will hear both sides of the railway rate regulation question, and recently wrote to President Roosevelt, informing him of Mr. Spencer's engagement. In reply, Mr. Roosevelt wrote, suggesting that ex-Senator Cockrell or Commissioner Garfield be invited to put before the board the other side of the question.

SIR ERNEST COCHRANE ON INTERNATIONAL SPORT

Explains Story of Offer to Build America's Cup Challenger.

FOOTBALL IS HIS ONLY HOBBY

If He Can Introduce Anglo-American Games In It He Will Be Content.

Sir Ernest Cecil Cochrane, Englishman, Baronet, soldier, and sportsman, one of the leaders of the British sporting world in fact, has just paid a flying visit to this city and left to return next week in connection with the coming match of the English association football players, the Pilgrims, to be played here on Saturday of next week. He is in this country in the interest of the association game, having followed the team over from England less than two weeks ago and intending to return with them at the latter end of this month. To inaugurate Anglo-American matches is the aim of the visiting team, and to that end Sir Ernest has already offered a cup for international challenge play.

A well built, stocky figure of medium height, rugged with glow of good healthy, outdoor living; energetic, active, and enthusiastic beyond the usual among Englishmen, Sir Ernest Cochrane is himself a tribute to value of "association" as a developer of physical manhood. With a ruddy, smooth shaven, pleasant face that suggests the hand of good fellowship even before it is extended, he is quite as strikingly a testimonial to its social value. If the game is half so good as Sir Ernest's promise for it it will be taken up throughout America with the same enthusiasm that it awakens in England and the object of the visiting Baronet will be speedily attained.

Seated in the Holland House yesterday morning before his departure for Philadelphia, Sir Ernest spoke of his interest in the game, explaining his purposes, and talked entertainingly of the whole scope of international athletics. His talk was called for by an inquiry as to his reputed intention of challenging for America's Cup.

"That story arose through a misunderstanding. The America's Cup was mentioned at a dinner given to Sir Charles Kirkpatrick on the arrival of the Pilgrims in America. Sir Charles had said that I proposed to offer an international cup for football. When he spoke in answer to a toast later he said that I should have more to say about "the cup" on my arrival here. This was misinterpreted to refer to America's Cup, and the story spread that I would challenge for that trophy.

"It was also said that you contemplated offering a yachting cup to be contested for by American boats in English waters."

"I have never had such a thought. There are others, whose yachting knowledge and interests fit them to make such proffers, such as Sir Thomas and the Hon. R. P. Houston, the honor of whose acquaintance I do not have. I shall stick to the cause in which my heart is enlisted, "association," which I believe offers more interesting possibilities. If I serve that end I shall be content."

"International competition between America and England broadens our sporting interests and infuses in them a new incentive that tends to their betterment. I know no game or pastime that affords possibilities along this line equal to "association." Your National game, baseball, is a fine sport, but not suitable to English tastes. Cricket, our national sport, has never taken hold of the active American mind. Association football appears ideally the sport in which the energies of the two nations could be best exerted. I am satisfied to give an exposition of the beauties of our game here, believing its intrinsic merit will commend it at once and that international games will naturally follow. The enthusiasm with which it has been received in the cities in which we have played I think justifies this belief.

"Our game of football is different from yours, and I believe a better game. With the merits of the two sports, however, I have no concern. There is plenty of room for both in your country, and there is not the slightest reason why one should antagonize the other. Whatever place we take with our game in your interest and affections, if you add to ours by meeing us in international matches we will be satisfied.

"Association is all science. Its lively motion should at once commend it to you. No sport is so fast save polo. When known in America I believe there will be no stemming the tide of popular acclaim that will greet it. Once established here I believe international games in it will supersede interest all forms of sporting contests between us even to America's Cup races."

NOT ECONOMY, BUT AIR.

That Is Sheriff's Reason for Conveying Prisoners by Trolley.

Criticised because his deputies took prisoners to the Far Rockaway Police Court by trolley instead of in cars of the Long Island Railroad Company Sheriff Joseph Meyerrose of Queens County replies that he believes that men who have been in jail are greatly benefited by fresh air before their arraignment in court. Critics of the Sheriff assert that because he is economical business is delayed for from one to two hours daily in the Far Rockaway court.

The fare over the Long Island Railroad for each prisoner taken from the Long Island City Jail would be 50 cents, while by trolley the fare is 15 cents. The Sheriff says he will continue to take his prisoners to court by trolley, no matter what people say.

PERVERSE RAN CLOSE TO WORLD'S RECORD TIME

Won in the Fastest Race Ever Credited to a Two-Year-Old.

SEVEN FURLONGS IN 1:23 3-5

Whitney Filly's Success in Champagne Stakes at Belmont Park Put Her Among Season's Stars.

Perverse, a winner for the third time in the course of the Belmont Park Autumn meeting yesterday, when she captured the big event of the afternoon programme, the Champagne Stakes, startled horsemen and racegoers to the point of renewed doubt when the time of her race was displayed, 1:23 3-5, for seven furlongs, or within one-tenth of a second of the world's record for the distance on a straight course, the 1:23½ of Bella B. at Monmouth Park, which has stood for fifteen years. The marvel was the greater, as Bella B., herself a very fast mare, was a five-year-old and carried only 103 pounds, in midsummer on a lightning-fast track, while Perverse, a two-year-old, had up 119 pounds, and ran on a course dampened and somewhat deadened by rain.

A peculiarity of the race was that the Champagne Stakes was run down the long straightaway course, originally meant for seven furlongs, but shortened by the moving back of the judges' stand a hundred feet or so, to bring the finishing line before the grand stand, the officials thus being compelled to put up a temporary winning post at the old finishing point in order to get the full seven furlongs for the stake. The judges were stationed at the temporary stand, but it was insinuated by some of the horsemen who doubted the time of Perverse's race that Timer W. H. Barretto caught the time for the race at the regular finish instead of waiting until the horses had gone on to the finish fixed for the Champagne Stakes. This Mr. Barretto denied positively, and in view of the fact that all the races run at Belmont Park this Fall have been singularly fast, and that records have been beaten or equaled nearly every day of the meeting, there seems no reason to doubt the correctness of the time or to discredit the performance of Perverse.

Perverse was named on the programme with the great colt Burgomaster, as the Whitney entry, but the stable withdrew Burgomaster early in the afternoon, and later added the moderate performer Battleaxe as running mate for Perverse, while Penrhyn also was added, making a field of six running, all with stake weight up except Oaklawn, who had an allowance of five pounds. In the betting the Whitney entry and Whimsical and Security were nearly equally supported at the opening, but Whimsical was backed down to the place of a 6 to 5 favorite at the post, while the Whitney entry went back to 13 to 5 and Security to 4 to 1.

Security, winner of the $20,000 Great Trial Stakes in the Spring, was led to the post in advance of his field, twisting and whirling and fighting his groom and the jockey on his back in a style that sent the price against him up to longer figures. When the other horses followed him to the post, a brisk rain kept the crowd well in the shelter of the stands. The Whitney horses were in the outside positions at the post, and when the barrier lifted to send the Champagne field away, Perverse, holding to her outside place, at once outran her stable mate, and, keeping to the outside all the way, finished near the fence inclosing the stands, winning ridden out by a length after having been in the lead all the distance, while Whimsical overhauled Security on the inner rail about the last furlong pole, and in a whipping fight, got second place, with Security third and Battleaxe fourth.

Perverse, a full sister to Stalwart, one of the sensational three-year-olds of last year, is Whitney bred, by Meddler-Melba, and did not race in the Spring. She started in the filly part of the Matron Stakes on the opening day of the Belmont Park Fall meeting as a maiden, and won easily. On her next start she won the Nursery Handicap, and yesterday made her record three straight wins in the Champagne. The suddenness of the filly's ascent to fame reminded racegoers of the achievements of the Whitney stable with fillies last season, and once more the speculation as to how many more like Perverse Trainer J. W. Rogers may have in his barn was begun. Summary:

$100,000 RACE HORSE DEAD.

Yankee Consul, Star Two-Year-Old, Succumbs to Pneumonia.

The death of the successful two-year-old race horse Yankee Consul, valued by his owner, Paul Rainey, at $100,000, was announced to W. H. May, father of the colt's trainer, at the Belmont Park race course yesterday in a telegram from Lexington, Ky., to which place Yankee Consul had been shipped from New York City a week previously.

Yankee Consul, a bay colt by Sempronius-Lady Ioez, was regarded by horsemen as one of the greatest of the two-year-olds that raced this season, and a number of turfmen considered him the best, placing him above even H. P. Whitney's Burgomaster. The question of merit between Yankee Consul and the others of the star two-year-olds was not decided in races, as Yankee Consul was not engaged in the most valuable stakes, and so did not meet the cracks, though he won the last five races that he ran in in the East.

The colt was one of the stars of the Memphis Spring meeting, where in March he raced and won in the name of C. R. Ellison, and then was sold for $20,000 to Mr. Rainey, who raced in the name of the Tippah Farm Stable, with J. W. (Bub) May as trainer and supposedly part owner of the colt. Yankee Consul was brought to New York in June, and won his first race at the Gravesend track, after which he took a place among the noted horses of the season. His winnings in the course of the season amounted to about $25,000, but he was a horse of such speed and promise that when Mr. Rainey was asked to put a price on him he said that he would not sell the colt for less than $100,000.

The colt was shipped by Trainer May to Lexington a week ago, to go into Winter quarters on the May training farm, and contracted pneumonia on the cars in transit. He was sick when he landed at Lexington, and died yesterday.

J. W. May is the trainer who first came into fame as being the man who developed Highball, and was a part owner of that colt, also valued at $100,000, when Highball broke his leg in a race at Brighton Beach last Summer and was destroyed. As in the case of Highball, which was insured for $50,000, Yankee Consul was well insured, but W. H. May did not know yesterday for what amount.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

The Stewards, representing the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, at Belmont Park yesterday concluded the inquiry into the riding of Steeplechase Jockey Finnegan on the horse Ruth's Rattler on Tuesday, when that horse was beaten by Gansevoort, and found that Finnegan's statement that he was not in physical condition to ride a more vigorous finish than he did was true, as he recently was lamed and since then has been unable to take regular exercise. The Stewards reprimanded the rider for accepting mounts when so disabled, and warned him not to try to ride again until he was in proper form.

James Galway yesterday sold on private terms the chestnut gelding Brigand, five years old, to W. L. Oliver.

The two-year-old Cat's Eye, owned by T. E. Mannix, ran away with the light boy Johnson while going to the post for the fifth race at Belmont Park yesterday, and went the full mile and a half circuit of the track before she was pulled up. She joined her horses at the post then and started and ran in the race.

Burgomaster, the best two-year-old of the Harry Payne Whitney stable, is ailing with cold, and was coughing yesterday in such a manner that he was withdrawn from the race for the Champagne Stakes. This was Burgomaster's last engagement of the season, so that it is certain he now will be retired for the Winter.

The yearling colt by Ben Strome-Roseleaf, full brother to the great sprinter Roseben, is reported to be hopelessly broken down in the stable of State Senator P. H. McCarren, who paid $11,000 for him.

COHN WON FIVE-MILE RUN.

Irish-American Runner Captured Feature Event at Physical Culture Show.

The athletic events at the Madison Square Garden Physical Culture Exhibition attracted another big crowd last night, despite the storm. The programme included sprints and long-distance races, in which Sir Charles Kirkpatrick officiated as referee. The five-mile run was the feature. Eight competitors faced the starter, five of whom dropped out before half the distance had been covered. Harvey Cohn and E. P. Carr lapped W. J. Frank, the ex-bicycle rider, at the fourth mile, and the pair kept within three feet of each other up to the last lap, when Cohn sprinted end, passing Carr, won by five yards in 26:02 3-5.

John Hines, the bantam-weight wrestling champion of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, won the final bout in the 115-pound class from A. J. Devlin of the Mohawk Athletic Club. Miss Anna Trenary of Chicago has a clear lead in the competition for contour and physical work. Miss Trixie Sinclair of California is a close second. Summaries:

COLUMBIA IS CRIPPLED BY FOOTBALL VERDICTS

Capt. Thorp Dropped and Carter and Starbuck Cannot Play.

OTHER PLAYERS UNDER BAN

Unprecedented Action Casts Gloom Over Team's Prospects—Big College Mid-Week Games.

Columbia's Faculty pursued the most drastic measures yesterday in dropping Capt. "Tom" Thorp from college and issuing the decree that Starbuck and Carter must not play upon the football eleven. It cast the gloom of despair over the hope that the Morningside team had of "doing something" this season. Coach Morley was downcast by the news when it was brought to him, and the undergraduates felt like putting on crepe. It is the worst blow that Columbia football has received—much worse than the general overturning of football affairs several years ago.

In a measure Thorp, at tackle, had been the backbone of the team for two seasons. But he had allowed his studies to go neglected, and his inability to make up brought about the action of the Faculty. The same is practically true of Carter and Starbuck, both backs, and the latter the only reliable punter that Columbia possesses. While these men are not dropped, they cannot play on the team, which makes the action of the Columbia Faculty the most remarkable procedure that has ever been witnessed in a college in the East.

The feeling prevails among the Columbia football following, both graduate and student, that the recent action of President Roosevelt in taking a stand for radical reforms in football has led the Faculty to deal more sternly with the three players than would otherwise have been the case. Carter, who entered with the class of 1906, has been dropped to 1908, and Starbuck has been put back a class to 1908.

It has been known for some time that there was trouble between the Faculty and some of the football players, but it was not thought that the men would be treated as harshly as it appears they have been. The Faculty sustains its action by saying that the men in question have not really tried to make themselves eligible. They intimate that the men thought that because they were prominent members of the football team they would be exempt in a measure from the strict enforcement of the law.

The measures adopted are undoubtedly more severe than Dean Hutton was in the habit of serving out, and it seems that the students should have been more fully warned when Acting Dean Sever decided to be more strict this year. Dean Sever is, however, out after the men who indulge in athletics to the detriment of their scholastic standing.

That he is not finished with the matter is the statement of a member of the Faculty close to Dean Sever. He said last night that he understood that eight other men, including the manager of the team, Gerald Curtis, were liable to be declared ineligible. Dean Sever would neither confirm nor deny the report when seen relative to the matter. If he does carry his war to the point where these men are declared ineligible, the Blue and White might just as well disband its football eleven, for the situation with Thorp, Carter, and Starbuck out of the game is bad enough, but with seven other men ineligible there would be hardly be enough for any sort of a team.

The first intimation that the football authorities had of the action of the Faculty came yesterday morning when the three men in question received letters from Dean Sever announcing his decision. Neither Coach Morley nor Capt. Thorp would say a word, although it was understood from some of Thorp's friends that he would apply to the university for reinstatement. If he is reinstated Thorp will have the opportunity to withdraw of his own volition.

When he first entered the university Thorp stood high in his studies. The taking on of too much athletic work last year was the cause of his deficiency. With Carter the situation is decidedly different. It is claimed that Dean Sever told him that if he passed a certain examination he would be eligible for football. According to report he passed that off yesterday morning so that his disqualification came as a big surprise. The letter implies that he is debarred from participating in athletics for an indefinite period, while in the case of Starbuck the time is stated as for the present academic year.

While this wholesale slaughter of Columbia's football hopes was the feature of the day in the sport the mid-week games of several of the big colleges contributed their quota toward forshadowing the outcome of the season. Princeton met a tartar in Lehigh, and the latter at times outplayed the Tigers and crossed their goal line. Yale, Harvard, and Pennsylvania all won. Bates scored one touch-down and goal upon the wearers of the Crimson, but it was in no sense due to actually better play. The scores follow:

YALE, 29; SPRINGFIELD T. S., 0.
PRINCETON, 29; LEHIGH, 6.
HARVARD, 34; BATES, 6.
PENNSYLVANIA, 38; FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL, 0.

YALE, 29; SPRINGFIELD T. S., 0.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 11.—Yale won from the Springfield Training School to-day by a score of 29 to 0. The game shows little for Yale, as the visitors were inexperienced, having but one man left of the team that held Yale to 6 to 0 last year. Yale played a fast game, and gave Springfield their distance but once. The first half ended in three touch-downs, the second half seeing the visitors playing much better and holding the substitutes Yale put in. The features were an attempt at goal by Jones, long runs by Jones and Bigelow, and the all-around playing of Forbes. The line-up:

Yale, 29.	Position.	S. T. S., 0.
Erwin, Gillis	Left guard	Holmes
Flanders, Smith	Centre	Wright

HARVARD, 34; BATES, 6.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 11.—Although Harvard defeated Bates on Soldiers' Field this afternoon without difficulty, the visitors crossed the Crimson goal line for the first time this season, the final score being 34 to 6. Bates's touch-down was made by Capt. Kendall, who received the ball on a double pass, and sprinted seventy yards, during which he threw off both Starr and Wendell, and just crawled over the line as Nesmith tackled him. The line-up:

Harvard, 34.	Position.	Bates, 6.

BOSTON GOLF WOMEN LEAD.

Miss Oliver Creates Championship Surprise by Beating Miss Adams.

Wet weather, close competitions, and the usual number of surprises that every big golf tournament brings characterized the play yesterday on the Morris County Golf Club's links near Morristown, N. J., in the second round of the women's National championship. Only eight survivors are now left for the championship title, and of these Boston claims one-half. New York has two, Miss Georgianna Bishop, the present champion, and Mrs. Charles S. Stout, who held the National title in 1901 and 1902. All of the Philadelphians were retired with the exception of the veteran Mrs. Caleb F. Fox, who was runner-up in 1899 and has been a prominent competitor in nearly all subsequent tournaments. Unfortunately she was drawn against one of her clubmates, Mrs. S. C. Price of the Huntington Valley Club, and after a hard match the latter was beaten by one hole.

Miss Marion Oliver still remains in the ranks, representing the Chevy Chase Club of the District of Columbia. The golfing daughter of the Assistant Secretary of War furnished one of the big surprises of the day. She beat Miss Mollie B. Adams, who made the best showing of the American team in the British women's championship last Spring. It required twenty holes to determine the winner. The remarkable fact about the match was that Miss Oliver was two up on the turn and then increased her lead until she was dormie 5. To the consternation of her friends she lost hole after hole, and when Miss Adams, by taking five in succession, tied the match on the home green the Boston delegates were wild with joy. The nineteenth was halved, but on the twentieth Miss Adams made a poor drive and then missed her second shot, so she lost the hole and the match by 4 strokes to 7. The cards:

Miss Oliver.
Out ....5 3 4 6 5 7 5 6 5—46
Miss Adams.
Out ....5 4 4 6 6 5 5 6 7—43

Miss Adams.
In ....5 6 5 5 7 5 4 4 4—45—93
Extra holes—Miss Oliver 5, 4; Miss Adams 5, 7.

But, although the Bostonians lost one of their best players, they are expecting great things from their four survivors. These are Miss Margaret Curtis, Miss Harriet Curtis, Miss Grace Keyes, and Miss Pauline Mackay. Mrs. M. D. Paterson of the Englewood Club gave Miss Margaret Curtis a hard game, and the latter just managed to win by a hole. Miss Eunice Terry of the Ardsley Club forced Miss Keyes to play nineteeen holes before the latter could claim the victory. Miss Mackay beat Miss North and Miss Harriet Curtis beat Miss Ayres, both of the losers being from the Philadelphia Association. Miss Bishop met Mrs. E. F. Sanford of Orange, the runner-up last year. The champion played a strong game and won by 5 up and 3 to play. Mrs. Stout defeated the Baltusrol girl, Miss Julia Mix, by 4 up and 2 to play. The results of the second match play round are:

Championship, Second Round.—Miss Grace Keyes, Concord, beat Miss Eunice Terry, Ardsley, 1 up, (19 holes;) Miss Marion Oliver, Chevy Chase, beat Miss Mollie B. Adams, Wollaston, 1 up, (20 holes;) Mrs. Charles T. Stout, Apawamis, beat Miss Julia Mix, Baltusrol, 4 up and 2 to play; Miss Margaret Curtis, Essex County, Mass., beat Mrs. M. D. Paterson, Englewood, 1 up; Miss Georgianna Bishop, Brookhaven, beat Mrs. E. F. Sanford, Essex County, N. J., 5 up and 3 to play; Miss Harriet Curtis, Essex County, Mass., beat Miss Florence Ayres, Riverton, Penn., 6 up and 5 to play; Mrs. C. F. Fox, Huntington Valley, beat Mrs. S. C. Price, Huntington Valley, 1 up; Miss Pauline Mackay, Oakley, beat Miss Katharine North, Merion Cricket, 5 up and 4 to play.

PRINCETON, 29; LEHIGH, 6.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 11.—Princeton's unblemished record was marred to-day, when Lehigh scored a touch-down and held the Tigers to a score of 29 to 6. During the greater part of the first half and in the early part of the second the Pennsylvania aggregation proved the hardest proposition that Princeton has yet tackled and at periods during the game literally outplayed the Tigers. The line-up:

Princeton, 29.	Position.	Lehigh, 6.
Cooney	Left tackle	Johnson
J. Waller	Left guard	Strauss
Carothers	Centre	Dunn
Rafferty	Right guard	Bachman
Harring	Right tackle	Olcott
Fryer, Tooker	Right end	Gott
Dillon, Tenney	Quarter back	Pine, Spiers
Bard	Left half back	Romwell, Lawyer
Daub	Right half back	Broombaw, Stocker
McCormick, Otis	Full back	Sheridan

Touch-downs—Dillon, Bard, Spiers, Daub, Tenney, O'Brien. Goals from touch-downs—Cooney, (4,) Herman. Umpire—Dave Fultz. Referee—Mr. Murphy. Time of halves—Twenty minutes.

PENNSYLVANIA, 38; F. AND M., 0.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—The University of Pennsylvania football team defeated Franklin and Marshall College on Franklin Field to-day by the score of 88 to 0, played in a downpour of rain on a field which, dotted with puddles, offered treacherous footing. Pennsylvania won because she outclassed her rivals in weight and concentrated force. The momentum of plays aimed at the Franklin and Marshall guards and tackles could not be checked on the slippery field, and frequently after a man had been tackled and brought down he slid several yards. The line-up follows:

Pennsylvania, 38.	Position.	F. and M., 0.
Gaston	Left end	La Quier
Draper, Bradbury	Left tackle	Helman
Robinson	Left guard	Hartman
Torrey, Bankert	Centre	Newgarde
Junk	Right guard	Snyder, Boyer
Rooke	Right tackle	Sipple
Scarlett	Right end	Coldran
Stevenson, Johnson	Quarter back	Danaber
Sheble, Longwell	Left half back	Reisser
Bennis, Greene, Corson	Right half back	Lentz
Folwell, Gimbel	Full back	Hellman

Touch-downs—Folwell, Robinson, Bennis, Rooke, (3,) Longwell. Goals from touch-downs—Torrey, 2; Bankert, 1. Referee—William N. Morice. Umpire—Jack Hedges. Linesman—A. L. Smith. Time—Twenty and fifteen minute halves.

GALLAGHER HOLDS LEAD.

Despite Chilled Ivories, He Outplays McLaughlin in Balk-Line Match.

Because of the change in the weather last night the ivory billiard balls rolled hard for both Thomas Gallagher and Edward McLaughlin in the continuation of their balk-line match at Maurice Daly's Academy. Gallagher continued to lead McLaughlin, however, and while he was never able to make any runs that topped fifty his execution with the cue was interesting. When Gallagher had counted his allotted string of 300 points for the night McLaughlin was left at 216, and only a grand total of 731 points against Gallagher's 900 for the three nights.

Taking the balls from the position in which they lay when play had stopped on the previous night Gallagher opened with a run of 37 carroms, but the majority of the shots were at round-the-table angles, the balls showing little disposition to lay close for nursing. Three innings later Gallagher again got the balls to rolling well for him and made a run of 35 before he missed on a difficult draw shot. McLaughlin experienced more difficulty than did Gallagher, his best run only netting him 34 buttons. The score:

Gallagher—37 1 7 35 3 1 0 1 7 29 28 5 0 1 27 1 3 12 27 17 14 0 25 0 16 3. Total, 300 points; average, 11 7-13; high runs, 37, 35, and 29. Grand total, 900 points.

McLaughlin—20 1 15 0 34 19 0 1 10 6 0 3 16 4 2 20 23 4 0 8 0 20 3 0 7. Total, 216 points; average, 8 16-25; high runs, 34, 23, and 20. Grand total, 731 points.

TWO FOXES RUN TO EARTH.

Mrs. Hitchcock and Miss Randolph Secured the Brushes.

Special to The New York Times.

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y., Oct. 11.—Women predominated at the Meadow Brook fox hunt this morning. Two foxes made good sport, both of them being run to earth after giving the hounds a hard run. The meet was at Piping Rock, and the country hunted lay between Locust Valley and Oyster Bay.

Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., riding astride, was first in at the first death, and Miss Adelaide Randolph won the brush of the second fox. The hunt party included Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Mr. and Mrs. Wetmore, Miss Bennett, Miss Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock, Paul Rainey, Morgan Grace, Beverly Robinson, Mrs. Joseph Stevens, Mrs. Reginald Brooks, Miss Emory, W. C. Hayes, Miss Bryce, and P. F. Collier, the M. F. H.

BASEBALL CONTEST OFF; THE CROWD TOO SMALL

$2,000 Gate Receipts Not Enough for the Giants and Athletics.

EXCUSE OFFERED WAS RAIN

And the Philadelphia Crowd Accepted It—Game To-day There—Friday's and Saturday's Here.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—Ostensibly because the grounds were wet, but in reality because the gate receipts did not look large enough to the contending baseball players, the third contest of the world's championship series between the Giants and the Athletics, which was to have been decided in Philadelphia to-day, was postponed until to-morrow. Friday's and Saturday's games will be in New York.

There was a suspicion of a drizzle just before the time for the game, and that gave an excuse for deferring play. But the main factor in the proceeding was an ominous sky, which kept the crowd from the grounds and augured so ill for a good baseball day that only about 4,000 of the faithful passed through the gates. When 3 o'clock came Manager McGraw of the New Yorks and Capt. Lave Cross of the Athletics put their heads together and talked the situation over very earnestly. They figured that on an average of 75 cents a head the attendance would net the two teams about $2,000. The total looked small. McGraw and Cross came from the conference room under the grand stand and looked at the threatening sky; then at the thin and more or less blue line of rooters filing through the gates. They decided that it was too wet; that it was surely going to rain some more, and that anyhow $2,000 was not enough money to play for. With good weather to-morrow they count on an attendance of not less than 17,000.

Umpires Sheridan and O'Day, who had been prompted, took their cue and walked upon the diamond on a tour of investigation. They smiled knowingly as they dawdled about upon the well-conditioned ground near first base. Then they made a great demonstration of holding an important conference. The crowd wanted the game to begin.

"Play ball!" it yelled. "Don't give us any bluff about wet grounds!"

Sheridan and O'Day continued to shake their heads wisely, and at last Sheridan walked to the front of the grand stand and in a brief and characteristic speech announced the decision:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: As this series is a very important one, and as the grounds is wet, we have decided to call the game."

The crowd bolted for the gates, yelling with dissatisfaction. On second consideration, however, everybody accepted the situation good-naturedly. All wanted the two teams to make every cent possible out of the series. Rain checks were given for to-morrow's game, which will be played on the Philadelphia grounds.

As was the case on Monday, about 500 of New York's most faithful supporters came over to witness the game. The 500 were headed as before by Louis Mann, who carried a commission of $2,000 to wager at the odds of 10 to 9 in favor of New York on the series and even money on the result of the day's play. He found no takers.

Bender of yesterday's Quaker contest was the first man to appear upon the field before the comparatively small gathering of fans. The Indian pitcher got a rousing reception from his townsmen. One man in the right field bleachers held a transparency bearing the inscription:

"New York, Oct. 10. Indian twists offered freely here to-day. Market dull and no demand."

Another sign which was flaunted about read:

"Cigar store signs look pretty good to us to-day."

Bender was cheered as he began practice, as were other members of the local team when they appeared. The New York team arrived on the grounds about 3:15 and, full of ginger, bounded into the lot. As they reached the field a fine drizzle began to fall. The Giants and Athletics ran for cover, but had barely reached dry ground when the rain ceased. They started to practice again and were a second time driven under the roof by an almost imperceptible rainfall. Players on both teams did everything they could to magnify the importance of the rain. A typical pantomime was that of Strang, who jumped from under the stand, and, looking to the sky, stretched forth his arms and beckoned to the moisture to let itself fall. The crowd showed that it wanted baseball.

"Don't kick," cried Strang, "we need the money." Then everybody laughed.

It had been McGraw's intention to have Taylor pitch, and Mack had Coakley slated for the boxwork of the Athletics. This programme will probably hold for to-morrow, although it is possible that McGraw will offer Mathewson, as he will have had a rest of two days. The programme to-night, however, is to pitch Mathewson in New York on Saturday, when a record-breaking crowd is expected to see the game.

A close analysis of the work of the two teams seems to show the Giants to a slight advantage. Both teams have been unable to do much with their bats, and on fielding there has been little choice. The New York team, however, has plainly excelled in base running, a vastly important feature of closely contested games such as the two nines are playing. McGraw offered to-night to bet 10 to 9 that the Giants will win the series.

POST-SEASON BASEBALL.

National League Clubs Beat Americans Two Out of Three Games.

National League teams carried off the honors yesterday in the post-season series with American League clubs. There were three games played, of which the Nationals won two. At Boston, Harris, a new pitcher of the Americans, kept the batsmen guessing, but Wilhelm's poor support and Unglaub's home run enabled the Americans to win by 5 to 1. At Chicago Comiskey's team was beaten by one run, while the St. Louis Nationals had an easy victory over their rivals, the score being 9 to 1. The scores:

Picked Up on the Diamond.

According to the conditions arranged by the National Commission the players of the two teams directly interested in the world's championship series are to be first considered. They will receive 60 per cent. of the receipts of the first four games, 75 per cent. to go to the winner and 25 per cent. to the loser. The National Commission is to receive 10 per cent., and the balance is to go to the owners of the two clubs, divided upon the same basis as the visiting and home clubs receive during the championship season.

Anderson.—There were four so-called no-hit games participated in by the National and American League teams during the season just ended, as follows: Mathewson, (New York Nationals,) at Chicago June 13; Dineen, (Boston Americans,) at Boston with Chicago, first game, Sept. 27; Henley, (Philadelphia Athletics,) at St. Louis, first game, July 22; Smith, (Chicago Americans,) at Detroit, second game, Sept. 6.

Mathewson leads the pitchers of the National League with 30 victories and 9 defeats, with Leever of the Pittsburgs second, 20 victories and 6 defeats. In the American League Tannehill of Boston and Coakley of Philadelphia each has 20 victories and 8 defeats. Other pitchers who are eligible to participate in the world's series have this record: Ames, New York, 22 victories and 9 defeats; Taylor, New York, 16 and 9; McGinnity, New York, 22 and 14; Wiltse, New York, 15 and 6; Plank, Philadelphia, 27 and 12; Waddell, Philadelphia, 24 and 11; Bender, 18 and 10, and Henley, 5 and 12.

Hughes, pitcher of the Washington Club, performed a notable feat during the last American League season, when he pitched two games in one series against the Clevelands and in each held his opponents down to two hits.

MILITARY RACE ENTRIES.

Fort Ethan Allen First Regular Army Post to Contest.

The first entry from officers of the United States Army to the Military Steeplechase, to be run on the second day of the United Hunts Association's cross-country meeting at Morris Park, was received yesterday from the Fifteenth Cavalry, United States Army, stationed at Fort Ethan Allen. The approval that the race has received from the War Department and from Gens. Frederick D. Grant and Charles F. Roe has aroused the interest of officers at other posts, however, and other entries from the regular army are promised, while nominations from Squadron A, New York; Squadron C, Brooklyn; Philadelphia's City Troop, and Troop A, Baltimore, already have been received.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the association at 136 East Thirty-fourth Street yesterday it was announced that the course and stabling at Morris Park are now ready for horses that are to run at the meeting on Oct. 21, 25, and 28, and that the Superintendent, P. H. Follette, already had received many applications for stable room.

The Secretary reported the receipt of applications for clubhouse badges for the meeting, also for boxes. The price for clubhouse badges is $10 for one day and $20 for the meeting, and applications for them must be made through a member of the association.

THE CANDIDACY OF MR. HEARST.

Any one who tries to understand the meaning of the nomination of Mr. HEARST will find it helpful to consider candidly both sides of the proposed transaction. On the one side there is the City of New York. On the other side there is Mr. WILLIAM R. HEARST, who has accepted the nomination for Mayor tendered him by his Municipal Ownership League. New York is a city of rather more than 4,000,000 inhabitants. It has an assessed valuation in round numbers of $6,000,000,000—six thousand millions. Its annual budget is $100,000,000. It has well on toward 700,000 legal voters. Every dollar of its six billions of property has an owner. It is of universal human experience that the owners of property are gratified to see it increase in value; to the extent of their ability and knowledge they avoid those things that would diminish its value. The great majority of the people of the city have taken enough interest in public questions to inform themselves as well as they can concerning the policies and measures affecting them personally, or affecting the welfare of the community. The office of Mayor of such a city is evidently one of great trust and responsibility. It is an office that for its wise administration demands ability, probity, sound judgment, steadiness, and familiarity with large affairs.

Mr. WILLIAM R. HEARST was born in the State of California. His father, Senator HEARST, made a great many millions of dollars in mining and business ventures. Young Mr. HEARST was educated at Harvard College. One of the assets of his father's estate was a newspaper in San Francisco, of which he assumed the management soon after leaving college. He continued this newspaper, The Examiner, upon lines which have since come to be familiarly known as "yellow"—extremely yellow. Mr. HEARST then acquired a newspaper in this city. He made a newspaper of such a character that it was excluded from respectable reading rooms, libraries, and clubs. He has continued to develop and apply his ideas of journalism in this and other cities, until his newspapers are everywhere accepted as the extreme type of their peculiar class. Mr. HEARST has been twice elected to Congress, but has been very little seen and much less frequently heard in or about the Capitol. In the year 1904 Mr. HEARST offered himself to the people of this Republic as a candidate for the Presidential nomination. He secured a considerable number of delegates in several States, and it is generally believed that he spent a great deal of money in getting them. The proceedings of the Democratic Convention were not affected or influenced by Mr. HEARST and his delegates. He has organized and sustained a Hearst Municipal Ownership League, and that constitutes his chief relation to municipal affairs. In the social and business life of the city he is unknown.

That such a man should aspire to be the Mayor of such a city, that any organization should ask even a moderately intelligent electorate to put Mr. WILLIAM R. HEARST in charge of the municipal business, might well excite astonishment. We think astonishment should give way to satisfaction—very great satisfaction. Mr. HEARST is the proper leader of the municipal ownership cause. If the word logical may be used in speaking of such a Socialistic foray we should say that Mr. HEARST was the logical candidate. Ex-Senator FORD and Judge SEABURY have studied municipal ownership theories much more diligently than Mr. HEARST; they could expound the faith for hours before audiences the sight of which would make Mr. HEARST seek a means of escape. But Mr. HEARST has paid the bills of the league's propaganda, and he is entitled to this honor.

From the public point of view it is well that the question should be submitted not only on its own merits, but on the merits of Mr. HEARST, the chief agitator in that field of reform. The community ought to know how large a following such a class and such a candidate can get in this town. Mr. HENRY GEORGE, with whose Mayoralty candidacy the putting forward of Mr. HEARST has been compared, was a man of high character and perfect sincerity. Moreover, he was a student and thinker. His theories broke down under competent examination, but they were presented with great power and skill, and they captivated many minds. When his nomination was imminent sober-minded men in this city were of the opinion that property and order ought to issue a direct challenge to the Socialistic sentiment, and in order that the issue might be squarely made they advocated the nomination of Mr. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT as Mr. GEORGE'S opponent. Mr. GEORGE received 68,000 votes; he was beaten by Mr. HEWITT, but he had more votes than Mr. ROOSEVELT, the Republican nominee.

It will not be necessary this year to reply to the nomination of Mr. HEARST by the nomination of a millionaire candidate. Mayor MCCLELLAN will serve the purpose perfectly well. If the charge is made against Mr. HEARST that he is running for Mayor purely for advertising purposes, no very effective denial can be made. That charge could not be made against Mr. GEORGE. Mr. BRYAN was described as "ambitious, unsteady, unsafe." That characterization falls so far short of adequately describing Mr. HEARST that it seems almost flattery to use it. His character fits his cause, so that when the returns are in we shall have the public measure of them both, given in circumstances of great fairness and justice. He will get some votes—not many as compared with the immense total. The advocates of municipal ownership and operation will then get their bearings and be able to determine whether it is worth while to keep up the agitation.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S GREAT SERVICE.

There is one service rendered by Mr. ROOSEVELT in these latter days which has not received the appreciation due to it, and which in its ultimate effect may well be compared with any other in his notable career. It is the ban he has put on the campaign of the Republican machine in Philadelphia, the refusal directly or indirectly to recognize it in his capacity of National head of his party, and the absolute withdrawal from it of any countenance on the part of his Administration. The firmness and the significance of his attitude are indicated in the action of Mr. ROOT, now Secretary of State; in the position taken by Vice President FAIRBANKS, and by Senator KNOX, and, finally, in the reluctant cancellation of his engagement to speak by Senator FORAKER. Though the last-named gentleman protests that he is not influenced by what the Administration has done or declined to do, he recognizes plainly that it will not do to throw the cloak of the National party around the Philadelphia ring. That would not have been so plain to him had it not been for the course that the President has taken.

It will be noted that the course of the President is not necessarily based on the theory that local politics should be entirely independent of National politics. Probably he does not hold that theory and has not essentially changed his views since he stood for Mayor in this city against Mr. HEWITT. But he does hold that National politics should not be mixed up with rascality in local politics, that honest Republicans should not hesitate to vote down dishonest men, even though they are regular in the last degree. That is a sound idea, and if it can be applied with consistency and courage it will be a great protection to our cities, a strong check on thievery and corruption, an immense help to the improvement of our cities in every way, material as well as moral. It is a principle that should, of course, prevail just as much with one party as with the other, but it has a certain importance in the Republican Party, because that party rests on the voters' conception of their business interests. The scamps in Philadelphia have won many a victory through the aid of men scared about the tariff. The confusing influence of this peculiar doctrine makes the grip of the machine tighter and the conduct of its managers more reckless. It is a solid and splendid service on the part of the President to loosen that grip and refuse the sanction of the National party leaders to that conduct.

This policy on the part of the President tends also to drive the party machine into the open, and that of itself would do away with a lot of its power for mischief. It must win the support of the members of the party for nominations fairly discussed and submitted to the opinion of the party; it cannot impose its creatures, chosen in secret and controlled in secret. In the Executive Committee of the Thirty-eighth Ward in Philadelphia, this week, the majority threw over the machine ticket and indorsed the city ticket as one which represents Republicans chosen by the people in convention assembled, which ticket has been openly indorsed by the Republican Mayor of the greatest Republican city in the Union; has practically been indorsed by the Republican Secretary of State of the United States, and represents the type of men and policy which the Republican President of the United States is so thoroughly committed to.

That is the literal and logical application of the principle on which the President is acting. It opens up possibilities of immense improvement.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

The political position of Mr. JEROME is a peculiar one. He has behind him to-day the four thousand petitioners for his independent nomination; he will have the support of the Citizens' Union, the precise strength of which has never been tested. He is sure to be opposed by the Hearst Democrats, who would not support him if he could guarantee them the millennial reign of municipal ownership and operation within thirty days of his election. The Republican organization may or may not nominate him, and the same is true of Tammany. It will depend in each case on the leaders' calculation of ultimate party advantage.

It will be a great pity and it will be a shame if Mr. JEROME'S services cannot be secured for another term, partly because he is a very capable and honorable official, and also because he stands at this juncture as the sole representative of public as contrasted with private or partisan interests. As such he does not commend himself to either Tammany or the Republicans, but as such, also, either organization would gain credit from him as a candidate. His course has been marked by dignity and independence, and as he will make no sacrifices of these to secure a nomination, so his acceptance by either organization would raise it in public estimation. It remains to be seen how far this consideration will have influence.

FACTS, FEARS, AND COUNSEL.

Mr. VANDERLIP is a gentleman who speaks seldom and only when he has something to say. And there are more than personal reasons why he should be listened to. His connections are such that his information is as good as his judgment, and there are not a few in Wall Street who care more for information than for judgment. His remarks therefore will be read between the lines for inference as to what action those should take who wish to follow well-informed opinion. This is a pity. Imitation is one of the worst vices and dangers of Wall Street, and is a chief source of that sheeplike action which breeds danger where none may exist. Independence of action, original inference from facts, is not an infallible road to wealth, but it is as good as any advice which can be given. "Buy when the herd is selling; sell when the herd is buying," was a maxim of the banker who found success by not seeking to sell at the top, nor to buy at the bottom.

Mr. VANDERLIP'S remarks therefore ought to be pondered rather for their well-informed and judicious account of conditions than for tips as to how the market will act. In this respect there is a marked distinction between Mr. VANDERLIP'S present remarks and the well-remembered address which preceded the violent fall from which prices have recently recovered. Then Mr. VANDERLIP described conditions and marshaled facts to show that the situation was dangerous. Neither Mr. VANDERLIP nor Mr. SHAW now sounds any such note. Fancy can hardly paint an economic picture in brighter colors than they use. Mr. SHAW particularly arrays his figures with an artistic skill which warms even a torpid imagination. As already remarked, Mr. VANDERLIP'S remarks are characterized by a comparative deficiency of statistics, results being stated rather than the process by which the results are reached. The results stated are good enough, so good, in fact, that Mr. VANDERLIP feels compelled to utter a final word of caution and praise of conservatism.

It is as impossible to dissent from his caution as it would be to quarrel with his statement of facts. Who could seriously argue that times are ever good enough to cast caution to the winds, or that speculative commitments should ever be assumed which would cause embarrassment in case of altered conditions? Who would argue in opposition to Mr. VANDERLIP that there is ever a time for laxness in any of the forms of business prudence and conservatism? Wall Street jumped to the conclusion that things must take a turn for the worse because they cannot improve upon Mr. VANDERLIP'S outline. It may be so, but Wall Street's thinking so will not make it so. Those who want the highest testimony to the excellence of present conditions can find them stated by both Mr. SHAW and Mr. VANDERLIP. There is no law against drawing doleful inferences. Bulls and bears are about equally liable to be mistaken, but bulls have the most fun when they are wrong, anyway.

CIVILIZING FOOTBALL.

It is immensely characteristic of the superabundant vitality of the President that, just at this time, when the ordinary work of his office might tax any man's faculties, he should have energy to spare to call a council at the White House on football. Of course the game can never be reduced to the safety of "checkers," according to the ancient gibe of the Yale rough to the gentleman from Harvard. Accidents will doubtless continue to occur in the best-regulated contests. Perfectly casual collisions may do bodily harm. The chances of these must be taken in this as in all other manly sports. But the game should be regulated so as to reduce the chances to a minimum. And willful "dirty play," such as disgraced the game the other day between Columbia and Wesleyan, should result in the immediate discipline of the offender. The ruffian in that case should have been handed over to the police for an assault with intent to do bodily harm, which he evidently had committed, and which he had no more excuse for committing on a player than on a bystander.

It is maintained, by those British missionaries of a gentler football who have now arrived on these shores, that the American game is needlessly rough and dangerous, and they have come to commend to us the "Association game," which is assumed to soften the manners nor suffer to be ferocious. That is not wholly the British opinion. In fact, it is a British saying that in the Rugby game you kick the ball, in the Association game you kick the man if you cannot kick the ball, while in the Irish game you kick the ball if you cannot kick the man. But if the game under the distinguished patronage of Sir ALFRED HARMSWORTH has advantages over the game under the still more distinguished patronage of the President of the United States, which can be secured without losing the interest of the contest or lessening the skill it requires, by all means it is to be expected that the President's council of experts will commend those advantages for adoption in the American game.

"PENNY" POSTAGE.

A good many years ago a magazine writer, in a "Study of an Old Southern Borough," illustrated the temper of its inhabitants by saying that they were always speculating on what would happen if "they," meaning Northerners, should come down into the region and undertake to develop its latent resources.

The suggestion from London that if the President of the United States will take the initiative in proposing an international postage of a "penny" he will probably receive warm British support somehow looks like a similar confession of impotency or decadence. What is the matter with Mr. HUNEKER HEATON, to whom cheap postage is the breath of his nostrils? Whether Great Britain be or be not the country in the world which pays the most foreign postage, obviously she is the country in the world which has the most vital interest in foreign correspondence. And moreover, about the very British expression of "penny postage," there lurks an insular, not a cosmopolitan, air. No other nation that we know of has a coin, or monetary unit, corresponding to the British penny. The British penny corresponds to two American cents, not to one. You cannot get anything in this country for a cent, excepting, to be sure, what some of our too fond admirers describe as the best newspaper in it. You can, it is true, get a domestic postage stamp for two cents, the equivalent of the British penny. But our practically least pecuniary unit is the nickel, for which you can already go up to the extremity of Bronx Borough, if you will, or of Brooklyn Borough, if you must, and for which you can already send a letter to the remotest confines of the globe that are included in the Postal Union.

Of course, we appreciate the National compliment conveyed in the belief that the man who made peace between Russia and Japan can do anything. But why should he do this thing? Americans are not groaning and travailing under the tyranny of the five-cent foreign stamp. It is one of the least of their troubles. Let the Britons who groan under it work out their own deliverance, to the extent of at least asking for a two-cent instead of a five-cent stamp. Or let them reform and rationalize their antiquated and absurd currency system so that the "penny," which enchains their imaginations and the imaginations of nobody else, shall cease to dominate their international conceptions.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Edgar Allan Poe and the Hall of Fame.

Many of the Southern papers are making alternate moan and howl because EDGAR ALLAN POE has twice been rejected of those who decide the not very important question of admittance to a so-called Hall of Fame that happened to be erected in this city, but has not yet happened really to attract the city's attention. We do not pretend to know very much about this curious and gently interesting edifice, and we admit that we know still less about the mental processes by which one name is inscribed there and another rejected, but one thing seems to be pretty plain, and that is the fact that the names selected for honor by the eminent and amiable little group of balloters win their place because the men and women who wore them are deemed worthy of fame by the members of the group, while little or no regard is paid to the question whether this or that man is or is not famous. Nobody who asked that question in the case of POE could hesitate for an instant about making an affirmative answer under any definition of "fame" that we know of. There would be no exaggeration we think in saying that POE is the most famous poet, and among the most famous dozen men, that all the Americas have yet produced. His work made the world-appeal, and the reply is no more to be ignored or denied or argued against than any other phenomenon that is a matter of observation, not of judgment. Names not famous have been inscribed in this Hall of Fame, and they remain—not famous. POE'S name is not written there, and its glory is not in the slightest degree obscured. No harm had been done in the one case or the other, and it betrays a lack both of sense and of humor to get angry at either the inclusions or the exclusions. The very nice people who erected this building and are managing it have the best of rights to ask some other people to select names with which to decorate its walls and to do the selecting after a plan which leads to an expression of their personal opinions as to who has and has not earned fame—as to who should and should not be famous. When the rest of us agree with them it's all right; when the rest of us disagree with them, that's all right too, and supplies an interesting subject for discussion into the bargain. Why alternate moans and howls? POE, and COOPER as well, will be famous centuries after many of the worthies who have been dragged out of honest obscurity by these well-intentioned laudators have gently slipped back into it, and if we cannot all be happy in the meantime, we should at least be as happy as we can, and never, never, never interfere with the innocent sports and pleasures of our neighbors.

Not "a Class in Vivisection."

An unfortunate wording of one of our Chicago dispatches yesterday made it probable that a certain small but extremely vociferous band will be able to base a lot of nonsensical horror on a clipping from THE TIMES—which, as it happens, that particular band would be especially glad to do. "Eight women students," ran the dispatch, "have entered a large class in vivisection which will be taught this quarter at the University of Chicago," and then it went on to tell about the price of dogs and cats and the names of the instructors. Now, of course, there will be no "class in vivisection" in the University of Chicago, either this quarter or any other quarter. Vivisection, so far as we are aware, does not appear on the curriculum of any educational institution, and we never heard that it was an object of direct study in any part of the world. What there will be, no doubt, is a class in physiology or some related study, and the students, as they necessarily must if they would learn to the best advantage and are serious in the desire to do so, will observe the revelations made by skilled vivisectors and take some little part in the performance of that sort of work. This is a very different thing from a "class in vivisection." It is not exactly a pleasant thing to think of, apart from its motives and its results, but we have not ourselves ever seen any necessity, or even any excuse, for so thinking of it. Consequently we have always been able to view with entire calmness the properly conducted experiments on living animals that are made by competent men, and would regret if anything printed in THE TIMES supplied ammunition to the misguided sentimentalists who have set themselves against the whole consensus of medical authority and are endeavoring, with too much success in some quarters, to impose deplorable restrictions upon the extension of knowledge and the progress of the healing art.

JUST A FRIENDLY LETTER

From a Man Who Began Reading The Times with Its First Issue.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Glancing over the exchanges in the office of The Journal recently, I found a copy of THE TIMES, and was gratified as I read that portion devoted to "correspondents," for it evidenced a broad culture and liberal thought. I recall a remark credited to Mr. Raymond, at that time your editor. It was to the effect "that in any political article written by him he felt that much might be said on the other side."

The same spirit is indicated in the willingness to consider both sides of any question by those who filled the space devoted to correspondents. When I was younger than now, (born 1830,) I was living in a boarding house in Beekman Street, near the "Old Saint George's Church." It was in the early fifties. One morning there was thrown in to us the first copy of THE TIMES. It bore the same respectable look as it does to this day, but it was then a stranger and an interloper; the public want was supplied by The Tribune, The Herald, and The Sun.
